PREFACE.

In placing the present volume in the hands of students of the German language, we cannot refrain from impressing upon their minds the incalculable importance of a thorough study of the grammar. We state the result of our long and undivided attention to this branch of education, when we say, that every endcavour to teach or learn German, in which the grammar does not hold the principal place, must necessarily prove an unsatisfactory, if not unsuccessful, attempt. The complaint which is not unfrequently made, that the German is a difficult language, is generally occasioned by an imperfect knowledge of the theory upon which it is constructed. Every intelligent teacher, we believe, will bear us out in saying, that any student of moderate abilities can in a comparatively short time acquire a correct and thorough knowledge of German, if he be taught by a sound and well-arranged system of grammar; whereas even the most cursory glance at the peculiar character of the language, must convince every unprejudiced mind of the absurdity of expecting the same result from a method which either ignores the theory altogether, or assigns to it a secondary place.

For the system adopted in the present treatise, we have the authority of the best German grammarians, whose names in themselves vouch for its soundness and stability. We have availed ourselves of the works of Grimm, Becker, Heyse, Kellner, and others, and have added from our own experience whatever seemed best fitted to lead the student to a full understanding of the modern views of grammar applied to the German tongue.

The rules have been stated with all the clearness and precision we could command; and wherever any phenomena of the language appeared to require further illustration, the pupil's attention has been directed to the usage of the English language, or to such forms of the older language of Germany, as seem calculated to throw light upon its present state. In connection with the rules, German examples are given throughout, most of which have been selected from the best authors. The names of the latter are given in full after every example, with the exception of the following, in the case of whom, on account of their frequent occurrence, abbreviations have been employed; namely—B. stands for Bible; G. for Goethe; Sch. for Schiller; Kr. for F. A. Krummacher; U. for Uhland; Prov. for Proverb. A larger space than usual has been allotted to the rules on pronunciation and on the formation of words. A sufficient number of easy exercises for translation into German are diffused through the whole grammar. They are of an entirely practical character, but at the same time stand in strict connection with the rules to which they are subjoined.

INTRODUCTION.

THE German language belongs to the Teutonic family of the great Indo-European stock, and stands forth among the innumerable languages now spoken as one of the oldest, purest, and noblest, surpassing most of its neighbours in power as well as in richness and flexibility. The history of its development, from its earliest traces down to the present time, comprises a period of not less than two thousand years. The first accounts of ancient Germany and the primitive condition of its people we derive from Roman writers, who inform us that the German was the original language of an ancient and wide-spread people, which consisted of many tribes. This people at a very early period migrated from Asia, and gradually spread over the northern and central parts of Europe. The tribes were called by different names. Each had its own chief, and they were not only independent of each other, but often lived in open hostility. The name. however, which they bore in common-namely, deutsch, or, in its complete form, deutisch—refers to their common origin, and represents them as members or parts of one people. For the word deutsch (in Gothic thiudisko, in old High-German diutisc, in Angle-Saxon theo'disc) is correctly derived from the Gothic word thinda (in old High-German diot, in Anglo-Saxon theo'd)—that is, 'people,' the Latin gens—and therefore originally signifies 'belonging to the people, the Latin gentilis. The Romans called them Germani—that is, 'men-at-arms, or warriors'—the name having respect to the wars in which the two nations were repeatedly engaged, and during which the Germans, especially the tribes . living on the Rhine and Danube, made themselves dreaded by their hostile neighbours. The term deutsch is now only applied to that portion of the Teutonic race which inhabits the continent of Europe, including the Anglo-Saxon branch; whilst the term germanisch refers not only to the people properly called deutsch, but also to the inhabitants of the Scandinavian islands and peninsulas.

The oldest of all the known languages of the Germanic or Teutonic family was the Gothic, but all the knowledge we now possess of that ancient language is derived from a single source—namely, some considerable fragments of the translation of the Bible by Bishop Ulfilas, who lived in the fourth century. As a spoken language, the Gothic is extinct. The living branches of this extensive family are comprised under the following three stronger.—

1. The Scandinarian languages, comprising the Swedish, Danish, and Norwegian, which have sprung from the old Norse, a language still spoken in Iceland.

2. The Low-German languages, comprising the various dialects of the 'Plattdeutsch' (that is, Low-German in a limited sense), spoken in the 'flat' parts of Northern Germany, its oldest form being the old Saxon; the Dutch spoken in Holland; the Frisian, now all but extinct; and the Anglo-Saxon, which forms the principal element of the English tongue.

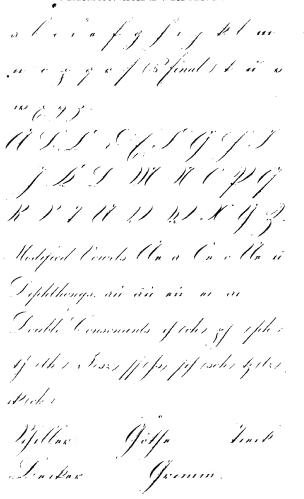

3. The High-German languages, comprising the various dialects of Southern Germany and the German portion of Switzerland, especially the Franconian, Suabian, and Bavaro-Austrian.

The High-German of the earlier ages—that is, of the time before and after the reign of Charlemagne, down to the eleventh century-embracing chiefly the development of the Franconian dialect, now bears the name of the 'old High-German language' (die althochdeutsche Sprache); whilst that of the subsequent three conturies, when the Suabian dialect was predominant, is distinguished by the name of the 'middle High-German language' (die mittelhochdeutsche Sprache). Through the translation of the Bible and other writings of Luther, as well as through the influence of the Reformation generally, the 'new High-German language' (die neuhochdeutsche Sprache) became, and has ever since remained. the written and spoken language of the educated people of all the countries constituting the German confederation; while the various dialects both of the Low and High-German have either altogether died away, or are employed in certain localities merely as a means of oral communication among the lower classes. Although the principal ingredient of the so-called new High-German is to be found in the High-German, yet it would be erroneous to suppose it to be the dialect of some particular locality. * Being the language of the educated, it differs from any peculiar dialect spoken in any particular part of the country; but in becoming the instrument both of written and oral intercourse between all the educated of all Germany, it received more or less of the peculiarities of all dialects.

It is more than probable that the ancient Germans were acquainted with the runic letters of the Scandinavians; it would appear, however, that the people in their primitive condition found little occasion to make use of them. In the Gothic and old High-German periods, the Roman letters were used; they assumed, however, in the hands of the monks, who during the middle ages were largely employed in the copying of manuscripts, those angular and corrupt shapes known in English by the name of 'black letter.' This mode of writing has been generally adopted since the regeneration of German poetry in the twelftherentury, and has given rise to that peculiar kind of print to which the Germans still adhere. The letters used in German handwriting were originally the same as those used in print, but have assumed a somewhat simplified form.

Note.

The $ final is substituted for the so-called long f at the end of a syllable only, as in bas, bes, les-bar.

§ 2. Besides the simple letters of the alphabet, the following compound letters are employed:—

As substitutes for simple sounds-ch = ch tsay-hah; the guttural ch.

ph = ph pay-hah; sounds like f.

fch = sch css-tsay-hah; sounds like sh.

th = th tay-hah; sounds like sh.

As substitutes for double consonants-

 $\begin{array}{lll} \textbf{df} & = \text{ck} & \text{tsay-kah} \text{ ; is used for double } \textbf{f}. \\ \textbf{g} & = \text{sz} & \text{ess-tset ; is used for double } \textbf{f}. \\ \textbf{g} & = \text{tz} & \text{tay-tset ; is used for double } \textbf{g}. \end{array}$

PRONUNCIATION AND ORTHOGRAPHY.

I. VOWELS.

§ 3. The pure vowels are \mathfrak{a} , \mathfrak{e} , \mathfrak{i} , \mathfrak{o} , \mathfrak{u} . Of these the primary are \mathfrak{a} , \mathfrak{i} , \mathfrak{u} ; the other two are of a secondary nature, the sound of \mathfrak{e} being between \mathfrak{i} and \mathfrak{a} , and the sound of \mathfrak{o} between \mathfrak{a} and \mathfrak{u} . The five pure vowels are pronounced thus—a sounds like the pure Italian a in 'father.'

e sounds like a in 'gate,' or e in 'get.'

i sounds like ee in 'feel,' or i in 'fill.'

p sounds like o in 'shore,' or o in 'short.'

u sounds like oo in 'fool,' or u in 'full,'

 \mathfrak{y} (ypsilon) is a foreign vowel, and its use is almost confined to words of Greek origin; it has the sound of the modified \mathfrak{u} . (§ 4.)

Every vowel has, according to circumstances, either a long or a short sound—that is, its pronunciation may occupy a longer or shorter portion of time.* Beyond this, the position of a vowel does not mrterially affect its pronunciation.

EXAMPLES:—a long in fam, gar, bat; short in Kamm, Mann, balb.

e long in reben, ftehen, geben; short in retten, ftellen, gesten.

^{*} In Prosody, it is the accent which determines the quantity of syllables, not the natural length or shortness of vowels.

i long in mir, dir, Mine; short in mit, ftill, Birt.

o long in Ton, Strom, loben; short in Tonne, Gott, Form.

u long in du, gut, Hut; short in dumm, Gunst, Hund.

y long in Hybra, Polyp, Usyl; short in Myrte, Ibylle, System.

§ 4. Three of the pure vowels—namely, a, v, u—admit of being softened or modified by a change of their original sounds. The vowels so changed are termed modified vowels (in German, Umlaute). The modification is marked by e put after the letter, when it is a capital, and by e, or two little strokes or dots above it, when it is a small letter.

We, a sounds like e in 'get,' or like the French e in 'père.' De, a sounds like the French eu in 'peu.'

lle, it sounds like the French u in 'du,' 'fus.'

The modified vowels are either long or short, but the nature of the sound of each remains the same under all circumstances.

Examples :-- a long in fame, Bar Raber ; short in Kamme, Manner, fault.

ö long in Tone, Strome, Del; short in Gotter, konnen, Derter.

u long in fur, Butc, Nebel; short in Fürst, Butte, füllen.

Notes.

1. For the sounds of the modified c and u, there are no equivalents in English; but the student may acquire the correct pronunciation of ō by trying to pronounce e with contracted or rounded lips; and that of ū by trying to pronounce i in a similar manner.

2. The modification takes place especially when a stem, having one of the vowels a, o, or u, takes a derivative or inflectional termination which contains i or c; e.g.—Samm, comb, plural Ramme, combs; lang, long, comparative langer, longer; Ton, sound, plural Tône, sounds; Gunft, favour, adjective gunftig, favourable.

§ 5. A vowel is long when not followed by any consonant, or by one consonant only; it is short when followed by a double consonant, or by two consonants (frequently a liquid and a mute) originally belonging to the same syllable.

Examples:—With a long vowel—bu, mir, Graf, Brob, Blut, Baber, strebeen, sobet. With a short vowel—Ball, Narr, fromm, Stoff, Kraft, falt, Gast, Hand, fremd, Golb, Bander, sterbeen, findeen.

Notes

1. Some pronouns, prepositions, and other words incapable of inflection, form an exception to this rule; c.g.—e8, ta8, re8, wa8, man, in, an, wen, um, mit, bis, ab, ob, weg. In like manner bin, (I) am, bat, (he) has. Unaccented syllables, as be, ge, er, ver, zer, en, em, then, &c., are also excepted.

2. The double consonants $\tilde{\psi}$ and $\theta$ at the end of a syllable, leave it uncertain whether the preceding vowel is long or short.

3. The following words have a long vowel, although followed by two consonants:--

Mrt. kind. Mont, moon. Treft, consolation. Bart, beard. Dbft, fruit. Boat, bailiff. Grec, earth. Papft, pope. Warze, wart. Harz, rosin. Piert, horse. werten, to become. Serv, hearth. Brobft, prebendary. werth, worth. Berbe, flock. Schwert, sword. wiift, waste. Rrcbs. crab. Mage, maid-servant. tort, dead. gart, tender.

This anomaly is accounted for, in some instances at least, by the circumstance, that a vowel is dropped between the two consonants.

- § 6. In a great number of words, orthography employs particular signs to shew that a vowel is long.
- 1. Three of the pure vowels can be doubled—namely, a, e, and o.

EXAMPLES:-- Mal, Baar, Saar, Staat; Icer, Meer, Beet, Mee; Moor, Look, Boot.

Note.

When two vowels belong to different syllables, they are pronounced separately, as in Kanasan, besenben, Bosologie.

2. The vowel i is lengthened by a being put after it.

EXAMPLES :- bie, nic, tief, Bier, Brief, Lieb.

In foreign words, it is pronounced as two separate vowels when the syllable has not the accent—as in Kanu'tie, Sipto'rie, Ita'tien, Spa'nien, Ma'gier. When the syllable has the accent, the rule is adhered to—as in Farmonie', Afternemie'. 'But in the proper names Sephie and Marie, the two vowels are pronounced separately.

3. All vowels, whether pure or modified, are long when followed by $\mathbf{h}$, provided the $\mathbf{h}$ belongs to the same syllable. The $\mathbf{h}$ in such cases is mute.

Examples :- Bahn, lahm, mehr, lehren, ihm, Ohr, Stohl, Ruhm, Uhr, Kähne, Göble, fühn.

PRONUNCIATION AND ORTHOGRAPHY.

II. DIPHTHONGS.

§ 7. The German language has five diphthongs—namely, et, at, au, eu, au, the latter being the modified au, et is pronounced like the English i in 'fine,' or y in 'my.' at has nearly the same sound as ct. au is pronounced nearly as the English ou, eu and au are both pronounced like oi in 'point.'

All diphthongs are long.

Examples:—mein, rein, fein, breit; Main, Rain, Sain; laut, braun, blau, Traum; neu, treu, Freude, heute; Träume, Bänme, Hänfer, Säute.

Note.

The diphthong of (pronounced like the English oi) occurs only in a very few words, mostly proper names. The occasional use of cy and ay, in place of ci and ai, is now considered as antiquated.

III. CONSONANTS.

§ 8. It must be observed here, as a general rule, that the German language has no silent letters. The pronunciation, therefore, of such words as Gnate, Knate, Ffalm, Falme, Lidyt, Madyt, &c., differs from the pronunciation of similar words in English, inasmuch as no consonant is passed over.

The only exception to this rule is the letter \mathfrak{h} . Besides the cases already noticed (\S 6, 3), it is silent after \mathfrak{t} , when belonging to the same syllable; \mathfrak{th} is accordingly pronounced like \mathfrak{t} , there being no sound in German like the English \mathfrak{th} . In such a position, however, the vowel preceding \mathfrak{th} is long.

Examples:—roth, Hath, Muth, Noth, Loth.

§ 9. The consonants are divided, according to the organs by which they are articulated—the throat, tongue, and lips—into gutturals, linguals, and labials; and, according to the degree of their more or less perfect articulation, into semiconsonants or spirants (that is, breathing-sounds), liquids, and mutes. The mutes are subdivided, according to the lesser or greater intensity with which they are uttered, into soft, hard, and aspirate. This classification is exhibited in the following table:—

	GUTTURALS.	LINGUALS.	LABIALS.
1. Semi-Consonants,	í	f, fct)	שו
2. Liquids,	r	ί, π	m
3. Mutes— a. Soft, b. Hard, c. Aspirate,	g f (c), q d	t (ß, 3, c) wanting	b p f, v (ph)

Notes.

1. The spirant h, being formed by the mere breath, does not belong to any of the articulating organs in particular. It is pronounced as in English, except in those cases which have previously been adverted to.

2. The letters f (6), ff, fi, 3, fth, are also called sibilants, from the hissing nature of their sounds.

1. GUTTURALS.

§ 10. I (yot) has the sound of the English y in 'yes.' Examples:—ja, Jahr, je, jeder, Januner, Jubel.

In words of French origin, j is pronounced as in that language—namely, like a soft sh, as Yournal, Jaloufic.

 \S 11. \Re is pronounced with greater force and roughness than in English.

Examples :- Rabe, Bier, hier, hart, braun, brennen.

§ 12. ⑤ commonly sounds like the English g in 'give.' When it stands at the end of a word or syllable, and is preceded by a, \mathfrak{o} , \mathfrak{n} , or $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{u}$, its sound approaches, but is not quite so strong, as that of ch in the Scotch word 'loch.' When at the end of a word or syllable, and preceded by \mathfrak{e} , \mathfrak{i} , \mathfrak{d} , \mathfrak{i} , \mathfrak{e} , \mathfrak{i} , $\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{i}$, $\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{i}$, \mathfrak{i} , $\mathfrak{o}\mathfrak{i}$, \mathfrak{i}

Examples:—gut, Gott, groß, Garten; Tag, bog, flug; Steg, Krieg, Teig, leug-nen, trüg-lich; Berg, Burg, arg, karg, Talg.

When a word of this nature increases by inflection, so that g remains no longer the final letter, but becomes the first letter of the next syllable, its pronunciation inclines towards that of g in 'give,' but without entirely losing the peculiar sound of ch or g respectively.

EXAMPLES :- Xa=ge, Bo=gen, flu=ge; Ste=ge, Krie=ges, beu-gen; Ber=ge, Bur=gen, Tal=ges.

When at the end of a word, and preceded by n, g preserves its original sound of g in 'give,' but coalesces into one sound with n (as ng in 'long' or 'ring') when the word increases by inflection.

Examples :- lang, Ring, jung ; langer, Ringe, junger.

In some words taken from the French, g is pronounced as in that language—namely, like a soft sh; e.g.—Genie, geniren, obligirt, Loge, logiren.

§ 13. A is pronounced as in English; if is employed for a double f.

The consonant q occurs only in very few German words, and is always followed by the vowel u. The two joined together are pronounced nearly like fiv.

Examples :- Dual, qualen, Qualm, Quaft, quer, Quelle.

§ 14. The aspirate guttural \mathfrak{G} has the two different sounds of ch in 'loch,' and of y in 'yes' (or rather a little stronger), under circumstances similar to those mentioned above with regard to the letter \mathfrak{g} ; for it has the pronunciation of ch, when preceded by \mathfrak{a} , \mathfrak{o} , \mathfrak{u} , or \mathfrak{au} ; and that of y (or somewhat stronger), when preceded by any of the other vowels or diphthongs, or by \mathfrak{r} , \mathfrak{f} , \mathfrak{n} .

Examples:—Dady, nach, machen, Nacht, boch, Coch, kochen, Tuch, Buch, auch, Brauch, Taucher; ich, recht, brechen, rächen, richen, reich, gleich, euch, leuchten, Licht, nicht, nächtlich; burch, Furcht, fürchten, Dolch, Kelch, manch.

When, in words of Greek extraction, \mathfrak{G} occurs as initial before \mathfrak{a} , \mathfrak{o} , \mathfrak{u} , or a consonant, it is (improperly) pronounced like \mathfrak{k} ; but it has the soft sound resembling (though stronger than) that of y in 'yes' before \mathfrak{i} or \mathfrak{c} .

Examples :- Charafter, Chor, Chrift, Chronif; Chemie, Chirurg, Chiliaft.

In words originally French, \mathfrak{A} is pronounced as in that language—namely, like the English \mathfrak{sh} .

EXAMPLES:-Chef, Chiffre, Chicane, Charlotte, Charade, Charpie, Chauffee.

In words originally German, \mathfrak{A} is pronounced like \mathfrak{f} only before $\mathfrak{f}(\mathfrak{F})$, provided the \mathfrak{f} forms part of the stem. In words of this description, x is the equivalent in English of the German $\mathfrak{A}\mathfrak{F}$.

Examples:—Dah, ox; Fuch, fox; Buch, box-wood; Buch, a box; sch, six; Flach, flax; Dach, badger; Bach, wax; wachen, to wax; Bechsel, change. Compare, for example, Dach, 'badger,' with Dach, a contraction for Dach, 'of a roof;' or wachsen, 'to grow' (wach being the stem of the word), with wach-sam, 'watchful' (derived from wachen, to watch.)

Note.

2. LINGUALS.

§ 15. The sound of \mathfrak{f} is soft, and resembles that of the English z in 'zone,' 'zeal,' or s in 'desire,' 'bosom,' except at the end of words or syllables, when it is pronounced harder, so long as it remains the final letter.

EXAMPLES:—Soft in Sohn, Sonne, sagen, Rose, Busen, reisen; harder in bas, bis, Glas, Kreis, Saus; but soft again in the inflected forms Gläser, Kreise, Säuser.

§ 16. The fi and ff are pronounced like ss in English. The ff is used only after a short vowel, fi after a long vowel or a diphthong. At the end of a word, however, orthography forbids the use of ff, even though a short vowel precede.

Examples:—Short vowels in essen, lassen, mussen; long in reißen, grüßen, sließen, Muße. Long in Gruß, Maß, ließ; short in daß, Taß, muß, Nuß, Fluß.

§ 17. The compound consonant [4] indicates a simple sound—namely, that of the English sh; its parts, therefore, cannot be separated. At the beginning of a word, [ch is frequently followed by one of the consonants I, m, n, r, w, but must even then have its full sound.

Examples :—rafch, frisch, Tisch, schon, Schaf, Schiff, englisch; Schlitten, schmelzen, Schnee, schreiben, Schwan.

Note.

It should be observed, that when & (final) concludes a syllable, and & begins the next (as in Research, little rose; Mauschen, little mouse), & and & must be pronounced separately.

§ 18. The letters I, \mathfrak{n} , and \mathfrak{b} are pronounced as in English. When \mathfrak{b} is the final consonant, its sound inclines towards that of \mathfrak{t} ; but it resumes its natural softness when the word increases by inflection.

Examples:—Hard in Sand, bald, Bad, Tod; soft in Sände, baldig, Baber, Todes.

§ 19. \mathfrak{T} is always pronounced as in English, except before i with another vowel after it, in which position it sounds like the German 3.

Examples :- Nation, Batient, Bortion, Benetianer.

§ 20. 3 is a simple sign for a mixed sound—namely, ts; accordingly, its sound is much harder than that of the English z. After a short vowel, this made the substitute for a double z.

Examples :- zu, zehn, Zahl, zahm, Beit, Holz, Berz, Geiz; Sat, Blat, Blit, fiten, Kate, schwaten.

§ 21. (§ is pronounced like f before a, v, u, au, and before a consonant; but like z or English ts before c, i, ä, ö, ü, y. Its use is limited to words of foreign origin, whilst, in words originally German, its place is now supplied by f and z.

EXAMPLES :- Canbibat, Confistorium, Claudius, Acten ; Centrum, Cicero, civil, Cafar, Cylinder.

In French words, it has the sound of $\beta$, as in Sauce, forciren.

§ 22. ${\mathcal X}$ is pronounced like ${\mathfrak k}{\mathfrak k}$, of which two consonants it is composed.

Examples :- Urt, Tert, Bere

3. LABIALS.

§ 23. \mathfrak{W} sounds nearly like the English r, slightly inclining towards w.

EXAMPLES: - Bein, wo, wann, wie, Wind, will, wahr, Wolfe, Wolf, Bort, Baffer.

 \S 24. $\mathfrak B$ is pronounced like f in all originally German words, whilst in all words borrowed from the Latin or French languages, it has the sound of the English v or the German $\mathfrak w$.

Examples:—Like f in Bater, von, voll, Bolf, Bogel, vier, viel; like w in Benus, Abvocat, dividiren, November, Livrec.

§ 25. All the rest of the labial consonants—namely, \mathfrak{m} , \mathfrak{h} , \mathfrak{p} , $\mathfrak{f}(\mathfrak{ph})$ —are pronounced as in English.

B, at the end of a word or syllable, is pronounced harder than usual, almost like p; but when the word increases by inflection, the sound resumes its natural softness.

EXAMPLES:-Hard in lieb, Raub, ob; soft in lieber, Rauber, oben.

§ 26. In the pronunciation of pf, which is a stronger aspirate labial than the simple f, both letters, p and f, are heard, although they coalesce as nearly as possible into one sound. This compound consonant had its origin in the Gothic p, which letter still is its equivalent in the Low-German dialect, and in kindred languages; also in English.

EXAMPLES:—Pfund, pound; Pfand, pawn; Pfad, path; Bfeffer, pepper; Pflaume, plum; pfeisen, to pipe; pflanzen, to plant; Pflug, plough; stopfen, to stop; Tropfen, drop.

IV. ACCENTUATION.

§ 27. The rise and fall of the voice in reading, or the comparatively greater or less stress with which the syllables of a word, and the words of a sentence are uttered, is called Accentuation.

In a word of more than one syllable, a greater stress is naturally laid on one syllable than on another; and in a combination of words, one word is pronounced with greater force than another. For example, in the words Baune, bluhen, beschneiben, the syllables Bau, bluh, schnei, are pronounced with greater force than those which follow or precede them. In the sentences ber hund best, the dog barks; er trinst Wein, he drinks wine—a greater stress is laid on the words besset, Wein, than on those with which they are joined. This is called the grammatical accent (bergrammatische Lon), and tends not only to increase the euphony of the language, by imparting to it a melodious variety, but is, at the same time, the bond which exhibits to the ear and mind the logical unity of the syllables and words joined together.

What is generally termed emphasis (Rebeton), is essentially different from accent. Emphasis consists in the speaker's laying stress on some particular word or syllable, which may otherwise be of minor significance, but which, for rhetorical reasons, he desires to make emphatic. For example:—ber Name ift mir befannt, the name is known to me (but not the person); er n i m nt (Beld), he takes money (but he does not give any); ber Anabe ift night erzogen, fondern verzogen, the boy is not educated, but spoiled; die Zeitung liegt unter bem Lische, the newspaper lies under the table (not upon it).

Whilst grammatical accent is based upon fixed laws inherent in the nature or established by the usage of a language, emphasis depends more or less on the mind or intention of the speaker. Regarding the grammatical accent in the German language, the following general rules are commonly observed:—

§ 28. A syllable has, according to its logical importance, either the full accent, or a subordinate accent, or is unaccented. For example, in the word Laubschaften, the syllable Laub has the full accent, schaft has a subordinate accent, and the termination en is unaccented. In genügsam, contented, ge is unaccented, nüg has the full, and sam a subordinate accent.

§ 29. The Full Accent.—1. In every simple word of more than one syllable, the full accent or main stress is laid on the principal syllable—that is, on the syllable containing the stem—the stem being that part of the word from which the whole has been formed, by the prefixing and suffixing of syllables, and to which it can be reduced by being deprived of these. For example, lieb is the stem in lieben, Liebe, geliebt, verliebt, Liebling, lieblich, Lieblichfeit.

Note

The adjectives Ieben'tig, mahrhai'tig, Ieibhaf'tig, balfa'mijch, Luthe'rifch, have an anoundous accentuation. The general rule is likewise departed from in words having the suffix ci (e. g.—Spieterd', Sicherri', tie Aurfei'). In these the full accent is given to a derivative syllable, whilst the stem takes only a subordinate accent.

2. In compound words, the principal accent is laid on the determinative component. In compound substantives, adjectives, and verbs, the determinative component generally precedes, in other compound words it generally follows, the component which it tends to determine.

EXAMPLES:—Mird/hof, church-yard; (Schurts'tag, birthday; Reit'pferd, riding-horse; fee'frant, sea-sick; heim'fehren, to return home. But, on the other hand, woven', whereof; bamit', therewith; hinfort', henceforth; bergan', uphill.

3. In verbs compounded with separable prefixes, the prefix, in accordance with the preceding rule, has the principal accent. Verbs compounded with inseparable prefixes, on the contrary, retain the full accent on their radical syllable. The same rule is applicable to almost all substantives and adjectives derived from compound verbs.

Examples:—ans'geben, to give out; an'fangen, to begin; vor'schlagen, to propose; Uns'gabe, expense; Un'fang, beginning; Vor'schlag, proposal. But versteh'en, to understand; beschlie'sen, to resolve; entschei'den, to decide; Verstand', understanding; Beschluß', resolution; Entschei'dung, decision.

- 4. The last rule holds good also with regard to those compound verbs whose prefixes are, according to circumstances, either separable or inseparable, and likewise with regard to substantives and adjectives derived from them, with a few exceptions; as—Wiferfund, contradiction, from wiberspre'den, to contradict; Wiferfund, resistance, from wibersfte'hen, to resist; Un'terhalt, maintenance, from unterhal'ten, to maintain.
- § 30. The Subordinate Accent.—1. All derivative terminations, the vowel of which is not ϵ , have a subordinate accent, especially the following:—at, bar, haft, heit, icht, in, feit, Ici, Icin, Iich, Iing, niß, fal, fam, schaft, thum, ung, &c.

EXAMPLES: — Seimat, home; banfbar, grateful; glaubhaft, credible; Freiheit, freedom; Finfterniß, darkness; Schieffal, fate; Freunbschaft, friendship; Lefreiung, deliverance.

- 2. In compound words, in which the determinative component takes the principal accent, a secondary accent is given to the determined component; as—hof in Rirdy'hof, tranf in fee'frant, geh in and'geben, fang in an'fangen, &c.
- § 31. Unaccented Syllables.—1. The following derivative syllables, used as prefixes:—be, er, ent, emp, ver, zer, ge.

EXAMPLES:—berauben, to deprive; erhalten, to receive; entformmen, to escape; Entwurf, design; verstehen, to understand; gerreißen, to tear to pieces; Gewinn, gain.

2. All terminations (either derivative or inflectional) which have the vowel e, especially e, el, em, en, er, end, fel, then, &c.; also ig, gig, fig.

Examples:—Liche, love; Schlüffel, key; Athem, breath; fingen, to sing; Sanger, singer; fingend, singing; Rathfel, riddle; Baunchen, little tree; heilig, holy; vierzig, forty; breißig, thirty.

§ 32. The same general law which determines the accent in a combination of syllables, holds good also in a combination of words or a sentence—namely, the law, that the relative importance of a word decides the intensity of its tone. This matter, however, requires no further explanation here, as every one is in this respect guided by his own instinctive feeling.

v. FOREIGN WORDS.

- § 33. Through intercourse with neighbouring nations, many foreign words have found their way into the German language. To most of these the rules on accentuation stated in the preceding paragraphs are not applicable, because the languages from which they have been taken do not entirely follow the same logical law of accentuation as the German.
- § 34. A considerable number of words, however, derived partly from the Latin, partly from the Greek, have become so completely part of the German language, and so entirely accommodated themselves to its laws, both in form and accent, that it seems scarcely proper to classify them among foreign words. We mention here only a few as examples:—Sylbe, syllable, Greek syllabe, Latin syllaba; Krone, crown, Gr. korone, L. corona; Schet, sceptre, Gr. skeptron, L. sceptrum; Fabel, fable, L. fabula; Infel, island, L. insula; Fenster, window, L. fenestra; Körper, body, L. corpus; Kloster, cloister, L. claustrum; Fieber, fever, L. febris; Mönd, monk, L. monachus; Familie, family, L. familia.

§ 35. But, besides these, the German language has adopted from the Greek and Latin a very large number of words, which, although considered as naturalised, are still recognisable as foreign, both by their un-German form and accent. They are pronounced according to the German pronunciation of the ancient languages, and mostly retain their original accent, which in a very large number of them is on the last syllable, on account of the inflectional termination, which they originally had, being dropped.

Examples:—Matur', nature, Latin natura; Figur', figure, L. figura; February, L. Februarius; Nation', nation, L. natio, genitive nationis; Person', person, L. persona; Patient', patient, L. patiens, genitive patientis; Proving', province, L. provincia; Batron', patron, L. patronus; Majestat', majesty, L. majestas, genitive majestatis; Triumph', triumph, L. triumphus; Bibliothet', library, Greek bibliotheke; Planet', planet, Gr. planetes; Philosophic', philosophy, Gr. philosophia; religiös', religious, L. religiosus; absolute, absolute, L. absolutus; universal', universal, L. universalis; subtil', subtle, L. subtilis.

Note

In many words of this description, the accent, for the sake of analogy, is removed to the last syllable, although it was not there originally; e.g.—Symbol', Philosoph', Sermin', Barbar'

§ 36. In the accentuation of substantives ending in if, the German language is not consistent. In some, the accent is on the last syllable, as Musif, Politif, Supplif; in others, on the second last, as Logif, Grammatif, Lyrif, Mechanif, Plastif, Symnastif; in a few, the usage is variable, as Metaphy's or Metaphysts'. Mathema'tif or Mathematif'.

§ 37. When foreign substantives undergo inflectional or derivational changes, the accent is sometimes transferred from one syllable to another.

EXAMPLES: — Professor, plural Professor; Charakter, plural Charakter; Ue'ther, adjective athe'risth; Musik, adjective musika'listh; Melodie', adjective melo'disth; Nation', adjective national'.

 \S 38. Most verbs ending in irrn are of foreign origin. They have the principal accent on the syllable ir, in analogy with the Latin termination $\bar{a}re$, $\bar{e}re$, $\bar{i}re$, of the infinitive. Verbs of German or French origin having the termination irrn, follow the same rule as verbs of Latin extraction.

Examples:—studien, to study, Latin studere; bociren, to teach, L. docere; issufficien, to illustrate, L. illustrare; stoszere, to strut, from stoszer, proud; hasbiren, to halve, from halb, half; buchstabiren, to spell, from Buchstabe, letter; statiren, to statier. French statier: logiren, to lodge. French loger.

§ 39. Words borrowed from the French or other living languages, commonly retain their original accent. Their pronunciation must be acquired by practice. A few observations bearing upon the subject have been given in some of the preceding paragraphs.

Ш.

ELUMENTS OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF SENTENCES.

I. THE DIRECT PRINCIPAL SENTENCE.

§ 40. Every expression of a thought by words is called a sentence. Every sentence asserts something about some person or thing. The person or thing of which something is said, or, in other words, which forms the subject of an assertion, is termed the Subject; and that which is said regarding the subject, is termed the Predicate (from the Latin praedicare, to proclaim, to assert). The subject and predicate, therefore, are the essential members of every sentence.

§ 41. But two words, although placed side by side, and designed to serve the one as the subject and the other as the predicate, do not necessarily form a sentence. The predicate must be referred to, or asserted of, the subject. The word by which this is done—namely, some form of the verb sein, to be—is called the Assertion. Examples:—

SUBJECT.	ASSERTION,	PREDICATE.
Der Fluß	ift	tief,
the river	is	deep.
Die Rofen	find	roth,
the roses	are	$\operatorname{red}.^{'}$
Der Mann	war	ein Maler,
the man	was	a painter.
Der Sommer	ift	hin,
the summer	ijt is	gone.
3 ¢	bin	ohne Furcht,
I '	am	without fear.

§ 42. In the above examples, the predicate is an adjective, a substantive, or an adverbial expression. But frequently the predicate is a verb, and in that case the assertion is contained in the predicate itself, as the inflectional changes which a verb is capable of undergoing sufficiently indicate its relation to the subject. Examples:—

SUBJECT.	ASSERTION-PREDICATI
Der Vogel	fingt,
the bird	sings.
Das Waffer	fließt,
the water	flows.
Die Blume	blühete,
the flower	bloomed.
Du	fdyläfft,
thou	sleepest.

§ 43. When the verb is used in a compound form—that is, when an auxiliary verb is needed to indicate some relation of time or mood of the predicate—the assertion is contained in the auxiliary verb; and in the case of there being two or three auxiliary verbs, the assertion is contained in that auxiliary which agrees with the subject in person and number. In such cases, the participle and the infinitive of the verb are removed to the end of the sentence. Examples:—

SUBJECT.	ASSERTION.	PREDICATE.
Die Blume	wird	blühen,
the flower	will	bloom.
Die Blume	Hat	geblühet,
the flower	has	bloomed.
Die Blume	würde	geblühet haben,
the flower	would	have bloomed.
Der Vogel	fann	fingen,
the bird	can	sing.
Der Fluß	muß	tief fein,
the river	must	be deep.
E r	ift	ein Maler gewefen,
he	has	been a painter.

§ 44. A substantive may be qualified or individualised by an adjective, by another substantive in the genitive case, by an apposition, or in other ways. Any word employed for this purpose is called an attribute of the substantive. The attributive adjective precedes the substantive; the attributive genitive, as well as the apposition, according to circumstances, either precede or follow it.

EXAMPLES:—Ein altes Haus, an old house. Unfer Haus, our house. Das Haus des Bruders, the house of the brother. Des Bruders Haus, the brother's house. Der königliche Ralast, the royal palace. Der Balast des Königs, the palace of the king. Des Königs Balast, the king's palace. Diefer Balast, this palace. Alexander, König von Wacedonien, Alexander, king of Macedonia. König Alexander, King Alexander.

§ 45. A verb or an adjective may also be qualified or individualised, since the activity asserted of a person or thing (the subject of a sentence) may be represented as affecting other persons or things, or as being peculiar with regard to place, time, manner, or cause. The words by which the former relation is expressed—namely, the cases of substantives or pronouns—are called the Objects of a sentence; and those by which the latter relation is expressed—namely, adverbs, or prepositions with the cases governed by them—are called Adverbial Expressions. Objects as well as adverbial expressions follow the word containing the assertion. When the verb stands in a compound form, they accordingly come in between the assertion and the participle or the infinitive. Examples:—

SUBJECT.	ASSERTION.	ADV. EXPRESSION-OBJECT.	PREDICATE.
Wir	lesen	ein Buch,
we	read	a book.	•
Der Vogel	fingt	sajon,
the bird	sings	beautifully.
Idy	fdyrieb	heute einen Brief,
I	wrote	to-day a letter.
Wir	werden	ein Buch	lesen,
we	shall	a book	read.
Der Vogel	hat	fchön	gesungen,
the bird	has	beautifully	sung.
3d)	würde	heute einen Brief	geschrieben haben,
I '	should	to-day a letter	written have.
Er	ift	feinem Bruder	ähnlich,
he	is	(to) his brother	like.
Sie	wirb	ihres Versprechens	eingebent fein,
\mathbf{she}	\mathbf{will}	of her promise	mindful be.

- § 46. When there are several objects and adverbial expressions, the order in which they follow one another is also determined by certain rules. The following are especially worthy of notice:—
 - 1. Pronouns are placed before nouns.

Man hat ihn seinen Brüdern vorgezogen, one has him to his brothers preserred.

2. Adverbial expressions precede objects.

I drink in the morning coffee,

- 3. Names of persons are placed before names of things.

 Mein Vater hat meiner Schwester ein Buch geschenft, my father has to my sister a book presented.
- 4. An adverbial expression denoting place or time goes before one denoting cause.

Ich wurde gestern vom Regen naß, I was yesterday with rain wet.

5. An adverbial expression denoting time is put before one denoting place.

Wir gehen früh nach Hause, we go early home.

6. An adverbial expression denoting manner is placed after every other adverbial expression, sometimes even after the object.

Er hat in bieser Woche sehr sleißig studiet, he has during this week very diligently studied.

> Ich have bas Buch forgfältig gelesen, I have the book carefully read.

§ 47. The negative nicht, like every other adverb, follows the assertion. When there are objects or adverbial expressions in the sentence, the negative is generally placed after them. Examples:—

SUBJECT. AS	SERTION.	OBJECT-ADV. EXPRESSION.	NEGATIVE.	PREDICATE.
Das Buch	iſt		nicht	leicht,
the book	is		not	easy.
Der Vogel	fingt		nicht,
the bird	sings		not.
Der Bogel	fann		nicht	fingen,
the bird	can		not	sing.
3 (1)	setje	bas Buch	nicht,
I	see	the book	not.
Wir	haben	ben Brief	nicht	erhalten,
we	ĥave	the letter	\mathbf{not}	received
3ch	habe	ihn seit einer Woche	nicbt	gesehen,
I	$\hat{\mathbf{h}}$ ave	him for a week		seen.

Nata

The above rule concerning the position of nicht is abandoned when, in a negative assertion, a particular member of the sentence is to be made emphatic by contrast; in this case, nicht precedes the emphatic word.

IL THE INVERTED PRINCIPAL SENTENCE.

. § 48. Under certain circumstances, the natural or direct order of a sentence must be inverted, so that the subject and the assertion change places with each other. A construction of this kind is called an inverted principal sentence. The inversion takes place especially—

1. In direct interrogative sentences—that is, in sentences containing a direct question by the speaker.

If the Rose roth?—Singt ber Bogel?
Is the rose red?—Does the bird sing?

Wird ber Vogel fingen? Will the bird sing?

2. In imperative sentences—that is, in sentences containing a direct command by the speaker:

Seien Sie ohne Furcht, be (you) without fear.

3. When, for the sake of emphasis, the predicate, an object, an adverbial expression, or a dependent clause, is placed before the subject and verb:

Kurz ist das Leben, short is life.

Den Brief haben wir erhalten, the letter have we received.

Seute haben wir ben Brief erhalten, to-day have we the letter received.

Bas ber Brief enthält, hat sie mir nicht verhehlt, what the letter contains, has she (from) me not concealed.

Note.

When an inverted sentence begins with an adverb or adverbial expression, the subject may be put even after the object, if the object be a short word, such as a personal or reflective pronoun; e.g.—birr hort uns Nicmant, here no one hears us.

III. THE DEPENDENT SENTENCE,

§ 49. When two or more clauses are joined together, they are either co-ordinate, or the one is subordinate to the other. If they are co-ordinate, the above rules are followed in the construction of each clause. If one is subordinate, the arrangement of the principal clause is the same as usual—that is, either direct or inverted—whilst in the dependent clause, the word containing the assertion is removed to the end. Dependent clauses are generally known from the subordinative conjunctions (§ 257), relative pronouns, or relative adverbs, by which they are connected with the principal clause. Examples:—

1. Co-ordinate sentences:

Einige Rosen sind roth, andere sind weiß, some roses are red, others are white.

Wir sehen mit den Augen, und wir hören mit den Ohren, we see with our eyes, and we hear with our ears.

Ich will nach Deutschland reisen, beshalb lerne ich Deutsch, I intend to go to Germany, therefore I am learning German.

Es muß geregnet haben, benn die Flüsse sind angeschwollen, it must have rained, for the rivers are swollen.

2. Principal and dependent clauses:

Er weiß, daß sein Leben auf bem Spiele steht, he knows that his life is at stake.

Ich wurde gekommen sein, wenn ich Beit gehabt hätte, 1 would have come, if I had had time.

Renuft bu das Land, we die Citronen blühn? knowest thou the land where the citrons bloom?

Wir wissen Alles, was geschehen ist, we know all that has happened.

Der Bogel, welchen ich gekauft habe, singt nicht, the bird which I have bought does not sing.

Jota

There are circumstances under which the general rule regarding the construction of dependent sentences is departed from. These, however, cannot be explained here, but are reserved for the syntax.

IV.

VERB.

- § 50. A verb expresses that a person or thing (the subject) is in a certain condition, or that he or it performs an action, or is acted upon. In the formation of a sentence, the verb is an essential element, as no thought can be expressed without it.
- § 51. A verb denoting a mere state or condition of its subject, or an action which does not admit of any bearing upon an object, is termed a subjective verb; as—id) fd/lafc,

I sleep; ich site, I sit; ich ruhe, I rest; ich gehe, I walk; ich sause, I run; ich somme, I come. A verb, on the other hand, denoting an action which requires an object to complete its idea, is termed an objective verb; as—ich schlage, I strike (the dog); ich pflanze, I plant (a tree); ich gebenke, I think of (my friend); ich helse, I help (the poor).

An objective verb which has the object suffering the activity in the accusative case, is called a transitive verb; as—ich schlage ben Hund, I strike the dog; ich psianze einen Baum, I plant a tree. Those objective verbs, on the contrary, which have their object not in the accusative case, as well as all subjective verbs, are usually comprised under the term of intransitive verbs.

§ 52. The usual form of the verb, when the subject is represented as the person or thing being in a state or performing an action, is called the active form or voice. But if the object in which the action terminates is represented as the subject in a state of suffering the action, the particular form which the verb then assumes is called the passive form or voice.

Transitive verbs only can have a complete passive form; e.g.—Der Hund wird von dem Knaben geschlagen, the dog is being beaten by the boy; ein Baum wurde von dem Gärtner gepslangt, a tree was being planted by the gardener. The passive form of intransitive verbs can occur only in the third person; e.g.—e8 wird gesausen, there is running (taking place), or, people run; e8 wird gesosses, it is hoped, or, people hope.

§ 53. When the active subject of a transitive verb is at the same time the suffering object, the verb is said to be in the reflective form. For example:—3th washe mich, I wash myself; er hat sich geschuitten, he has cut himself; wir härmen und, we vex ourselves. The use of reflective verbs is far more common in German than in English, as transitive verbs are often made to assume an intransitive meaning, by being put in the reflective form; thus—bie Erbe brehet sich, the earth moves; bad Bolf versammelte sich, the people assembled. A number of verbs are used only in the reflective form.

§ 54. When an action is conceived without a definite subject from which it proceeds, the verb is called an impersonal. Impersonal verbs are used only in the third person singular, and the place of the subject is supplied by the neuter personal pronoun es, it. For example:—es reguet, it rains; es schneiet, it snows; es bonnert, it thunders; es bligt, it lightens.

§ 55. The German language has four Moods, to point out the particular manner or mode in which a state or action is asserted of the subject:—1. The Indicative represents a state or action as a fact; as—er fingt, he sings; er hat gefungen, he has sung; et wird fingen, he will sing.—2. The Conjunctive (or Subjunctive) represents a state or action only as possible, especially as an assertion of another person, or as a wish; e.g.—id) wünfde, daß er finge, I wish that he may sing; fit fagt, daß er gefungen habe, she says that he has sung; glaubfi du, daß er fingen werde? dost thou think that he will sing?—3. The Conditional represents a state or action merely as an assumed fact; as—wenn er fänge, if he sang; wenn er gefungen hätte, if he had sung; er würde fingen, he would sing.—4. The Imperative represents a state or action in the form of a command; as—finge, sing.

Relations of mood—namely, of possibility and necessity—are also expressed by auxiliary verbs, the so-called auxiliary verbs of mood.

- § 56. The relations of time of an asserted state or action are indicated by the tenses of the verb. A state or action is represented either as present, or as past, or as future; and, moreover, it is represented either as absolutely present, past, or future—that is, with regard to the present of the person speaking; or as relatively present, past, or future—that is, in reference to some other event. Hence there are six tenses, namely—
 - 1. Absolute tenses :--
 - a. The present—id) finge, I sing, I am singing, I do sing.
- b. The perfect—ich habe gefungen, I have sung, I have been singing.
- c. The future—ich werbe fingen, I shall sing, I shall be singing.
 - 2. Relative tenses :--
- a. The imperfect—id, fang (als cr fam), I sang, I was singing, I did sing (when he came).

b. The pluperfect—ich hatte gefungen (als er fam), I had sung, I had been singing (when he came).

c. The future-perfect—ich werbe gesungen haben (ehe er fommt), I shall have sung (before he comes).

The indicative mood has all the six tenses, the conjunctive and conditional have four, the imperative only one. Two tenses in the active voice—namely, the present and imperfect are formed without the help of auxiliary verbs, and are on that account called simple tenses. The other four tenses of the active, and all the tenses of the passive voice, are formed by means of auxiliary verbs, and are called compound tenses.

§ 57. A state or action may be asserted of one person or thing, or of more than one, and accordingly the verb is either in the singular, or in the plural; and according as a state or action is asserted of the person or persons speaking, or of the person or persons spoken to, or of the person or persons, or of the thing or things spoken of, the verb is either in the first, or second, or third person singular or plural.

§ 58. Under the name of Verbals are comprised the infinitive and participle: The infinitive expresses a state or action in a substantive form, the participle expresses a state or action in an adjective form; the former, therefore, is a verbal substantive, the latter a verbal adjective. Each has one form for the present and another for the past, but none for the future : as-fingen, to sing : gefungen haben, to have sung ; singend, singing; gesungen, sung.

§ 59. The infinitive with the preposition zu, to, before it, is called the supine; as-zu fingen, to sing, or in order to sing; gesungen zu haben, to have sung.

§ 60. The German language has two Conjugations—namely, the strong (or ancient), and the weak (or modern). All verbs are conjugated either by the one, or the other. A very small number only have an irregular, or, more properly, a mixed conjugation—that is, a mode of conjugation consisting of a combination of the strong and weak.

& 61. The difference between the strong and the weak conjugation consists in the following particulars:-

1. The strong conjugation is distinguished by a change of the radical vowel in the imperfect and past participle; the weak, by an entire unchangeableness of the root. For example:

INFINITIVE.	IMPERFECT.	PAST PARTICIPLE.
Strong fingen,	fang,	gefungen,
to sing.	sang.	sung.
sprechen,	sprach,	gesprochen,
to speak.	spoke.	spoken.
Weak loben,	lobte,	gelobt,
to praise.	praised.	praised.

- 2. The imperfect tense in the strong conjugation takes no termination in the first and third persons singular; in the weak it takes to or etc (English ed); as-id) or er fang, I or he sang; ich or er sprach, I or he spoke; but ich or er lobte, I or he praised; ich or er leitete, I or he guided.
- 3. The past participle in the strong conjugation takes the termination en (English en); in the weak, t or et (English ed); as-gefungen, sung; gesprochen, spoken; but gelobt, praised; geleitet, guided.
- 4. The conditional of the present in the strong conjugation is formed from the imperfect by adding e and modifying the radical vowel, if it be capable of modification; in the weak conjugation, it is the very same as the imperfect. example :--
- Strong.—(wenn) ich fänge, (if) I sang, from ich fang, I sang. (menn) ich böte, (if) I offered, from ich but, I offered. (menn) ich falluge, (if) I struck, from ich fallug, I struck. Weak.—(wenn) ich lobte, (if) I praised, the same as ich lobte, I praised.

The English language presents only one analogy to the formation of the conditional of strong verbs-namely, 'I were' (ith ware), formed from the imperfect 'I was' (ich war).

5. In the second and third persons singular of the present indicative in the strong conjugation, the radical vowel e is changed into i or ie, a into a, o into o, au into au, while there is no change in the weak. For example:-

> Strong.-ich spreche, I speak, bu sprichst, er spricht. ich trage, I carry, bu trägst, er trägt. ich ftoffe, I push, bu ftoffest, er ftoft. ich laufe. I run, bu läufst, er läuft.

Weak.—ich sebe, I live, bu sebst, er lebt.
ich mase, I paint, bu massit, er mast.
ich sobe, I praise, bu sobst, er sobt.
ich kause, I buy, bu kausst, er saust.

The change of e into i or is takes place also in the second person singular of the imperative in all those verbs of the strong conjugation, in which the same change is made in the present indicative. In such cases, the termination e, peculiar to the second person singular of the imperative, is dropped; e.g.—sprict, speak; besiehs, command.

In the imperative of schen, to see, the termination e is sometimes omitted, sometimes retained: sieh, or siehe.

§ 62. The following table presents a view of the terminations of the simple tenses and verbals of both conjugations:—

Notes.

- 1. Where there are two terminations given in the above table for the same form, such as cft, ft; ct, t, it depends in every instance on euphony, whether the vowel c of the termination must be thrown out or retained. For example, in the present to fingft, thou singest, cr fingt, he sings, without c; but to finteft, thou findest, cr fintet, he finds, with c. Or in the imperfect, ich lotte, I praised; but ich leitete, I guided. Or in the infinitive, loten, to praise; but fammeln, to gather, direct, to alter. Or in the present participle, lotent, praising; but fammeln, gathering, directne, altering. Or in the past participle, gelobt, praised, gefammelt, gathered; but geleitet, guided. The c is always thrown out in the second and third persons singular of the present indicative of those strong verbs in which the radical vowel undergoes a change in the present (§ 61, 5); e.g.—ich fireche, I speak, bu firithft, er firitht; ich fchlage, I strike, bu fchlage, cr fchlage.
- 2. In the third person singular, present indicative, of those strong verbs which change in the present, the termination t is contracted with the final consonant of the root, if that be t (or th); as—git of getten, shift of spelten, tritt of treten, sight of section, slight of fledten, brat of braten, halt of halten, tath of rathen.
- § 63. Most verbs of the strong as well as of the weak conjugation, have in the past participle the syllable ge prefixed, which is called the augment; as—gefungen, sung; gefobt, praised. Analogous is the English y in such obsolete words as—yelad, yelept, yknown, ythrungen.

The augment, however, is not used—1. With verbs having an inseparable prefix; e.g.—erfunden, invented, from erfinden, to invent; verstanden, understood, from versteben, to understand. 2. With verbs ending in iren; as—subject, studied, from studien, to study; buchstabirt, spelt, from buchstabiren, to spell.

* Before commencing the translation of the exercises, it is necessary that the student should make himself acquainted with the leading rules for the construction of sentences, contained in section III. Words given in Italics are not to be translated. This mark [] signifies that words, although not required in English, must be expressed in German. The following abbreviations are employed in the notes to the excitices:—

m. means 'masculine gender.' gen. means 'genitive.'
f. . 'feminine gender.' dat. 'dative.'
n. 'neuter gender.' acc. 'accusative.'

EXERCISE IL.

We have had no time. I shall have no time to spare. I have had your knife, 1 but I have it no longer. 2 Who has had my penknife? I have had the pleasure. 3 Shall we have the pleasure? Has he had money? They have had much trouble. 4 You will have much trouble. I should have had much trouble. He will have the kindness. 5 She has had the kindness. Have you had no opportunity? We shall have no opportunity. They would have had no opportunity. Thou wilt have a horse. 3 If 9 I had a horse. Have courage. 16 If he had courage. Have patience. 1f they had had patience. That 11 he may have patience. That she may have the kindness.

¹ Your knife, The Messer. ² No longer, night mehr. ³ The pleasure, has Bergnügen. ⁴ Much trouble, wide Whipe. ⁵ The kindness, hie Gitte. ⁵ Use the third person plural. ⁵ No opportunity, feine Getegenheit. ⁵ A horse, in Pferb. ° If, wenn; begins a dependent clause. gemesen zu sein, to have been. PAST. PARTICIPLES. feib, be (you), feien ste, let them be.

PRESENT. feiend. being.—PAST. gewesen, been.

Note.

The principal parts of this verb are taken from different stems, like those of the English verb 'to be.' The imperfect war (in old High-German vas), and the past participle gewefen, are derived from an old infinitive, wefen (in old High-German wesan), which is now used only in the sense of a substantive—bas 2Befen, the being; but occurs also in the derivative verb verwefen, to corrupt, perish; and in the form of a participle in the compounds abwefent, absent, and anwefent, present.

§ 67. The verb sein, to be, to exist, is used as an auxiliary—
1. For the formation of the persect and plupersect tenses of all those intransitive verbs which denote a change of condition; as—sterben, to die; genesen, to recover from illness; wachsen, to grow; werben, to become; erfransen, to fall ill; vermesten, to wither; einschlasen, to fall asleep; erblinden, to become blind; ausslichen, to begin to bloom, &c.

Note

When a verb of this kind can be used both in a transitive and intransitive sense, it takes haven in the former, and fein in the latter, signification. For example:—heiten, to cure and to heal; der Aryt hat ben Kranken geheitt, the physician has cured the patient; but die Wante in geheitt, the wound has healed. Or, audichlagen, to decline and to bud: cr hat die Ginladung audgeschlagen, he has declined the invitation; but der Baum ist audgeschlagen, the tree has budded. Or, schnetzen, to melt: die Genne hat den Gehee geschnetzen, the sun has melted the snow; but der Schne ist geschnetzen, the sun has melted the snow; but der Schne ist geschnetzen, the snow is melted.

2. In like manner, feth is used for the formation of the perfect and pluperfect tenses of all those intransitive verbs which denote motion to or from a place, if the place from which the motion proceeds, or to which it is directed, is either actually expressed or understood. Hence many intransitive verbs expressing motion are always conjugated with fein, especially the following:—

fahren, to go (in a conveyance), fallen, to fall,
fliegen, to fly,
fliehen, to flee,
fliehen, to flow,
gehen, to go,

aleiten, to glide,

fommen, to come, landen, to land, laufen, to run, fegeln, to sail, finfen, to sink, fteigen, to rise, giehen, to go, to move, along with those of their compounds, which not only have, in common with the simple verbs, the meaning of locomotion, but express also by their prefixes, at least in some measure, the direction from or to a place or object; as—abfahren, to start; abfallen, to fall away; meafliegen, to fly away; vergehen, to pass away; entformmen, to escape; antonmen, to arrive; and many others of a similar signification.

Note.

Some of the simple intransitive verbs expressing motion are conjugated with sein, only when the object of the motion, or the place from which it proceeds, is really specified. For instance:—Er is nach sendon greis, he is gone (literally, travelled) to London. Sie sind in the Bart gritten, they have taken a ride into the park. Der Anabe ist vom Baume gesprungen, the boy has leaped from the tree. Is, bin nach Sause greist, I have hastened home. Fr is uber den Sus geschwommen, he has seum across the river, &c. With the same verbs, haben is used when there is no place mentioned from which the motion proceeds, or to which it is directed, as—er hat viel gereist, he has travelled much. Is, have bessen with the motion group gritten, I have taken a ride this morning. Is, habe desen swimming a long time.

3. The following intransitive verbs are likewise conjugated with fein:—begegnen, to meet; folgen, to follow; weithen to yield; bleiben, to remain; fein, to be.

Note

The verbs stehen, siegen, siegen, and a sew more, are in the dialect of Southern Germany sometimes used with sein. In the High-German language, however, this practice is not generally adopted, although it is occasionally followed by poets; e.g.—36 bin wer hopen Fursten nie gestanden, Sch., I have never stood before high princes. Und an der Sünder Tisch bist du gesessen, Geibel, and thou hast sat at the table of sinners.

4. The following impersonal verbs also require sein:—geschehen, to happen; gelingen, glüsten, gerathen, to succeed; mißlingen, mißglüsten, mißrathen, to succeed ill.

Berten, being a strong verb, has, according to § 77, in the imperfect it much, bu marth, et mart, and in the past participle generten. But besides the regular form, mart, in the imperfect, it has also the irregular form, it murter, et murter, which is more commonly used. The plural of the imperfect is always mir murten, if murter, fix murten, and the conditional of the present it wurter. The present indicative, in the second and third persons singular, changes the radical vowel e into i, according to § 61, 5, and contracts the last consonant of the stem with the termination—murit, wire.

§ 69. The verb merben, to become, to grow, serves as an auxiliary for the formation of the future tenses of the active, and for all the tenses of the passive voice.

I shall have praised.

Present. tokent, praising.—Past. getob(e)t, praised. PARTICIPLES.

Verbs ending in etc or ern drop the e of the inflectional termination in all cases, where it is put between brackets in the paradigm; as—er fumment, he gathers; in numerte, I wandered. But in the first person singular present, they drop the e preceding the I or r; as-ith faminite, I gather; ith mantee, I wander.

Verhs to be conjugated like loken: — liefen, to love; lefren, to teach; lernen, to learn; malen, to paint; leben, to live; sublen, to count; spielen, to play — Leiten, to guide; reden, to talk; baben, to bathe; flichen, to fish; rechnen, to reckon; scugnen, to deny.—Lächeln, to smile; wandeln, to walk; andern, to alter; plaubern, to chatter.

VII.

CLASSIFICATION OF THE STRONG VERBS.

- § 73. By far the greater number of verbs follow the weak conjugation, as it comprises not only all derivative, but also some radical verbs, whilst all verbs of the strong conjugation, without exception, are radical verbs. Compound verbs—that is, those compounded with prefixes—generally follow the same conjugation as the simple verbs from which they are formed.
- § 74. All verbs of the strong conjugation are divided into three classes, according as they agree in the radical vowel; and each of the three classes has several subdivisions, according as they agree in the change of the radical vowel in the imperfect tense and the past participle.

The verbs of the first class agree in having the radical vowel i or c. A few only have ä, ö, ü, o or au. The verbs of the second class agree in having the diphthong ci. The verbs of the third class have a, a few au, o or u. The following table shews how in each class the radical vowel changes in the various subdivisions. English analogies are subjoined:—

VOWEL IN THE INFINITIVE.	IMPERFECT.	PAST PARTICIPLE.

Note.

The simple verb feblen, to fail, to be wanting, takes the weak conjugation; also expreden, when used in the transitive meaning, to frighten.

§ 78. All verbs of this subdivision which have e for their radical vowel, change the e into i in the second and third persons singular of the present indicative, and in the second person singular of the imperative. A long e is changed into a long i (that is, ie), a short e into a short i; as—ich befehle, bu befiehlft, er befiehlt, imperative befiehl; ich spreche, bu spricht, er spricht, imperative sprich. In nehmen, however, the long e is changed into a short i:—ich nehme, bu nimmit, er nimmt, imperative nimm. (Sebären has gebierft, gebiert, imperative gebier. Werden has wirft, wird by contraction, but in the imperative werde. In the second and third persons present of fommen, the forms fommit, fommt, are more generally used than fömmift, fömmt.

§ 79. The following verbs of the above list have in the conditional of the present the modified vowel \(\vec{u}\):—helfen, conditional h\(\vec{u}\)lfe; fterben, ft\(\vec{u}\)rbe; verberben, verb\(\vec{u}\)rbe; werben, w\(\vec{u}\)rbe; werben, w\(\vec{u}\)rbe; werfen has both w\(\vec{u}\)rfe and w\(\vec{u}\)rfe.

The following verbs have in the conditional of the present the modified vowel \ddot{v} :—beginnen, begönne; befehlen, beföhle; empfehlen, empföhle. The following have either \ddot{a} or \ddot{v} :—gelten, gewinnen, fehwinnen, fpinnen, flehlen. In all the other verbs of this subdivision, the conditional is formed in the regular way; as—nehmen, nähme, from the imperfect nahm.

EXERCISE VIII.

meben, to weave,	wob,	gewoben.
wiegen, to weigh (intransitive),	waa	aamaaan
magen, to weigh (transitive),	trug,	gewogen.
ziehen, to pull,	zog,	gezogen.

Note.

The verbs beformen, to straiten, and rachen, to revenge, form only their past participle by the strong conjugation—bettonnien, geroden. Of the verb vernivren, there still exists the past participle vernerren, meaning 'intricate,' 'confused;' and of verbeblen, to conceal, the past participle verbeblen occurs in the word unverbeblen, 'unreserved.' Benegen in the signification 'to move' (physically), pflegen, in the sense of 'to nurse,' and 'to be accustomed,' and integer in the meaning 'to rock,' are conjugated by the weak form. Quellen, februdgen, februflen, fieten, are likewise weak, when used in a transitive sense; the last of these four sometimes takes the weak conjugation, even when used in an intransitive meaning. The simple verb leften, and the compound autifificen, to extinguish (in a transitive meaning), have likewise the weak form of conjugation. Before is now commonly conjugated weak; the strong forms web, geneben, being used in poetry only.

§ 81. The radical e is changed into i in the second and third persons singular present indicative, and in the second person singular imperative; as—id) feelet, bu fichtit, er ficht, imperative ficht. The following verbs are excepted:—bewegen, heben, melten, pflegen, scheren. In erlöschen, the ö is changed into i:—bu erlöscheft, er erlöscht, imperative erlösch. In sausen, the diphthong au is modified in the second and third persons singular present indicative:—bu sausen, and schrauben, whilst it remains unchanged in sausen, schnauben, and schrauben.

The conditional of the present is formed in the usual way; as—boge, from the imperfect bog, &c. Seven has hove and bube: samore has samore and samore.

Note.

Verbs with it long for the radical, have (besides their regular forms in the second and third persons singular present indicative, and in the second person singular imperative) unusual and antiquated forms with the diphthong eu, which occur occasionally in poetry; for instance—beutit, beut, of biten: fleugh, fleugt, imperative fleug, of fliegen; fleught, fleught, imperative fleugh, of fliegen; geucht, geucht, imperative geuch, of glehen.

§ 82. In all verbs of the above subdivision, the root of which ends in β or β , it long is changed in the imperfect and past participle into α short; as—fließen, floß, gestossen; rieden, rod, geroden. Also in sleben, triesen, and sausen, the long vowel is changed into a short one, and the following consonant is doubled in consequence; in sleben, moreover, the α is hardened:—sott, gestoten. In zießen, the α is changed into α :—sog, gezogen; but the vowel remains long.

§ 83. FOURTH SUBDIVISION.

Radical Vowel i or e.-Imperfect a (long).-Past Participle e.

bitten, to beg,	bat,	gebeten.
effen, to eat,	αβ,	gegeffen.
freffen, to eat (said of beasts),	fraß,	gefreffen.
geben, to give,	gab,	gegeben.
genesen, to recover from illness,	genas,	genesen.
geschehen, to happen (impersonal),	geschah,	geschehen.

meffen, to measure,	maß,	gemessen.
sehen, to see,	sah,	gesehen.
sit, to sit,	faß,	geseffen.
treten, to tread,	trat,	getreten.
vergessen, to forget,	vergaß,	vergeffen.

The verb sein, to be (originally mesen), imperfect war, past participle genesen, belongs also to this division of strong verbs. (See § 66, note).

§ 84. Genesen is the only verb in this subdivision which does not change ε into i in the present and imperative. In treten, ε long is changed into i short, and the following consonant is doubled:—tritts, tritt. The vowel a in the imperfect being long, bitten loses one t (bat), and double f is changed into f, in af, frase-unaf, vergas. Sign has safe, instead of safe a simple z is never used at the end of a syllable after a simple vowel. The vowel in the past participle is long or short, according as the vowel of the infinitive is long or short, with the exception only of bitten, which has gesten with ε long. In gegessen (instead of gessen), g is inserted, for the sake of euphony.

streichen, to stroke,	itridy,	gestrichen.
streiten, to contend,	stritt,	gestritten.
weithen, to yield,	with,	gewichen.

Note.

The simple verb bleiden, to bleach, follows the weak conjugation; sometimes also the compound verb erbleiden, to turn pale; likewise idleifen, in the meaning 'to drag, to raze (a fortress),' weiden, in the meaning 'to soak,' and the compound verb verleiten, to render disagreeable, to spoil. The compound verb begleiten, to accompany, takes the weak conjugation, it being a contraction for begleiten, and therefore not derivable from gleiten, to glide, but from leiten, to lead.

§ 86. The vowel being short in the imperfect and past participle, the final consonant of the root is doubled, except where it is double already. In two verbs—namely, leiben and fdyneiben—the b is hardened. The conditional of the present of all verbs of this class is formed simply by adding e to the imperfect; as—ich griffe, ich litte; and in the second subdivision, ich bliebe, ich schriebe.

EXERCISE XI.

rathen, to advise,	rieth,	gerathen.
rufen, to call,	ricf,	gerufen.
salafen, to sleep,	schlief,	geschlafen.
stoßen, to push,	stieß,	gestoßen.

Notes.

1. In falten, to fold; falzen, to salt; spalten, to split; schreten, to shred, only the past participle follows the strong conjugation:—gesalten, gesalten, gesalten, gesalten, gesalten, and even in the past participle these verbs now often take the weak conjugation, especially when the participle is not used in the sense of an adjective; for instance—er hat tas Rapier gesaltet, he has solded the paper; er hat tas volz gespaltet, he has split the wood; but mit gesaltenen Sancen, with folded hands; gespaltenes Solz, split wood.

2. The verb genen was in old German gangan, imperfect giane, giene, past participle gangan; hence our forms ging, gegangen; whilst for the original infinitive and present gangen, gange, in new High-German genen, gene are substituted. The latter forms have their origin in the middle High-German gan or gén.

§ 89. In all verbs of this division, the radical vowel is modified in the second and third persons singular of the present indicative, according to § 61, 5, with the exception of hauen and rufen. Geißen and gehen also retain their vowels unchanged in the present tense. The conditional of the present is formed in the usual way, as—bliefe of blasen, finge of fangen.

EXERCISE XIII.

I blow the horn. He plays (say, blows) the trumpet.2 The cook³ has roasted a piece of beef.⁴ She was roasting a goose.⁵ You will fall, if you run so fast. Do not fall. A child6 has (say, is7) fallen into the river.8 The fashion9 does not please 10 me (say, pleases to me not). His behaviour 11 did not please us (say, pleased to us12 not). John 13 has caught some trout.14 Where are you going [to] ?15 I am going to the post-office. 16 Go to the left. 17 If I went to the right. 18 Will you go to the country? 19 My brother is gone into [the] town.²⁰ The watch²¹ does not go. The prices of grain²² have (say, are²³) gone up.²⁴ Do you go home ?²⁵ She went home. They walked 26 very slowly.27 He holds the rope.28 He held the rope too tight.29 That he may hold the rope. A groom³⁰ is holding the horse.³¹ If he kept³² his promise.³³ If he had kept his promise. The picture³⁴ hangs on the wall.³⁵ He has hewn the wood.³⁶ in pieces,³⁷ What (say, how) is this street 38 called? I have left 39 my work 40 at home.41 We shall leave no stone unturned (say, nothing42 untried 43). Let him come in. 44 Why are you running? The candle 45 gutters. 46 The child 47 ran and fell. What has thy friend 48 advised thee? 49 Who has guessed 50 the riddle? 51

§ 90. SECOND SUBDIVISION.

Radical Vowel a .- Imperfect u .- Past Participle a.

bacten, to bake,	but,	gebacken.
fahren, to drive, or go	in fuhr,	gefahren.
graben, to dig,	grub,	gegraben.
laben, to load,	lud,	geladen.
schaffen, to create,	schuf,	geschaffen.
schlagen, to strike,	falug,	gefchlagen.
stehen, to stand,	ftand or stund,	gestanden.
tragen, to carry,	trug,	getragen.
madifen, to grow,	wuchs,	gewachsen.
waschen, to wash,	wufd,	gewaschen.

Notes.

- 1. Mablen, to grind (flour), forms only the past participle genealten by the strong conjugation; and fragen, to ask (a question), only the imperfect frug, for which the weak form fragte is now more commonly used. Edaffen follows the strong conjugation only when it signifies 'to create;' in every other signification it is weak.
- 2. Stepen is in Gothic standan, and in old High-German stantan, imperfect stuont, past participle stantan, whence the forms ftunt, geftanten, in new High-German. The modern infinitive fiehen and the present fiehe have their origin in the middle High-German forms stân or stên.
- § 91. The vowel a is modified in the second and third persons singular present indicative, in all verbs of this subdivision, except laben and schaffen. Stehen also remains unchanged in the present. In the formation of the conditional of the present, the general rule is observed, as—grübe of graten, trüge of tragen, &c. Stehen has both stänbe and stimbe, on account of its double form in the imperfect, stanb and stumb, the latter of which, however, is obsolete.

EXERCISE XIV.

The baker¹ bakes bread.² The coachman³ does not drive fast⁴ enough.⁵ Drive a little⁶ faster.² We drove into [the] town. We shall drive into the country.³ The man is digging a grave.⁰ The huntsman¹⁰ loaded his gun.¹¹ God created the world.¹² The heart¹³ beats.¹⁴ The waves¹⁵ strike against the ship.¹⁶ The hail¹¹ beat against the windows.¹³ Why are you beating the dog ?¹⁰ The nightingale²⁰ sings²¹ charmingly.²² It strikes three.²³ Has it already²⁴ struck seven.²⁵ What stands there ? The castle²⁶ stands upon a hill.²² Why do you stand idle ?²⁰ We stood and waited. Does the clock²⁰ stand still ?³⁰ What art thou carrying there? I shall carry some letters³¹ to the post.³² Have you carried the letters to the post? The girl ³³ carried a basket.³⁴ The plant³⁵ grows very slowly. If the plant grew quicker.³⁶ The girl is grown very fast. Has the woman washed the clothes, If she had washed the clothes.

^{§ 92.} Verbs like berathschlagen, to deliberate; veranlassen, to occasion; heirethen (or heiraten), to marry; herbergen, to harbour; unnringen, to surround; bemillsonmen, to welcome; bemitleiben, to pity; beaustragen, to commission, follow the weak conjugation, because they are not compounds of schlagen, lassen, rathen, &c., but derivatives of Rathschlag, Unlass, &cierath (or Geirat), Gerberge, Ning, Willsommen, Witseld, Austrag. Also millsahren, to comply, takes the weak forms.

IRREGULAR CONJUGATION.

§ 93. The irregularity of the following verbs consists in this, that the formation of the principal parts—namely, the imperfect and past participle—is effected by a combination of the strong and weak conjugations. The radical vowel undergoes a change, as in the strong conjugation, while at the same time the terminations peculiar to the weak conjugation are affixed. In bringen, to bring, and benfen, to think, moreover, the final consonants of the root ng and nt are changed into th.

INFINITIVE.	IMPERFECT.	PAST PARTICIPLE.	PRESENT CONDITIONAL.
brennen, to burn,	brannte,	gebrannt,	brennte.
bringen, to bring,	brachte,	gebracht,	brächte.
benfen, to think,	bachte,	gedacht,	bächte.
fennen, to know,	fannte,	gefannt,	fennte.
nennen, to name,	nannte,	genannt,	nennte.
rennen, to run,	rannte,	gerannt,	rennte.
senden, to send,	fandte or fendete,	fendet,	S leurere.
wenden, to turn,	{ wandte or wendete,	0	ge= } wendete.

§ 94. Thun, to do (contracted for thuch), has the imperfect that, the past participle gethan, the present conditional thate.

Wiffen, to know, is in the singular of the present indicative conjugated like the imperfect of a strong verb:—id, weiß, bu weißt (a contraction for weißeft), er weiß; plural, wir wiffen, ihr wiffet, ste wiffen. Present conjunctive, id, wiffe; present conditional, id, wüßte; imperfect, id, wußte; past participle gewußt.

Note.

The difference between wiffen and femuen is upon the whole the same as between the Latin scio and novi, or the French savoir and connaître.

EXERCISE XV.

§ 95. The auxiliary verbs of mood, burfen, fonnen, mugen, muffen, follen, wollen, have a peculiar conjugation in the singular of the present indicative. Their imperfect and past participle are formed according to the weak conjugation; but in the case of burfen, fonnen, mogen, and muffen, change their modified vowels into the corresponding primary vowels, as—burfte, geburft; fonnte, gefount, &c. In the present conditional, the modified vowel is resumed, as—burfte, fonnte, &c. Sollen alone never changes its vowel.

All the auxiliary verbs of mood have a complete conjugation through all tenses and moods, excepting the imperative mood, which is formed of wollen only. The corresponding English verbs, 'dare, can, may, must, shall, will,' being defective in conjugation, other phrases must frequently be employed, in order to express what in German is simply expressed by auxiliary verbs, as—id) have gemußt, I have been obliged; wir werben nicht fönnen, we shall not be able.

A peculiarity in the grammatical use of these auxiliary verbs of mood is the changing of the past participle into the infinitive in the past compound tenses, when it is immediately preceded wird nicht haben kommen konnen (instead of gekonnt), de will not dave deen able to come.

The same rule is observed with the auxiliary verb of mood Inffen, to let, to suffer, to order, to cause; and with some other verbs, when connected with an infinitive, as—helpen, to bid; helpen, to help; feben, to see; hoven, to hear; lehren, to teach; lernen, to learn. For example:—ith place ben Schneiber fommen laffen, I have ordered the tailor to come. 3th have ith fagen hoven, I have heard him say. Wir haben ste vorbeigeben sehr, we have seen them pass.

H

CONJUGATION OF THE PASSIVE VOICE.

§ 103. The passive voice is formed by the auxiliary werben, along with the past participle of the verb. In the past compound tenses, the participle geworben loses the augment gc, as in ith bin gelobt norben (for genorben). I have been praised werbe gelobt, be (thou) praised.

INFINITIVES.

Present. gelobt methen, to be praised. Past. gelobt mothen fein, to have been praised.

SHPINES

Present. gelobt zu werden, to de praised. Past. gelobt worden zu sein, to have deen praised. Conjugate the passive voice of any of the following verbs:—lithen, to love; fragen, to question; fuhren, to guide; hoten, to hear; finden, to find; bitten, to ask; fuelten, to scold: fruen, to see; flugen, to push rufen, to call.

8 104. In the past compound tenses of the passive, the past participle morten is often omitted, especially when the reality of an event is to be expressed, rather than its relation of time; e. a.—ber Raiser ist ermorbet, the emperor is assassinated. Der Kaiser ist verrathen, the emperor is betrayed. Wir kamen bor bem Lufthause an, wo bas Abendessen servirt war, we arrived in front of the villa, where the supper was It should be observed, however, that there is a distinct difference between the use of the present and perfect tense, and also between the imperfect and pluperfect tense. 'I am praised,' may be translated either by id werbe gelobt, if said in the sense of 'I am being praised;' or it may be translated by ich bin gelobt, if said in the sense of 'I have been praised.' In like manner, 'the town was destroyed,' is either die Stadt wurde zerstört, that is, the town was being destroyed, or in the act of being destroyed; or bie Stadt mar zerstört, that is, the town was (or had been) destroyed, or was in a ruined state. Examples :- Die Burgglock wird geläutet, Sch., the castle-bell is being rung, or is tolling. Der Auffat wird biefen Augenblick gelefen, Sch., the treatise is being read at this moment. Wir find umringt bon Spähern, Sch., we are surrounded with spies. Die Musik tam aus einem Dorfe, wo eben Sahrmarft gehalten wurde, Sch., the (sound of) music proceeded from a village, where a fair was being held. Sein Wunfch ward ihm gewährt. Kr., his wish was (being) granted to him. Die Wände waren mit Phedorens und ihrer Tochter Zeichnungen geziert, the walls were decorated with the drawings of Phedora and her daughter.

COMPOUND VERBS.

§ 106. A verb compounded with a prefix is called a compound verb. The prefix of a verb is either separable or inseparable, and hence a verb is in the former case a separable compound verb; in the latter, an inseparable compound verb.

An inseparable compound verb does not take the augment ge in the past participle (§ 63); in all other respects it is conjugated like a simple verb. The accent is laid on the root of the verb.

A separable compound verb requires its prefix to be separated, under the following circumstances:—1. The prefix is removed to the end of the clause, when the clause is a principal one, and when, at the same time, the verb stands in a simple tense—that is, in the present or imperfect tense of the active voice, or in the imperative mood. For example:ich hore auf, I cease; ich horte auf, I ceased; hore auf, cease. In dependent clauses, on the contrary, the prefix keeps its place before the verb, the verb taking the last place in the sentence; as-wenn ich aufhöre, if I cease; als ich aufhörte, 2. In the past participle, the augment ac when I ceased. is inserted between the prefix and the simple verb; asaufgehört, ceased. 3. In the supine, the preposition zu is inserted between the prefix and the simple verb; asaufzuhören, to cease. A separable prefix always has the principal accent.

§ 107. The syllables be, er, emp, ent, ver, zer, ge, miß, and the preposition wider, against, are used as inseparable prefixes. For example:—Er hat die Wahrheit seiner Aussage beschworen, he has sworn to the truth of his evidence. Ich habe meinen Zweck erreicht, I have attained my object. Gott erfüllt, was er verspricht, God persorms what he promises.

Notes.

1. The prefix ant, in point of derivation the same as ent or emp, is likewise inseparable, but takes the principal accent. The only verb compounded with the prefix (in this old form) is ant'waten, to answer. The past participle has the augment grant'moutet.

2. Some verbs compounded with mig take the augment in the past participle, but before the prefix; as—gemig transft, abused; gemig billigt, disapproved; gemis handelt, ill-used. In a few verbs the augment is put after the prefix; as—mis geachtet, despised; mis geatet, degenerated. In all such instances the principal accent falls on the prefix, not on the root.

39 The plan, ber Plan.
40 To disapprove, mißbilligen.

§ 108. Prepositions and adverbs, when used as prefixes, are separable; as—ab, off; an, on; auf, up; auß, out; bei, by; ba or bar, there; ein, in; fort, away; her, hither; hin, thither; mit, with; nach, after; nieber, down; ob, over; vor, before; veg, away; zu, to; zurud, back; zusammen, together, and others. For example:—Er reis't heute ab, he sets out to-day.

Ich fing meine Arbeit an, I commenced my work. Hören Sie auf, leave off. Ihre Wechsel sind angekommen, your bills have arrived. Wenn Sie ausgehen, if you go out. Als er fortging, when he went away.

§ 109. The prepositions burd, through; über, over; unter, under; unt, round; binter, behind, are used both as separable and inseparable prefixes, according as either the prefix or the root of the verb has the principal accent. If the same verb can be used in both ways, the variation in usage is accompanied by a marked difference in the signification. To the majority of verbs of this kind the rule may be applied, that the prefix is separable when the verb is used in its primitive sense, but inseparable when the verb is used in a figurative sense. Examples:—

durch'ziehen, to pull through. durch'laufen, to run through. durch'schneiben, to cut through.

ü'berstehen, to project. ü'bergehen, to go over.

übersehen, to leap over, to serry over.
überlegen, to lay over.
un'terhalten, to hold under.
un'terbrüden, to press under.
um'gehen, to go round, to make a roundabout way.
hin'tergehen, to go behind, to a back-room.

burdgie'hen, to roam through. burdhau'fen, to peruse hastily. burdhani'ben, to intersect, plough through (e.g. the waves).

überste'hen, to overcome. überge'hen, to pass over in silence.

überse'gen, to translate.

überle'gen, to consider. unterhal'ten, to entertain. unterdrüd'en, to oppress. umge'hen, to evade.

hinterge'hen, to deceive.

Most verbs compounded with the above prefixes, however, are only used either in the one way or in the other. The adverb wieber, again, occurs as an inseparable prefix only in wieberho'len, to repeat; in all other instances it is separable; as in—wie'berfommen, to come again; wie'berbringen, to bring back, &c.; and likewise in wie'berholen, meaning 'to fetch back.'

EXERCISE XXI.

I pull the rope¹ through. We roamed through the surrounding country.² The carpenter³ saws through⁴ the wood. The ship ploughs through the waves.⁵ The roof⁶ projects. I have gone through¹ many trials.⁶ They went over to the enemy.⁰ We passed it over in silence. Ferry me over. Translate the passage.¹⁰ We have translated a page.¹¹ She held the glass under. She entertained the company.¹² They evaded the law.¹³ He has deceived me. Bring it back. Repeat the sentence.¹⁴ We shall come again.

1 The rope, tak Seil. 2 The surrounding country, tie lingegenb. 5 The carpenter, ter Jimmermann. 4 To saw through, burchsagen. 5 The waves, tie Welsen. 6 The roof, tak Dach. 7 To go through, überstehen. 8 Many trials, viese Prüfungen. 9 To the enemy, zum Keinte. 10 Tho passage, tie Seitse. 11 A page, eine Seite. 12 The company, tie Gesellschaft. 13 The law, bas Gesey. 4 The sentence, ten Sah (acc.)

§ 110. Compound prefixes (as—herein, hinaus, vorbei, vorher, vorüber, daven, daven, de.) are used like simple separable prefixes, if each of the two components by itself is separable. The principal accent is put on the second component of the prefix. For example:—ich fage vorher, I foretell; er ift davon'gelausen, he has run away.

But if a separable, and therefore accented, prefix is followed by an inseparable and unaccented one, only the first can be separated. The past participle of such verbs takes no augment. For example:—an'erfennen, to acknowledge; ich erfenne an, I acknowledge; ich habe anerfannt, I have acknowledged; anzuerfennen, to acknowledge. Ein'ge-stehen, to confess; er gestand ein, he confessed; er hat eingestanden, he has confessed.

Note.

There is a third class of verbs which have two prefixes, but in which the unaccented prefix precedes the accented one. In such instances, both are inseparable, because, strictly speaking, the second syllable is no verbal prefix at all, but forms part of the compound substantive or adjective from which verbs of this kind are derived. For example:—veraf reten, to make an agreement, is derived from Abrete, agreement; ceraf fictient, to dismiss, from Abfchiet, dismissal; veran fiatten, to arrange, prepare, from Anfalt, preparation; veran fichiagen, to estimate, from Anfaltagen, to expend, from Angagae, expense; beanf tragen, to commission, from Anfaltagen, to entit leiten, to pity, from Dittet, pity; bean firmage, commission; benut leiten, to pity, from Dittet, pity; bean firmage, to claim, from Anfaruch, claim; benufungen, to disquiet, from unruhig, unquiet. All verbs of this last-mentioned class follow the weak conjugation, because they are derivatives. (See §§ 73 and 92).

- § 111. Of those compound verbs whose determinative component is a substantive or adjective, some are inseparable, others separable. In both cases they have the accent on the first or determinative component, not on the root.
- 1. The following, among others, are inseparable, but have this peculiarity, that in the past participle they take the augment before the prefix:—weifigen, to prophesy; Iuffrundeln, to walk for pleasure; redyfertigen, to justify; willfahren, to comply; liebfofen, to caress.

Note

Verbs derived from compound substantives, and therefore not being compound verbs in the strict sense of the word, must be distinguished from the above; e.g.—frühlüden, to breakfast; rathfolagen, to deliberate; arguühnen, to suspect; handhaben, to handle; wetteifern, to emulate; walfahrten, to go on a pilgrimage, &c., derived from Frühhüd, Rathfohag, Arguwohn, Kanbhabe, Wetteifer, Wallfahrt.

2. The following verbs (compounded with adjectives) are separable:—großthun, großfprechen, großprechen, to boast; loßfprechen, to acquit; sich loßfagen, to renounce; mohlwosten, to wish well; mohlthun, to do good; hochachten, merthschäten, to esteem highly; gutsagen, to stand security; freilasen, to set free; genugthun, to satisfy; mahrnehmen, to observe; sesthalten, to hold fast, &c. In all these, the two components—namely, the adjective and verb—do not, strictly coalesce into one notion, and therefore admit of being separated.

Vote.

Verbs compounded with the adjective voil, full, are inseparable, the root taking the principal accent. The past participle dispenses with the augment. For example:—voiltringen, to accomplish (past participle voiltracht); voilenten, to finish (past participle voilenter); voilführen, to achieve; voilfitrefen, to put into effect; voilgitefen to executs. These really compound verbs must, however, not be confounded with such expressions as wolf fulfer, to make full, or fill to the brim; ficty wolf trinfer, to drink one's fill, &c., in which wolf entirely preserves the character and meaning of an adjective, and does not form part of the verb.

EXERCISE XXII.

He came in.¹ Have I not foretold² it? The thief³ has run away.⁴ Go out.⁵ He has missed⁶ the mark. He hazards7 his life.³ I acknowledge⁰ your kindness.¹⁰ He has admitted¹¹ his error.¹² The conditions¹³ have been agreed upon.¹⁴ We have expended¹⁵ a large sum.¹⁶ Many soldiers¹7 will be dismissed.¹³ We shall arrange¹⁰ a meeting.⁵⁰ They walked²¹ in the grove.²² We have complied²³ with his request.²⁴ She caressed²⁵ her mother.²⁶ The culprit²7 has been acquitted.²³ I stand security²⁰ for him.³⁰ He will soon be set free.³¹ She is [being] held in high esteem³² by all.³³ Have you already breakfasted?³⁴ We breakfast at nine o'clock. I have handled³⁵ the bow.³⁶ The painter³⊓ has finished³³ the picture.³⁰ The sentence⁴⁰ will immediately⁴¹ be put⁴² in execution.

¹ To come in, hereinfommen. ² To foretell, wetherfagen. ⁵ The thief, ber Dieb. ⁴ To run away, bavonlaufen. (See § 67, 2). ⁵ To go out, hinausgeßen. ⁶ To miss the mark, wetfeispießen. ¹ To hazard, baransegen. ⅙ His life, sein £eben. ⁶ To acknowledge, anertennen. ¹⁰ Your kindness, ħtre Gûte. ¹¹ To admit, eingesteßen. ¹² His error, seinen ∃retthum (acc.) ¹³ The conditions, bie Bebingungen. ¹⁴ To agree upon, verabreben. ¹⁵ To expend, verausgaben. ¹⁶ A large sum, eine große Summe. ¹¹ Many soldiers, viele Solbaten. ¹⁵ To dismiss, verabsstichen. ¹⁵ To arrange, verausfatten. ²⁰ A meeting, eine Busammenfunst. ²¹ To walk (for pleasure), lustwanbein. ²² In the grove, in bem Sain. ²³ To comply with, willsahren. ²⁴ His request, seiner Bitte (dat.) ²⁵ To caress, liebtesen. ²⁰ Her mother, ihre Mutter. ²¹ The culprit, ber Berbrecher. ²⁵ To acquit, freißrechen. ²⁰ To stand socurity, gutfagen. ²⁰ For him, sûr thm. ³¹ To set free, freilassen. ²⁰ To hold in high esteem, hochachten. ³³ By all, von Milen. ³⁴ To breakfast, früßflüsten. ³⁵ To handle, hanbhaben. ³⁰ The bow, ben Begen (acc.) ³¹ The painter, ber Maler. ³³ To sinish, vollenben. ³⁰ The picture, baß Bitb. ⁴⁰ The sentence, baß ltrtheil. ⁴¹ Immediately, sosseich. ⁴² To put in execution, vollstreden.

§ 112. The German language abounds with phrases which come under the category of compound verbs, inasmuch as, although compound in form, yet in signification they express the simple notion of a verb. They are, therefore, used like separable compound verbs. For example:—Danf fagen, to thank, or return thanks; Saus halten, to keep house: Statt finden, to take place; Preis geben, to abandon, expose; Stand halten, to keep one's ground; zu Stande bringen, to accomplish; zu Stande kommen, to be brought about, arrive at completion; zu Bülfe kommen, to come to one's aid; zu Grunde richten, to ruin; zu Grunde geben, to be ruined; Theil nehmen, to take part; Trop bieten, to defy; Hohn sprechen, to mock; Rede stehen, to answer; zur Rede stellen or setzen, to call to account; bas Wort reben, to defend; zu Theil werben, to fall to one's lot; im Stiche laffen, to leave behind, or in the lurch; in Unspruch nehmen, to lay claim to; fürlieb (or vorlieb) nehmen, to be content, to put up with; inne werben, to perceive ; zum Borfchein fommen, to appear ; zu Leide thun, to harm; Acht geben, to pay attention; in Acht nehmen, to take care. Such expressions may be compared with the Latin verba facere, to make words—that is, to speak; open ferre, to bring help—that is, to help; and others.

EXERCISE XXIII.

I have returned thanks to him.¹ The meeting² has not taken place. ¹ To him, ihm. 2 The meeting, the Berfammlung. 5 To seduction, ber Berführung. 4 Our principles, unfre Grundsäge. 5 The work, tas Werk. 5 The alliance, bas Bündniß. 7 Untoward circumstances, witermattige Berhältniffe. 5 His business, sein Geschäft. 9 In the game, an bem Spiele. 10 All obstacles, assen Sinternissen (dat.) 12 His friends, seine Freunte. 13 To your forbearance, 3hre Nachsicht (acc.) 14 With little, mit Wenigem.

THE SUBSTANTIVE AND ITS KINDS.

- § 113. The substantive is a word which expresses the idea of an existence—that is, of a person or thing. Substantives are divided into concrete and abstract. A concrete substantive is the name of an object which can be perceived by the senses, or which really exists; as—Mann, man; Frau, woman; Stabt, town; Fluß, river; Bogel, bird; Sonne, sun; Waffer, water. An abstract substantive is the name of a thing which is only conceived by the mind as having an independent existence; as—Sprung, leap; Fall, fall; Freude, joy; Schlaf, sleep; Schönheit, beauty; Thorheit, folly.
- § 114. The concrete substantives are divided into common names, proper names, collective names, and names of materials.
- 1. A common name is a name common to all the individuals of the same class of persons or things; as—Mann, man; Engel, angel; Gund, dog; Stadt, town; Fluß, river; Baum, tree; Bogel, bird.
- 2. A proper name is a name which is proper or peculiar to the individual person or thing bearing it, and therefore distinguishes one individual from all other individuals of the same kind; as—Luther, Karl, Europa, England, London, Themse.
- 3. Names of materials are names of things which do not admit of any distinction of individuals or of number, but only of quantity; as—Waser, water; Wein, wine; Sand, sand; Bucker, sugar; Wehl, meal; Staub, dust.
- 4. A collective name expresses a plurality of individual persons or things of the same kind represented as a whole; as—Bolf, people; Geer, army; Bieh, cattle; Briefterschaft, priesthood; Gebirge, range of mountains; Gewölf, collection of clouds.
 - § 115. Abstract substantives are divided into-
- 1. Names of actions; as—Sprung, leap; Blick, look; Ruf, call; Schlag, stroke; Fall, fall; Geheul, howling; Geraffel, rattling.

- 2. Names of conditions; as—Friebe, peace; Freube, joy; Kurcht, fear; Schlaf, sleep; Rube, rest; Schlafeit, bliss.
- 3. Names of qualities; as Schönheit, beauty; Alter, age; Jugend, youth; Größe, greatness; Weisheit, wisdom; Thorbeit, folly.
- § 116. When adjectives and infinitives are used in the sense of substantives, they are termed adjective substantives, and verbal substantives respectively, to distinguish them from substantives proper. For example:—die Beißen, the sages; die Gelehrten, the learned; daß Schöne, the beautiful; daß Singen, the singing; daß Reißen, the travelling.

XIII.

THE ARTICLE, AND ITS CONNECTION WITH THE SUBSTANTIVE.

§ 117. The article serves to single out an object from among other objects of the same class. An object thus singled out can be of a more or less definite kind, and hence we distinguish between a definite article-ber, bie, bas, theand an indefinite article-ein, eine, ein, a, an. For example :der König von England, the King of England; die Könige von Preugen und von Sachsen, the Kings of Prussia and of Saxony; es war einmal ein König, there was once a king. The definite article has different forms for the three genders, the masculine (ber), the feminine (bie), and the neuter (bas), by which it points out the gender of its substantive. forms of the indefinite article are less perfect. Both articles being declinable, they agree with the substantive not only in gender, but also in case and number. The plural of the definite article is the same for all the three genders; the indefinite can, from its nature, have a singular only.

Note.

Formerly, the German language had no article. Der, bie, bas, is originally a demonstrative pronoun, meaning 'that.' It was used, however, in the capacity of an article at a very early period; for, it appears as such in the old High-German language, although its use there is less indispensable, and of a more limited nature, than in the modern language. The use of the numeral ein, one, as an indefinite article, was not introduced till the ninth century. In old High-German, it had the force of an indefinite pronoun, meaning 'some one,' the Latin quidam, aliquis.

§ 118. DECLENSION OF THE DEFINITE ARTICLE.

Acc.	ben,	die,	das,	die,	the.

DECLENSION OF THE INDEFINITE ARTICLE.

	SINGULAR.
M	ASCULINE.	FEMININE.	NEUTER.	RNGLISH.
Nom.	ein,	eine,	ein,	a.
Gen.	eines,	einer,	eines,	of a.
Dat.	einem,	einer,	einem,	to a.
Acc.	einen,	eine,	ein,	_ a,

The definite article is often contracted with prepositions, as—

a.	am for	an bem.	c.	an's	\mathbf{for}	an bas.
	beim	bei bem.		auf's	٠	auf das.
	im	in bent.		burdy's		burch bas.
	vom	von dem.		für'ŝ		für das.
	zum	zu bem.				in das.
b .	zur	zu ber.		um's		um das.

Note.

Other contractions, such as unterm, überm, hinterm, unter's, über's, hinter's, miter's, &c., are generally avoided by good authors, although they occur pretty often in common conversation. But forms like aufm for auf tem, ausm for aus bem, burch for burch ben, are very inelegant, because offensive to the ear.

- § 119. Common Names generally have one of the two articles, except in the following cases:—
- 1. There is no article required in the plural of common names, when the singular has the indefinite article; as—cin

Rind, a child, plural Kinder, children; ein Buch, a book, plural Bücher, books.

- 2. The article is dispensed with in a great number of phrases, in which a common name is joined to a preposition, to express various adverbial relations; as—bei Tische, at table; bei Hose, at court; nach Hose, to court; zu Bett, to bed; zu Tische, to dinner or supper, literally, to table; zu Martte, to market; zu Fuß, on foot; zu Pserbe, on horseback; zu Wagen, in a coach; zu House, at home; nach House, home, &c.
- 3. A common name, when used as a title before a proper name, or as a title or heading of a book, takes no article; as—Gerr Müller, Mr Müller; Doctor Luther, Doctor Luther; Deutsche Grammatif, German grammar; Borrebe, preface.
- § 120. The definite article is employed in German, contrary to the usage of the English language, to represent the whole genus of a thing expressed by a common name. For example:—ber Nenfth ift mit Bernunft begabt, man is endowed with reason. Der Fisch schwimmt und der Bogel sliegt, (all) fishes swim, and (all) birds fly. Die Eichen sind schöne Bäume, oaks are sine trees.
- § 121. Proper Names are generally used without any article, except in the following cases:—
- 1. Names of rivers, seas, lakes, mountains, and forests take the definite article; as—bie Elbe; the Elbe; bie Norbsee, the German Ocean; ber Bobensee, the lake of Constance; ber Brocken, the Brocken; ber Harz mountains; ber Böhmerwalb, the Bohemian forest.
- 2. The names of those countries and towns which are of the masculine or feminine gender, take the definite article; as—bie Schweiz, Switzerland; bie Türkei, Turkey; ber Mheingau, the circle of the Rhine (in Nassau); ber Hague. Also the names of those countries which are used only in the plural; as—bie Nieberlande, the Netherlands.
- 3. The names of months take the definite article; e.g.—ber April ift veranterlich, April is changeable.
- 4. When a proper name is qualified by an adjective, it takes the definite article; as—ber große Nelson, great Nelson; bas majestictifche Benebig, majestic Venice.

- 5. A proper name takes an article, either the definite or indefinite, according as the connection may require, when it is used in the sense of a common name, or when several individuals have the same name in common; as—ein Luther, a (man like) Luther; die Raphaels unser Zeit, the Raphaels of our time; ein Bourbon, a Bourbon; die Bourbonen, the Bourbons.
- 6. With names of persons, the definite article is sometimes used in its primitive meaning—namely, that of a demonstrative pronoun; e.g.—Da ift ber Tell, Sch., there is that (well-known man) Tell.
- 7. Sometimes the definite article is employed with proper names merely for the purpose of indicating the case, especially when the proper name cannot be inflected; as—ber Tob bed Sofrated, the death of Socrates. Augustus adoptive ben Tiberius, Augustus adopted Tiberius. Den Hefter hat Aeneas überlebt, Aeneas survived Hector.
- 8. The names das Elhstum, elysium; das Baradies, paradise; der Tartarus, Tartarus; die Hölle, hell; der Himmel, heaven; die Borsehung, providence, are always used with an article, except in the phrase gen Himmel, towards heaven.
- § 122. Names of materials do not usually require an article. There are only two exceptions:—
- 1. When the name of a material assumes the nature of a common name, one species being distinguished from other species of a like material; as—cin Salz, a (species of) salt; die Salze, the salts or kinds of salt; cin Wein, a (kind of) wine; die französsischen Weine, the French wines; die Milch ist sauer, the milk (that is, this particular milk) is sour.
- 2. When the entire genus of a material is to be expressed, the definite article is generally used; e.g.—bas Wasser ist sarblos, water is colourless. Das Queckfilber ist ein flüssiges Metall, quicksilver is a liquid metal. Der Wein erfreut bes Menschen Herz, G., wine gladdens the heart of man.
- § 123. Collective Substantives are, according to circumstances, used with or without an article:—bas Bolf, the people; in Bolf, a people; bie Bölfer Europas, the nations of Europe. Er halt Bieh, he keeps cattle. Das Bieh hat sich verlausen, the cattle are straying.

§ 124. Abstract Substantives do not require an article, except when they signify actions. For example: - Der Mensch muß Ruhm und Tabel ertragen lernen, G., man must learn to bear both praise and censure. Glud macht Muth, G., success gives courage. Der Bang nach bem Gifenhammer, Sch., the walk to the forge. Gin Schrei ertonte, a cry was heard. But even names of conditions and qualities frequently take an article, not only when the abstract notion is individualised, as in ber Friede ber Seele, the peace of the soul; bie Liebe Gottes, the love of God; but often also when the abstract idea is used in a general sense, as in bas Leben ift furz, life is short; die Beit vergeht, time passes away; die Liebe macht ben Bettler reich, Tieck, love makes a beggar rich; ber Alpenfäger liebt bie Gefahr, Jacobs, the hunter of the Alps loves danger. In the latter case, the definite article serves at the same time to shew the case of the substantive; e.g.-Bore bie Stimme gutes Raths und ber Bernunft, G., hear the voice of good counsel and of reason. Es fallt bei und feine Thrane, als die Thrane ber Freude und Dankbarfeit, Kr., there is no tear shed among us, except the tear of joy and gratitude.

§ 125. When two or more substantives of the same gender and number are joined together, the article, if required at all, is put before the first substantive only. For example: bie Gnade, Weisheit, und Liebe Gottes, the mercy, wisdom, and love of God. Die Freunde und Nachbarn dieses Mannes, the friends and neighbours of this man. But when substantives thus connected are not of the same gender and number, the article is put before each; as-er bewies die Kraft und ben Muth eines Löwen, he shewed the strength and courage of a lion. Die Mutter und die Schweftern find ausgegangen, the mother and the sisters are gone out. Ihr Bater erinnerte fle an die Würde und Erhabenheit der Tugend, ihre Mutter an die Stute und ben Troft, ben fle gewährt, her father reminded her of the dignity and sublimity of virtue, her mother of the support and consolation it affords. In like manner, the omission of the article is not admissible, if the substantives placed side by side have an antithetical force, even though they be of the same gender and number. instance, in ber Fürst, ber Bürger, ber Bauer, the prince, the citizen, the peasant, &c., the article must be put before each noun; and so also in ber Bater und ber Sohn, the father and the son.

Note

These remarks hold good with regard to pronouns and adjectives also; e. g.—Ich bin burchrungen von seiner Gnabe und Liebe, I am filled with a sense of his mercy and love. Die unaussprechtiche Gnabe und Liebe bes Herrn, the inestable mercy and love of the Lord. Er hat die Freube und Hossiffnung seines Unters und seiner Mutter vernichtet, he has destroyed the joy and hope of his father and mother. Seine große Krast und sein großer Muth, his great strength and courage.

- § 126. When a substantive in the genitive stands immediately before another substantive, by which it is governed, the article is omitted before the latter; as—Gottes Weisheit, the wisdom of God. Weines Baters Haus, my father's house. Der Tugend Pfab ift anfangs steil, the path of virtue is steep at first. Des Königs Ehre ist mir heilig, Sch., the king's honour is sacred to me.
- § 127. The definite article is employed, instead of the indefinite, in such expressions as—brei Thaler die Elle, three dollars a yard; zweimal die Boche, twice a week; zehn Meilen den Tag, ten miles a day.
- § 128. There is no article used in the following and some similar phrases:—in Wuth, in a passion; in Eile, in a hurry; mit schwacher Stimme, in a faint voice; ich habe Kopsweh, I have a headache; ich habe Lust, I have a mind or desire. Neither is the practice of putting the indefinite article before 'few, hundred, thousand,' adopted in German; as—wenige Weilen, a few miles; hundert Schritte, a hundred steps; tausend Jahre, a thousand years.

XIV.

THE GENDER OF SUBSTANTIVES.

§ 129. The German language has three genders—the masculine, feminine, and neuter. In the appellations of persons and of those animals in which the language distinguishes the natural sex, the grammatical gender corresponds with the natural sex; as—ber Mann, the man; die Frau, the woman; der Wolf, the wolf; die Wölfin, the she-wolf.

Notes.

- 1. Das Beib, the woman, wife, and bas Mensch, the wench, are exceptions. Also compounds like bas Frauenzimmer, the woman; the Manneperson, the male person; and such derivatives as—bas Matchen, the girl; bas Grausch, the little boy, &c., in all of which the last component (Jimmer, Person) or the derivative suffix (hen, sein) determines the gender.
- 2. Some generic names of living beings—that is, names denoting the kind, without having regard to the sex-are of the neuter gender; for instance—bas Kint, the child; bas Reh, the roe; bas Pfert or bas Ros, the horse; bas Füllen, the foal; bas Lanum, the lamb; bas Raib, the calf; tas Nind, the neat (bovine animal); tas Schaf, the sheep; tas Schwein, the pig; tas Ferfel, the young pig; tas Suhn, the fowl. A few names of animals, peculiar to foreign countries and bearing un-German names, are likewise neuter; as-tas Kameel, the camel; tas Dremetar, the dromedary; tas Rrefevil, the crocodile: tas Lama, the llama; tas Zebra, the zebra; tas Ranguruh, the kangaroo; tas Onu, the gnu, &c. But the generic names of most other animals are masculine or feminine; as-ter Moter, the eagle; ter Fifth, the fish; ter Frosch, the frog; bie Schwalbe, the swallow; bie Flicac, the fly; tie Machtigall, the nightingale. Generic terms denoting the human species are masculine; as-ter Wlenfth, man, the human being (the Latin homo); ber Bwilling, the twin; ber Saugling, the suckling; ber Liebling. the favourite; ber Findling, the foundling, &c.; excepting bie Berfon, the person; tie Baije, the orphan, and bas Kint, the child.
- § 130. All names of things should be of the neuter gender; but by a kind of personification the German language assigns the masculine or feminine gender even to many names of things. The gender of such substantives may be ascertained partly from their meaning, partly and principally from their form.
- § 131. The meaning determines the gender of names of things in the following cases:—
- 1. The names of seasons, months, and days are masculine, except das Jahr, the year.
 - 2. The names of stones and mountains are masculine.
- 3. Most proper names of rivers are feminine; except ber Mhein, der Main, der Necfar, der Lech, der Inn, &c.; and many rivers belonging to foreign countries, as—der Po, der Nil, der Ganges, der Wiffisppi, &c.

Note.

Some names of foreign rivers, originally masculine, are in German used as feminine, in accordance with the prevailing analogy of the language; e.g.—bie Rhone, bie Tiber, bie Themje.

- 4. Proper names of countries and towns are neuter, excepting those of countries ending in ei, au, and z, which are feminine, and die Mark, die Krim, die Levante, die Ufraine, der Beloponnes, der Haag; and also those compounded with Gau, district, which are masculine from the gender of the last component.
- 5. The names of metals are neuter, except—ber Tomback, pinchbeck; ber Stahl, steel; ber Zink, zinc; ber Kobalt, cobalt; ber Wismuth, bismuth; die Platina, platina.
- 6. All words which have not been substantives originally, but which are used as such, to express abstract ideas or names of things, are of the neuter gender; as—bas Wenn und das Moer, the if and but; das U und D, the alpha and omega; das Schöne, the beautiful; das Erhabene, the sublime; and all infinitives used in the sense of substantives; as—bas Reisen, the travelling; das Lesen, the reading; das Leben, the life
- § 132. The form determines the gender in the following cases:—
 - 1. Monosyllabic substantives are masculine.

This rule, according to rule 6, extends also to those compound substantives of which a masculine monosyllable forms the last component, and therefore embraces a very large number of words. But, at the same time, it is subject to a great many exceptions, which are contained in the two subjoined lists. For the sake of completeness, these lists contain also such substantives as fall under the rules and exceptions given in §§ 129 and 131.

insight; Mudiicht, regard, &c., which are all of the feminine gender.

2 Wormand, pretence, and Mufwand, expense, are masculine.

5 Ganemurft, jack-pudding, is masculine from its signification.

Notes.

- 1. There are to be added to this list a small number of substantives compounded with such feminine monosyllables as are no longer used as simple nouns. A few of the subjoined compounds, however, have assumed the feminine gender solely from their analogous mode of derivation, the simple noun never having been in use at all:—bit Antunft, arrival; bit Sutunft, future, and others compounded with funft; bit Antunft, devotion (but ber Berbacht, suspicion; ber Berbacht, consideration); bit Müdfehr and bit Wichterfehr, return (but ber Berbacht, intercourse); bit Mügfehr and bit Michteuft, exigency, necessaries; bit Anfalt, preparation, establishment; bit Machicht, intelligence (but ber Bericht, report); bit Ginfalt, simplicity; bit Geogfalt, carefulness; bit Arbeit, labour; bit Bernunft, reason; bit Bergicht, renunciation.
- 2. The seemingly abnormal gender of many monosyllabic feminine substantives is to be accounted for by their derivation. A considerable number of words contained in the above list are formed from stems by means of a change of vowel, and have at the same time assumed, in place of the old High-German a or i, the termination c, or the hard or soft lingual consonant with or without c (t, tc, b, bc). Substantives of this description, with very few exceptions, are of the feminine gender. This is the reason why most words ending in t or b in the preceding list are feminine; as, among others—Bucht from biegen; Kapit and Kurt from saften; Blucht from jiegen; Wluth from glühen; Gruft from gruben; Jage from jagen; Wacht from mogen, Naht from nahen; Pflicht from pflegen; Saat from saen; Schlacht from schlagen; Schrift from schreiben; Schult from the old High-German scolan—that is, sollen, shall, to be obliged; That from thun; Trift from treiben; Wucht from wiegen; Rucht from thun; Trift from treiben; Wucht from wiegen; Rucht from thesen; Rucht from treiben; Rucht from treiben; Rucht from treiben; Rucht from treiben; Rucht from schware and follow the same gender, as—Brunuft from brennen; Gunft from schware; Kunft from from irennen; Gunft from schware; Kunft from from irennen; Gunft from schware; Kunft from treibenen; Schwust from schware, Kunft from treibenen; Schwust from schware, Kunft from schware, Ke. The same law of derivation accounts for the gender of some substantives with the augment ge, as—Gebarte, Geburt, Geschict, and others. A few among the feminine monosyllables had in old High-German the termination a, which, though not supplied by e in new High-German, sasigns them to the feminine gender, as—Lual, Schun, 3ahl, Schur. Bein; in old High-German, quala, scama, zala, scara, pina.

As in bas erste Mal, the first time; bas zweite Mal, the second time.
 Bereich, extent, sphere, compass, is masculine.
 Das Schoef is used of things sold by number, as—ein Schoef Birnen, sixty pears.

bas Schrot, due weight; bas Volf, nation. small shot. " Wachs, wax. " Schwein, pig. " Wamme, vest, jacket. " Schwert, sword. " Weh, wo. † " Wehr, wear. " Seil, rope. " Weib, woman. " Sieb, sieve. " Spiel, play. " Werg, tow. † " Stift, a foundation. " Werk, work. " Stroh, straw. " Wild, game. " Stud, piece. " Wohl, wellbeing. " Tau, cable. " Wort, word.1 .. That, valley. " Wrack, wreck. t .. Theil, share, portion. " Belt, tent. .. Thier, animal. " Zeug, stuff. t " Thor, gate. " Biel, limit. " Tuch, cloth. " Zinn, tin. " Bieh, cattle.

1 Antwort, answer, is feminine.

Note

The following compounds are also neuter, the simple nouns of which they are formed not being used:—bas Antlig, face; has Begeft, desire; bas Befted, case (of instruments); has Dreied, triangle; has Diered, square; and others compounded with Ed, corner; has Aleinob, jewel; has Derbot, prohibition (analogous with has Gebot, commandment); has Berted, deck; has Berließ, dungeon. Das Elenb, misery, is a contraction for the old High-German elienlenti (in middle High-German eliende), which means 'another land, foreign land, exile.'

2. Substantives ending in el, em, cn, er, ing, ling, ig, fam, are masculine.

The terminations el, en, er, ing, however, are subject to the following exceptions.

Note.

The subjoined lists of exceptions are considerably swelled by a great number of substantives taken from the Latin and Greek languages. Although slightly altered in form, they have nevertheless in most instances retained their original gender, as—bie Babel, from the Latin fabula; bie Incl. from insula; bie Regel, from regula; bie Barabel, from the Greek $\pi \alpha e \alpha e \beta o \beta o$ (parabole); bie Gener, from the Latin cedrus; has Drafel, from oraculum; has Klester, from claustrum; has Siegel, from sigillum, &c. There are also included in the following lists such substantives as fall under the general rules in §§ 129 and 131, but they are repeated here for the sake of completeness.

a. FEMININE EXCEPTIONS:-

'IN el-

" Umfel, black-bird. " Angel, hook. " Uurifel, auricula. " Bibel, Bible. + " Buckel, boss. " Chmbel, cymbal. " Dattel, date. " Deichsel, carriage-pole. " Diftel, thistle. " Droffel, thrush. Notes.

- 1. In some of these feminine substantives er is, strictly speaking, not a suffix, but forms part of the stem, as in Feier, Mauer, Scheuer, Dauer, Eauer, Stauer, in old High-German vira, mura, sciura, &c. This old termination a, although in these instances not supplied by e, accounts for their having the feminine gender.
- 2. The names of rivers ending in er or el are also feminine, according to the general rule in § 131, 3; e. g.—bie Ober, die Weser, die Aller, die Mosel, die Misel, die Misel.

Note.

Münster, minster, occurs both as masculine—from its present German form-and as neuter-from its derivation from the Latin monasterium.

EXCEPTION IN ing:das Messing, brass.

3. Substantives ending in e, ung, beit, feit, schaft, end, in, et, are feminine.

a. MASCILLINE EXCEPTIONS IN e:-

ber Buchstabe, letter of the alphabet.

" Friede, peace.

" Falke, falcon.

" Sase, hare.

" Lowe, lion.

" Rabe, raven.
" Käse, cheese.

And names of male persons; as—ber Bote, the messenger; ber Anabe, the boy, &c.

b. NEUTER EXCEPTIONS IN e:-

bas Auge, eye. bas Enbe, end bas Ende, end. +bas Erbe, inheritance.

Exceptions in ung, schaft, end:-

ber Hornung, February. bas Betschaft, seal.

ber Abend, evening. das Dukend, dozen.

Note

The terminations ut and at occur only in a very small number of originally German words which take the feminine gender; namely—bie Urmut, poverty; bie Scimat, home; bie Scitat(b), marriage. Der Sierat, ornament, is an exception. Foreign words in ut and at do not come under this rule.

4. Substantives ending in then, lein, sal, sel, niß, thum, are neuter.

Exceptions in niß:-

bie Bebrangniß, distress.

" Befugnif, authority.

" Befümmerniß, sorrow.

" Besorgnis, apprehension.

" Betrübniß, affliction.

"Bewandtniß, conjuncture.

5. Substantives which have the augment ge are neuter, with the following exceptions:—

a. MASCULINE-der Gebrauch, usage.

" Gedanke, thought.

" Gefallen, favour.

† " Gehalt, value, contents.

" Genuß, enjoyment.

ber Geruch, smell.

" Gefang, singing.

" Geschmad, taste.

" Geftant, stink.

" Gewinn, gain.

b. FEMININE-

die Gebarde, mien.

" Gebühr, propriety.

" Geburt, birth.

" Gebulb, patience.

" Gefahr, danger.

" Semeinde, community, parish.

bie Genüge, sufficiency.

" Geschichte, history.

" Geschwulst, swelling.

" Gestalt, shape.

" Gewähr, security, guarantee.

" Gewalt, power.

The names of persons are also excepted, their gender being determined by their meaning; and likewise substantives ending in ung, heit, feit, fchaft, fam, which take the gender assigned to them by their termination.

6. Compound substantives follow the gender of their last component. Stand, for example, being of the masculine gender, Berftand, Aufftand, Buftand, Gegenstand, Umstand, &c., are also masculine. Similarly, Buch being neuter, Gandbuch, Laschenbuch, Lesebuch, are likewise neuter.

A few substantives compounded with Muth are excepted, namely:— bie Anmuth, grace.

" Demuth, humility.

" Großmuth, generosity.

" Langmuth, long-suffering.

bie Sanftmuth, meekness.

" Schwermuth, melancholy.

" Wehmuth, sorrowfulness.

Also ber Mittwoon, Wednesday, according to the analogy of the other days of the week.

7. Foreign substantives usually retain their original gender; as—ber Kerfer, prison, from carcer; die Natur, nature, from natura; das Kloster, cloister, from claustrum. Hence all substantives ending in ie, ion, tät, if, enz, ur, are feminine.

Some of those, however, which are assimilated in their form to substantives originally German, have assumed a gender analogous with their form, not with their origin. The following are worthy of special notice:—

a. MASCULINE-ber Altar, altar, from the Latin altare, n.

" or bas Ratheber, lecturing-desk, Latin cathedra, f.

" Rörper, body, Latin corpus, n.

" Marsch, march, French la marche, f.

" Palast, palace, Latin palatium, n.

" Pfesser, pepper, Latin piper, n. Bunft, point, Latin punctum, n.

" Burpur, purple, Latin purpura, f.

" Ruin, ruin, Latin ruina, f.

" Salat, salad, French la salade, f.

" Tempel, temple, Latin templum, n.

b. FEMININE-

bie Bibel, Bible, Greek βιελίον (biblion), n.

" Chutbel, cymbal, Latin cymbalum, n.

" Etage, story of a house, French l'étage, m.

" Ranone, cannon, French le canon, 111.

" Lilie, lily, Latin lilium, n.

bie Dielone, melon, French le melon, m.

" Pramie, premium, Latin praemium, n.

" Rosine, raisin, French le raisin, m.

" Bocabel, vocable, Latin vocabulum, n.

" Bitrone, lemon, French le citron, m.

c. NEUTER-

bas Bajonet, bayonet, French la bayonnette, f.

" Edio, echo, Latin echo, f.

" Fenster, window, Latin fenestra, f.

" Fieber, fever, Latin febris, f.

" Rrofodil, crocodile, Latin crocodilus, m.

" Labyrinth, labyrinth, Latin labyrinthus, m.

" Paradies, paradise, Latin paradisus, m.

" Bulver, powder, Latin pulvis, m.

" Consulate, Latin consulatus, m.

And other substantives in at, derived from Latin masculines ending in—atus.

Note.

As the French language has no neuter gender, names of things which in it are masculine are in many instances made neuter in German; but some remain masculine. For example:—bas Billet, ticket, le billet; bas Genie, genius, le génie; bas Bortrat, portrait, le portrait; bas Errain; ground, locality, le terrain; bas Refultat, result, le résultat; bas Duartier, quarter, le quartier. But masculine—ber Pas, step, le pas; bet Degout, disgust, le dégoût, &c.

§ 133. A number of substantives have two genders, with a different signification for each. In some instances this is attributable to the fact, that in different dialects different genders had sometimes been assigned to the same word, and that the High-German language has availed itself of this circumstance to impart to such words a diversity of meaning according to their gender. But in other substantives the difference of gender is caused by their belonging to two different stems. Words of the latter description are marked in the subjoined list by an asterisk:—

ber Band, volume of a book. bas Band, ribbon, tie.

" Bauer, peasant.

" Buckel, hump.

" Bund, alliance.

" Chor, chorus.

" Bauer, bird-cage.

die Buckel, boss.

THE DECLENSION OF SUBSTANTIVES.

§ 134. Declension in general consists, like conjugation, in the affixing of terminations, and in the case of substantives, sometimes also in the modifying of the vowel of the stem. In declension are distinguished two numbers—namely, singular and plural; and four cases in each number—namely, nominative, genitive (or possessive), dative (or person-case), accusative (or objective).

§ 135. There are two declensions—the strong (or ancient), and the weak (or modern). Every substantive is declined according to either the one or the other.

Words of the strong declension take in the singular the termination es for the genitive, and e for the dative, the accusative being the same as the nominative. In the plural, they take e in the nominative, genitive, and accusative, and en in the dative. Words of the weak declension take the termination en (or simply n) in all cases except the nominative singular. A number of words of the strong declension, moreover, have their vowel modified in the plural, whilst all words of the weak declension leave their vowel unchanged.

Certain words of the strong declension lose the vowel ¢ in all the inflectional terminations, so that the only terminations which require to be affixed are—$\varphi$ in the genitive singular, and n in the dative plural, if the word itself does not end in n or n. This is called the contracted form of the strong declension.

Another class of words of the strong declension take in the plural the enlarged termination er in the nominative, genitive, and accusative, and ern in the dative; all the cases of the singular, however, retaining the primary terminations of the strong declension. This is called the enlarged form of the strong declension.

§ 136. The strong declension comprises substantives of all three genders, but principally of the masculine and neuter. A small number of feminine substantives are declined by the primary form, two by the contracted form, but none by the enlarged. The weak declension comprehends only masculine and feminine substantives, § 137. All feminine substantives remain unchanged in the singular, whether they belong to the strong or weak declension in the plural.

Note.

The general practice of leaving the singular of feminine substantives unchanged was not introduced till the last two or three centuries. In the old High-German language all feminine substantives were declined both in the singular and plural; and in the middle High-German this custom was kept up nearly in its whole extent. But in the language of the present day it occurs only in some peculiar expressions (as—31 Chunften, in behalf; auf Erden, upon earth; in Gnaden, with favour, &c.), and in poetry; e.g.—Bersteuet cuch, ihr Lämmer auf der Heiden, Sch., disperse, you lambs, upon the heath. Schul wie das slinsert in der Sonnen, Sch., see how that glitters in the sun. Bis zu einer geldnen Aforten du gesangst, Sch., till thou arrivest at a golden gate. Betrüglich sind de Güter deserve, Sch., tethings of this earth are deceptive.

Note.

The dropping of the vowel e in the inflectional terminations of the genitive and dative singular in the strong declension, is euphonic. In words of more than one syllable having an unaccented suffix, it is generally thrown out in the genitive; as-ber König, gen. bes Königs; ber Reichthum, gen. bes Reichthums; ber Jungling, gen. bes Junglings; ber Monat, gen. bes Monats. It is usually omitted in monosyllabic words also, if they have a long vowel and end in a liquid; as-ber Thron, gen. bes Throns; bas Thal, gen. bes Thals. But if a substantive has a short vowel and ends in a mute consonant, especially in b, b, t, ft, ch, g, f, the e is commonly retained. After 8, $ or $\iii$, $\infty$, and $\gamma$, it can never be thrown In the dative, however, the vowel e is generally retained even in such words as admit of its omission in the genitive; except when a word without an article follows after a preposition, as in-von Golb, of gold; oun Ctabl, of steel; mit Fleiß, with industry; aus Beiz, from avarice; gu Fuß, on foot; von Ort zu Ort, from place to place; mit Weib und Rind, with wife and child, &c.

In the weak declension, the vowel e is always dropped in words ending in e, t, or r; as—ber Knabe, gen. des Knaben; der Baier, plur. die Baiern; die Feber, plur. die Schuffel, plur. die Schuffeln.

SUBSTANTIVES DECLINED AFTER THE WEAK DECLENSION.

 \S 144. Feminine substantives generally follow the weak declension. The exceptions are mentioned in the preceding paragraph. The practice of leaving feminine substantives unchanged in the singular has been referred to in \S 137.

Feminines ending in in take the usual termination en in the plural, but at the same time double the n of the derivative suffix; as—Hirtin, shepherdess, plur. Hirtinnen; Gelbin, heroine, plur. Helbinnen; Göttin, goddess, plur. Göttinnen.

- § 145. Some masculine substantives likewise follow the weak declension; namely—
- 1. All those that end in e, except ber Kase, cheese (§ 141, 3). Examples:—ber Bote, messenger; ber Knabe, boy; ber Schüte, archer; ber Gefährte, companion; ber Löwe, lion; ber Hase. Also the names of nations ending in e, and some ending in er and ar; e.g.—ber Britte, Briton; ber Preuße, Prussian; ber Däne, Dane; ber Türk(e), Turk; ber Mohr(e), Moor; ber Baier, Bavarian; ber Kasser, Kasser; ber Ungar, Hungarian.

PLURAL.

2. The following monosyllables:—

```
ber Bar, bear :
                         bie Bären.
                         " Chriften. " Finfen.
" Christian;
" Fint, finch;
" Fürft, prince;
                         " Fürften.
" Ged, fop;
                         " Gecten.
" Graf, count;
                          " Grafen.
" Seld, hero;
                         " Selben.
" herr, master ;
                         " Herren.
" Sirt, herdsman;
                       " Sirten.
                         " Menfchen.
" Menfch, man :
" Marr, fool;
                         " Marren.
" Merv, nerve;
                          " Nerven.
                         " Ochsen.
∥ Dáhô, ox;
" Pring, prince;
                         " Bringen.
" Thor, fool;
                           " Thoren.
```

And the compounds-

ber Hagestolz, old bachelor; bie Hagestolzen.

" Vorsahr, ancestor; " Vorsahren.

Note

The words mentioned under 2 were not originally monosyllables. They had in old High-German the termination o peculiar to adjectives, which in most instances passed into e in middle High-German; and even in the language of the present day this c is sometimes retained, as it generally is in the words referred to under 1. For example:—old High-German herro, which is a contraction for herro, meaning 'a higher one, a superior;' middle High-German herre, new High-German herre of the forement, the first;' middle High-German vürste; new High-German vürste. Old High-German mennisco, an adjective formed from man by means of the suffix isc, modern ifd, hence 'manlike, manly;' middle High-German mensche; new High-German Menfch. Old High-German pero; middle High-German ber; new High-German värste. In the same manner Graf, vint, Oche, and the rest, have thrown off the primitive termination.

PECULIARITIES IN DECLENSION.

§ 146. The following substantives ending in $\mathfrak e$ are declined by the weak declension through singular and plural, but take in the genitive singular the strong termination $\mathfrak e$ in addition to the weak termination $\mathfrak n$:—

ber Buchstabe, letter of the alphabet;
" Friede, peace; " Friedens.
" Funke, spark; " Funkens.

NOMINATIVE.	GENITIVE.
ber Gebanke, thought;	des Gebankens.
" Glaube, faith ;	" Glaubens.
" Saufe, heap;	" Haufens.
" Name, name ;	" Namens.
" Same, seed ;	" Samens.
" Schade, injury;	" Schabens.
" Wille, will;	" Willens.

The neuter das Gerz, heart, is similarly declined, except that it remains unchanged in the accusative singular:—Sing. nom. das Gerz, gen. des Gerzens, dat. dem Gerzen, acc. das Gerz; plur. die Gerzen, &c.

Note.

The irregularity of the above ten masculines is thus to be accounted for. They had in middle High-German the termination e, and followed the weak declension throughout; as—ber Name, gen. bes Namen, dat. bem Namen, &c.; but the modern language considered the inflectional ending en as a derivative termination, and accordingly followed in the declension of these nouns the analogy of similar words originally ending in en. It should be observed, moreover, that, owing to this circumstance, most words included in the above list are sometimes used, even by the best authors, with the termination n in the nominative; as—Funfen, Krieten, Samen, Schaben, Saufen, &c. One of them only takes a modified vowel in the plural, namely Schaten, plur. Schaben. See § 139, 2, a.

§ 147. The following masculine and neuter substantives follow the strong declension in the singular, but the weak in the plural:—

1. MASCULINES—

" Ohr, ear;	" Ohres;	" Ohren.

Note.

The substantives contained in this list followed formerly either the one or the other of the regular declensions. Their present anomalous mode of inflection has only gradually crept into the language.

§ 148. A number of substantives have a double plural, which has been caused by the reception of different forms from different dialects into the High-German language. This diversity of form has, in not a few instances, been employed to mark a difference of signification. The following deserve particular notice:—

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
das Band;	Bänder, ribbons ;	Bande, ties.
bie Bank;	Bänke, benches ;	Banten, commercial banks.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
der Dorn;	Dorne or Dörner, thorns;	Dornen, thorns (collectively).
bas Geficht;	Gefichter, faces ;	Gestate, visions.
das Horn;	Hörner, horns;	Sorne, kinds of horn.
ber Laben ;	Läden, shops;	Laben, shutters.
bas Land;	Länder, separate countries; 1	Lande, the various parts, provinces, or districts of the same kingdom or empire.
das Licht;	Lichte, candles;	Lidyter, lights.
ber Mond;	Monde, satellites;	Monden, months (poetic).
der Ort;	Derter (single) places; ²	Orte, places (collectively).
bie Sau;	Saue, sows ;	Sauen, wild boars.
der Strauß;	Strauße or Strau= ßen, ostriches;	Sträuße, nosegays.
bas Stück;	Stucke, pieces;	Stücken, fragments.
das Wort;	Wörter, single words;	Worte, coherent words.
ber ZoU;	Bolle, inches;	Bolle, tolls.

Notes

- 1. The following substantives commonly form the plural by the enlarged form of the strong declension:—bas Denfmal, monument, plur. Denfmaler; bas Genand, apartment, plur. Genander; bas Genand, garment, plur. Genander; bas Thal, valley, plur. Thater. But in works of poetry the following forms occur also:—bic Denfmale, Genande, Gefalechte, Genande, Thale.
- 2. Mann has, besides its common plural Manner, the form Mannen, meaning 'vassals,' more especially in their capacity of warriors. Substantives compounded with Mann form the plural by the collective Leute, when used in a collective or general sense; as—Murcitatente, work-people; Bergleute, miners; Exclleute, noblemen; Chelcute, married people; Fuhrleute, wagoners; Santleute, trades-people, shopkeepers; Raufleute, merchants; Lanbleute, country-people; Lanbsleute, people of the same country; Miethsleute, lodgers. But the ordinary form Manner must be employed if persons are considered as individuals, not as a class; as—Bietermänner, honest, or loyal men; Ehrenmänner, men of honour; Staatsmänner, statesmen; or if a sexual distinction is to be made, as in Ehenänner, husbands; Michsmänner, male lodgers. With some words of this description, however, the plural Leute has become so prevalent, that even the best authors use it under all circumstances; e.g.—Kauficute, Hoffcute, and others.

§ 149. In compound substantives, the last component only is declined; as—Handbuch, manual, gen. Handbuch, plur. Handbucher; Armband, bracelet, gen. Armbandes, plur. Armbander.

Two compounds of Macht, power, follow the weak, whilst the simple noun Macht follows the strong declension; namely—Dhumacht, fainting-fit, plur. Dhumachten; and Bollmacht, power of attorney, plur. Rollmachten.

DECLENSION OF FOREIGN SUBSTANTIVES.

- § 150. The following foreign substantives take the strong declension both in the singular and plural:—
- 1. Most names of things of the masculine and neuter genders; e.g.—ber Instinct, das Monument, das Problem, das Exemplar, das Diadem, &c. The following names of things take er in the plural:—das Hospital, das Spital, das Regiment.
- 2. Those names of male persons which end in al, ar, an, aner, and iner, being derived from Latin words in alis, arius, anus, inus; as—Karbinal, Bikar, Kaplan, Dominikaner, Benebittiner, &c. Likewise—Abt, Brobst, Papst, Bischof, Major, Watador, Spion, Patron, Magister, Offizier.
- § 151. The following are declined after the strong declension in the singular, after the weak in the plural:—
- 1. Those names of male persons which end in an unaccented or (Latin or); as—Brosessor, gen. Prosessor, plur. Brosessor.
- 2. Those neuter substantives which end in tiv (Latin tivum); as—Abjeftiv, gen. Abjeftive, plur. Abjeftiven. A few of this class, however, follow the strong declension throughout; as—Wotiv, Rezitativ, Bomitiv.
- 3. Those neuter substantives which had originally, or still have, the Latin termination ium or um, and also those neuters which end in al or il (Latin ale, ile). These have in the plural ien or en respectively. For example:—Stubium, gen. Stubium, plur. Stubien; Snbivibnum, gen. Individuum, gen. Individuum, gen. Evangelium, gen. Evangelium, gen. Evangelium, gen. Evangelium; Brinzip, gen. Prinzip, plur. Evangelium; Brinzip, gen. Material, gen. Material, plur. Materialien; Foffil, gen. Foffils, plur. Foffilien.
- 4. The following masculines:—Diamant, Fasan, Kapaun, Impost, Konsul, Muskel, Bräsekt, Bsalm, Rubin; and the neuters Insekt, Bronom, Statut, Verb.
- § 152. The following are declined by the weak declension both in the singular and plural (the feminines, however, remaining unchanged in the singular):—
- 1. All substantives of the feminine gender; as—Tinftur, Fafultät, Bone.

- 2. By far the greatest number of the appellations of male persons, more especially—
- a. Those ending in at, ant, ent, if (Latin atus, ans, ens, icus), aft, ift, oft, et, it, ot, and e; for instance—Abvokat, Brotestant, Student, Katholik, Bhantast, Jurist, Prophet, Jesuit, Idumne;
- b. Those compounded with log, soph, nom, arch, or similar Greek words; as—Theolog, Philosoph, Astronom, Batriarch, Demagog, Geograph;
- 3. These masculines: Dufat, Elephant, Konfonant, Komet, Blanet, Quotient, and others of a similar kind.
- § 153. Masculine and neuter substantives which belong to other modern languages and have retained their original foreign form unchanged, take & in the genitive singular, and likewise & in the plural; as—bie Lorde, Alube, Genies, Chefs, Fonds, Details, Banquiers, Acteurs, Porträts, Solos, Raftnos.

DECLENSION OF PROPER NAMES.

- § 154. Those proper names which are never used without an article—as, according to § 121, the names of rivers, seas, lakes, mountains, and forests, and the names of countries of the masculine or feminine gender—follow entirely the rules given for the declension of common names. But with regard to those proper names which are commonly used without an article—that is, names of persons, places, and neuter names of countries—the following rules are observed:—
- § 155. They take in the genitive the strong termination &; as—Karl, Karls; Friedrich, Friedrichs; Elisabeth, Elisabeths; Abelheids; Amerika, Amerikas; Berlin, Berlins.
- § 156. Names of females ending in e follow the weak declension, but take in the genitive the mixed termination end; as—Sophie, gen. Sophiens, dat. and acc. Sophien.
- § 157. Names of male persons ending in a sibilant (3, \(\bar{n}, \), \(x\), \(\bar{n}, \) also take ens in the genitive and sometimes en in the dative; as—Max, Maxens, Maxen; Suffens Anhänger, the adherents of Huss.
- § 158. Foreign names ending in a sibilant, especially such of them as have an unaccented termination, are not declined, and the case is pointed out by the definite article; for instance—bas Herr bes Herres, the army of Xerxes; bie Schriften bes Uriftoteles, the writings of Aristotle; bas Schwert ber Themis, the sword of Themis; bem Baulus, to Paul.

The same expedient is sometimes had recourse to, even with names which can be inflected in the genitive; e.g.—bie Briefe bes Cicero (or Cicero's Briefe), the epistles of Cicero.

With such names as do not take any inflectional termination in the dative, it is a very common practice to point out the case by means of the article, especially if this may serve to avoid ambiguities; as in—er zieht Göthe dem Schiller vor, he prefers Goethe to Schiller.

§ 159. Proper names of countries and places come under the general rule—that is, they take § in the genitive. But when, owing to the last consonant being a sibilant, the genitive cannot take the termination §, or whenever another case requires to be used, a common name is placed in apposition to the proper name; as—bie Mershurbigseiten der Stadt Paris, the sights of the city of Paris; der Beschlächaber der Festung Mains, the commander of the fortress of Mayence; dem Königreich Spanien ist Fransreich überlegen, France is superior in power to the kingdom of Spain. The relation of the genitive can, in such cases, be expressed by the preposition von; as in—die Bedölkerung von Paris, the population of Paris; die Lage von Cadir, the situation of Cadir.

Note.

The latter mode of expressing the relation of the genitive is not limited to names ending in a sibilant, but is often employed with names of places, and especially of countries generally, if the name follows the substantive by which it is governed; e.g.—bit Imagento von Frankfurt, the environs of Frankfort; bit Königin von England, the Queen of England, ber Kaifer von Rußlant, the Emperor of Russia.

§ 160. When proper names of persons are used in the plural, they follow the declension of common names—that is, those of male persons the strong, and those of females the weak; as die Heinriche; die Marien. The names of males ending in o sometimes take ne in the plural; as—Nero, Nerone. A few take nen; as—Scipio, Scipionen. Those ending in a, e, i, el, en, and er, remain unchanged in the plural; as—bie Seneca, die Schlegel.

Note.

The plural of names of families is sometimes formed in 8, when all or soveral members of the same family are spoken of collectively; for instance—Salzmann's fint verreif't, the Salzmanns are from home. Nuller's haten Befuch, the Müllers have visitors. Bir merten heute bei Schmidt's u Mittag speifen, we are going to dine to-day at the Schmidts.

§ 161. When the name of a person is preceded by an article, with or without an adjective, it is not declined in the singular; as—ber Schiller, bes Schiller, bem Schiller, ben Schiller; ber große Göthe, bes großen Göthe, bem großen Göthe, bem großen Göthe. This rule is only departed from when a name in the genitive case, and preceded by an adjective, is placed before the word by which it is governed; as—bes großen Friedrich's Thaten, great Frederick's deeds; bes berühnten Neander's Werke, the works of the celebrated Neander.

- § 162. Christian names, when placed before family names, are not declined; as—Ludwig Uhland's Ballaben, L. U.'s ballads; August Bilhelm von Schlegel's Schriften, A. W. Schlegel's writings.
- § 163. When a common name, indicating a person's title, dignity, or occupation, is placed before a proper name, the common name only is declined; as—bas Leben bes Kaisers Joseph, the life of the emperor Joseph; bie Besthungen bes Grafen von Mansfeld, the possessions of Count Mansfeld. But when the genitive without any article goes before the substantive by which it is governed, the proper name is declined; as—König Friedrick's Thaten, King Frederick's deeds; Doctor Martin Luther's birthplace.
- § 164. The names of the Saviour, Irfus and Christus, are declined according to the Latin declension; namely—Issus, gen. and dat. Issu, acc. Issum; Christus, gen. Christi, dat. Christo, acc. Christum.

EXERCISE XXVII.

SUBSTANTIVES WHICH ARE USED ONLY IN THE SINGULAR.

- § 165. All common names can be used in the plural; as—Baume, trees; Stabte, towns; Manner, men; Frauen, women. Proper names can be used in the plural only when they assume the nature of common names, or when several individuals are comprised in one name; as—bie Raphaele unfrer Beit, the Raphaels of our time; bie Stuarts, the Stuarts.
- § 166. Names of materials commonly do not take a plural, except when different species of the same genus are to be expressed. For instance—Fleisch, meat; Honig, honey; Gold, gold; Flachs, flax; Hou, hay; Usche, ashes; Sand, sand. But Moose, kinds of moss; Gräser, kinds of grass; Salze, kinds of salt; Erden, kinds of earth. Some words of this class, when used in the plural, assume a signification somewhat different from that of the singular; as—Gelder, sums of money; Papiere, documents.
- § 167. Collective nouns are used in the plural to indicate a plurality of collectives; as—Bölfer, nations; Geere, armies; Bölber, forests; Gebirge, ranges of mountains. But many can occur in the singular only, because they, in themselves.

denote an unlimited plurality; as—Dieh, cattle; Ungeziefer, vermin; Gesinde, servants.

- § 168. Most substantives of an abstract meaning cannot be used in the plural. Those are excepted which denote actions; as—Schläge, strokes; Klänge, sounds; Blide, looks; Schüffe, shots; Fälle, falls; Schnitte, cuts; and also those which assume a concrete signification; as—Tugenden, virtues, Lafter, vices; Fehler, errors; Schönheiten, beauties; Sinderniffe, hinderances.
- § 169. Those substantives which denote a measure, weight, or number, without expressing at the same time the substance of the thing measured, weighed, or numbered, are used in the singular, when preceded by a numeral. Examples:— μερη δυβ Ιαης, ten feet long; feche 300 breit, six inches broad; acht Pfund Kaffee, eight pounds of coffee; μικί Vaar Schuhe, two pair of shoes; einige Buch Vapicr, some quires of paper; μικί Bogen Vapicr, two sheets of paper; πουβ Stück Vieh, twelve head of cattle; ein Regiment von taufend Mann, a regiment of a thousand men. But if a substantive expresses not only the measure, but also the substance measured, it is put in the plural; more especially the names of coins, as—μερη Schillinge, ten shillings; and nouns denoting a space of time, as—μυεί Monate, two months; acht Lage, eight days; fleben Jahre, seven years.

Feminine substantives of a similar signification form the plural under all circumstances; as—zwölf Ellen Tuch, twelve yards of cloth; acht Meilen, eight miles; zwei Unzen Seibe, two ounces of silk; brei Taffen Thee, three cups of tea.

SUBSTANTIVES WHICH ARE USED ONLY IN THE PLURAL.

§ 170. A few substantives occur only in the plural number; namely—namely—

THE DECLENSION OF ADJECTIVES.

§ 171. Adjectives are words which qualify substantives—that is, words by which the kinds (genera) of persons or things are referred to particular or subordinate species. Thus the general term Pferb, horse, is referred to particular species; as—ein altes Pferb, an old horse; ein junges Pferb, a young horse; ein großes Pferb, a tall horse; ein fleines Pferb, a little horse; bieses Pferb, this horse; jenes Pferb, that horse; mein Pferb, my horse; welches Pferb, which horse. The words alt, jung, groß, flein, bieses, jenes, mein, welches, accordingly, restrict or qualify the substantive Pferb, and come all under the term adjectives. But commonly the name adjective is used in a more limited sense, as applying only to words which denote qualities or properties ascribed to persons or things, such as, in the above examples, alt, jung, groß, flein. In the present chapter, adjectives are considered in this limited acceptation of the term.

§ 172. Adjectives are used in a twofold manner:-

1. A quality can be asserted of a person or thing by means of the copula sein, to be (or werden, to become, or bleiden, to remain). An adjective thus asserted of a person or thing forms the predicate of a sentence, and in such a connection it always remains unchanged. For example:—das Pferd ift jung, the horse is young. Die Bäume sind grün, the trees are green. Die Kirschen werden reis, the cherries become ripe. Das Wetter wird school beiden, the weather will remain beautiful. Er ist gewesen, he has been rich.

2. A quality can be considered as the attribute of a person or thing—that is, as inherent in it. An adjective thus employed stands in an attributive connection with a substantive, and is made to agree with it in gender, number, and case, by means of inflectional changes. For example:—ein junges Bferb, a young horse; die grünen Bäume, the green trees; reife Kirschen, ripe cherries; bei schönem Wetter, in beautiful weather; reiche Leute, rich people.

Most adjectives can be used in a predicative as well as an attributive connection. See the exceptions in § 287, notes 2 and 3.

§ 173. Every adjective which can be used in an attributive connection has two forms of declension, which, like the declensions of substantives, are called the 'strong' (or 'ancient') and the 'weak' (or 'modern'). The strong declension is more perfect than the weak, being subject to a greater variety of inflectional changes. The former corresponds with the declension of the definite article, the latter bears a resemblance to the weak declension of substantives.

Acc. guten,	gute,	gute,	guten.

- 1. In the genitive singular of the masculine and neuter genders of the strong decleusion, the weak termination en is now generally adopted in the place of the strong termination es; e.g.—eine Stafche aften Beines, a bottle of old wine; eer Süngling eblen Gefühles, G., the youth of noble feeling. The strong form, however, still occurs in various phrases; as—gutes Muthes, of good courage; gerates Reges, immediately; reines Sergens, of (a) pure heart; heutiges Tages, now-a-days.
- 2. Adjectives ending in one of the syllables er, cl, cn, when inflected, commonly lose the vowel e of these syllables. For instance:—maftre Tell, Sch., brave Tell; eine etle That, a noble action; ein bespeinher Mann, Sch., an unpretending man; ein seltner Bogel, Sch., a curious bird. With adjectives ending in er or el, however, this rule is sometimes not strictly adhered to, the vowel e of the inflectional termination being thrown out instead of the e of the affix; e.g.—Er sigt in sciner sidern Beste, Sch., he sits in his secure stronghold. In bitter Farme, U., in bitter sorrow. Die evelu Berrn, the noble lords.
- 3. The adjective hoof, high, when declined, changes of into h; as in ein hoher Berg, a high mountain; hohe Belsen, high rocks.
- § 174. An adjective follows the strong declension when it is not preceded by any article, pronoun, or numeral, or when preceded by an article, pronoun, or numeral which has no inflectional termination. For instance:—guter Wein, good wine; schnes Wetter, fine weather; reine Kleiber, clean dresses; ein ebner Weg, an even road; mein lieber Freund, my dear friend; unser neues Saus, our new house.

An adjective follows the weak declension when it is preceded by an article, pronoun, or numeral, which shews by its strong termination the gender, number, and case of the substantive. For instance:—ber gute Wein, the good wine; des füßen Weines, of the sweet wine; das schöne Wetter, the fine weather; die reinen Kleider, the clean dresses; dieser ehne Weg, this even road; meine lieben Freunde, my dear friends; in unserm neuen Hause, in our new house.

From this rule it is obvious that an adjective may follow the strong declension in one case, while it may require the weak in another, although preceded by the same article, pronoun, or numeral, according as the latter has a strong termination or not. For example, in the nominative cin tapfrer Selb, a valiant hero, the adjective is in the strong declension, but in the genitive, dative, and accusative in the weak; namely—gen. eines tapfren Helben, dat. einem tapfren Helben, acc. einen tapfren Helben. Or in unfer neues Haus, our new house, the adjective is in the strong declension in the nominative and accusative singular, but in the weak in all the other cases. Examples:—

Sing. Nom. alter Wein, old wine.

Gen. alten Weines, of old wine.

Dat. alten Weine, to old wine.

Acc. alten Wein, old wine.

- § 175. The above rule regarding the declension of adjectives is rarely departed from.
- 1. In the nominative and accusative of the neuter gender, the adjective in the strong declension sometimes drops its termination et, especially in poetry, and also in the language of everyday life. Examples:—Ich aber have ein getren Gebächtniß, Sch., but I have a faithful memory. Der König trug ein schwarz Gewand, U., the king wore a black mantle. Ich uche nicht mein eigen Heit, Platen, I do not seek my own happiness. Schon früh in meiner Kindheit war mein täglich Spiel der Krieg, Stollerg, even in my early childhood war was my daily play.—Kalt Wasser, cold water; baar Geld, ready money; alt Eisen, old iron; schön Wetter, sine weather.
- 2. After einige, etliche, some; wenige, few; mehrere, several; andere, other; folche, such; viele, many; welche, which, the adjective takes the strong declension in the nominative and accusative plural; for example—einige gute Bücher, some good books; viele fremde Staaten, many foreign states; folche schöne Blumen, such fine flowers.
- 3. After the personal pronouns ich, bu, wir, ihr, the adjective takes the weak declension, except in the nominative singular; e.g.—Nom. ich armer Mann, I poor man; dat. mir armen Männer; acc. mich armen Männer plur. nom. wir armen Männer; dat. uns armen Männer. acc. uns armen Männer. After ihr, however, the practice varies, as will be seen from comparing the following passages:—Ich zittre nur für euch, ihr blöden Thoren, Chamisso, I tremble only for you, you dull fools. Ihr zarten Forellen, Schwab, you tender trouts. Ihr geliebte Triften, Sch., you beloved pastures. Ihr fittle Thäler, Sch., you quiet valleys. Ihr sonnige Weiden, Sch., you sunny pastures.
- 4. Ganz, whole, and half, half, take no additional termination when put before names of places and countries without the definite article; as—ganz England, all England; in ganz England, in all England; half London, but with the article—bas ganze Deutschland, the whole of Germany; bie halfe Schweiz, the half of Switzerland.
- § 176. Adjectives formed from proper names of places often take the suffix er, which is peculiar to substantives, in preference to the adjective suffix ist, especially if the name has a compound form, as Freiburg, Frankfurt, Geibelberg.

Such adjectives are indeclinable, and can only be employed in the attributive connection. For instance:—ber Freiburger Münster, the minster of Friburg; die Franksurter Zeitung, the Franksort Gazette; das Heidelberger Faß, the Heidelberg tun; Hamburger Rindsleisch, Hamburgh beef; die Leipziger Messe, the Leipzig fair; die Loudoner Börse, the London exchange; die Pariser Moden, the Paris fashions.

§ 177. As the participles of verbs partake of the nature of adjectives, they are subject to the same rules of declension. For example: —Das sterbende Blatt, the dying leaf. Das gepriesene Italien, Sch., much-praised Italy. Ich war in ein anstossendes Zimmer gegangen, Sch., I had gone into an adjoining room. Das verlorene Paradies, Paradise Lost Eine rauschende Musit, a noisy music. Reisende Thiere, wild beasts.

Present participles can only be used in the attributive connection, excepting such as have, from long usage, assumed entirely the nature of adjectives. The following, among others, are of the latter description:—

anstedent, contagious. ausbauernt, persevering. beteutent, important. bezaubernt, enchanting. brudent, oppressive. emporent, revolting. entickeitent, decisive.

glängend, brilliant.
rasend, frantic.
reigend, charming.
umfassend, extensive.
bermögend, wealthy.
borbersschend, predominant wüthend, furious.

The past participle of those intransitive verbs which require the auxiliary verb haben, can be used neither in the predicative nor attributive connection.

§ 178. Both adjectives and participles can be used as substantives, always retaining, however, the declension peculiar to adjectives. The masculine and feminine genders are employed, both in the singular and plural, to denote persons, and the neuter gender, in the singular, to denote things. The German language carries out this practice with greater freedom than the English. Examples:—ein Deutschen, a German; eine Deutsche, a German woman; die Deutschen, the Germans; ber Frembe, the stranger; Frembe, strangers; ein Sterblicher, a mortal; die steben Weisen Weisenland, the seven wise men of Greece; ein Reisender, a traveller; die Umstehenden, the bystanders; ber Rebende, the speaker; ein Gelehrter, a learned man; die Gelehrten, the learned; Gelehrte, learned people.—Das Gute, that which is good. Hanget dem Guten an, B., cleave to that which is good. Gutes thun, to do good. Großes hadt ihr in kurzer Zeit geleistet, Sch., you have done great things in a short time. Wer kann das Wögliche berechnen? G., who can calculate possibilities?

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES,

§ 179 When a quality is ascribed to an object without any regard to other objects, the adjective stands in its fundamental form, called the positive degree; as—ber Mann ift reid, the man is rich. Herr N. ift ein reicher Mann, Mr N. is a rich man.

When a quality is ascribed to an object in a comparative relation to other objects, or when different qualities, in comparison with one another, are ascribed to the same object, the relation is either one of equality or of inequality. The relation of equality is indicated in German as well as in English by certain particles placed before the positive. For example:—Gerr N. ift so reich als Gerr 3., Mr N. is as rich as Mr Z. Gerr N. ift ein even so reicher Mann als Gerr 3., Mr N. is just as rich a man as Mr Z. Er ift so evel als flug, he is as noble as he is prudent.

The relation of inequality is expressed by particular forms of the adjective, called the comparative and superlative degrees.

- § 180. The comparative is used when a quality is ascribed to one person or thing in a higher degree than to another, or when to the same person or thing one quality is ascribed in a higher degree than another quality. In the former case, a simple comparative is used, which is formed, as in English, by adding to the adjective the syllable er; as in—Gerr N. ift reigher als Gerr 3., Mr N. is richer than Mr Z. In the latter case, a compound comparative is used, which is formed by putting mehr, more, before the adjective; as in—er ift mehr reigh als weife, he is more rich than wise.
- § 181. The vowels a, v, u (but not the diphthong au), are modified in the simple comparative and superlative of most monosyllabic adjectives; as—lang, long; langer, longer; ber längste, the longest; flug, clever; flüger, more clever; ber flügste, the cleverest.

The following adjectives do not modify:-

barfth, harsh. farg, stingy. fanft, soft. brav, brave. fnapp, tight. fatt, satiated. bunt, variegated. lahm, lame. fchlaff, slack. bumpf, dull (said of laß, tired. fclant, slender. matt, wearied. fdroff, rugged. sound). morfch, rotten. falb, fallow. ftarr, stiff. falsá, false. nact, naked. ftolz, proud. flach, flat. platt. flat. ftraff, tight, stretched. froh, joyful. plump, clumsy. ftumpf, blunt. glatt, smooth. rasch, quick. toll, mad. hohl, hollow. roh, raw. voll, full. hold, favourable. rund, round. wahr, true. fabl, bald. facht, slow. zahm, tame.

The practice varies with bang or bange, afraid; blaß, pale; fromm, pious; gefund, sound; flar, clear; naß, wet; gart, tender.

Note.

The English language presents an analogy for the modification of the vowel in the comparative and superlative of old—elder, eldest.

§ 182. The comparative remains unchanged, when used as predicate, but in the attributive connection it is declined like an adjective in the positive degree, either by the strong or the weak declension, as the general rule in § 174 provides. For example:—A. if reider als B., A. is richer than B.; ber reidere Mann, the richer man; ein reiderer Mann, a richer man; reidere Leute, richer people.

Notes.

- 1. As the adjective in the positive degree, so the comparative sometimes loses its strong termination es in the nominative and accusative of the neuter gender, especially in poetry; e. g.—skin scholer Bild scholer side in meinem Leben, G., no finer picture did I ever see in my life. Doch zichet ein höher Bedurfniß immer den strebenden Geist seise zur Wahrheit hinan, G., but a higher want ever draws the striving spirit gently towards the truth. Compare § 175, 1.
- 2. The particle 'than' after the comparative is commonly expressed by als, sometimes by tenn; but the latter is rather antiquated. The particle 'the—the' before comparatives is expressed by ic—besto (or ic, or um so); e.g.—je langer bie Nachte, besto (or ic, or um so) fürzer bie Aage, the longer the nights, the shorter the days.

- § 183. The superlative is used when a quality is ascribed to a person or thing in the highest degree, in comparison with all other, or at least a given number of, persons or things; or when a quality is ascribed to a person or thing in a very or eminently high degree, without strictly instituting a comparison. In the former case, the superlative is called the relative superlative; in the latter, the absolute superlative.
- § 184. The relative superlative is formed, as in English, by adding to the adjective ft or est—the latter, if the final consonant be b, t, $\mathbb{e}$, $\mathbb{f}$, $\mathbb{f}$. It is declined like the adjective in the positive degree. For instance:—Er ift ber reich ste Mann in der ganzen Stadt, he is the richest man in the whole town. Die reich sten Leute sind nicht immer die glücksich sten, the richest people are not always the happiest. Der fürzeste Xag, the shortest day. Die breitesten Straßen, the broadest streets. Liebster Bruder, dearest brother.

Notes.

- 1. The relative superlative can be strengthened by having the genitive after, 'of all,' prefixed; as—ber afterreighte Mann, the richest man of all; bie afterfeinste Seite, the very finest silk. Unb man hörte bei Hof bie afterschinken Gestänge, G., the most beautiful songs were heard at court.
- 2. The adverbial form of the relative superlative, as—am reichten, (at the) richest; am größten, (at the) greatest, is sometimes employed instead of the adjective form to which this paragraph refers. From its adverbial nature, it is obvious that it can never be employed in an attributive connection with a substantive. Examples:—Wenn bir Noth am größten ift, ift Gottes Dülfe am nächten, when the need is at the greatest, God's help is nearest. Im nördigen Theile ber State war die Erschitterung am stärfsten, in the northern part of the city the earthquake was strongest.
- § 185. The absolute superlative is formed by means of such adverbs as höchit, most; sehr, very; äußerst, extremely; überauß, exceedingly; recht, right; ganz, quite; außerordent-lich, extraordinarily; vorzüglich, pre-eminently; ungemein, uncommonly. These are placed before the adjective, as in English, and the adjective is declined in the usual way. For instance:—Daß Dorf ist reinlich, und seine Lage höchst angenehm, the village is clean, and its situation most pleasant. Er ist ein überauß sluger Mann, he is an exceedingly clever men. Die Sache scheint mit äußerst wichtig, the affair appears to me extremely important.

Note.

A great many compound adjectives are, so far as their signification is concerned, equal to absolute superlatives; e. g — bettelaum, as poor as a beggar. bleischnet, heavy as lead.

blisschnetl, quick as lightning. blutjung, very young.
eistalt, cold as ice.
feberseicht, light as a feather.
felsenfelt, firm as a rock.
feuerreith, red as fire.
gallenbiter, bitter as gall.
honigsüß, sweet as honey.
fohlschwar, black as coal.
fugelrund, round as a ball, natelichari, sharp as a needle.

nageineu, split new.
riefengroß, big as a giant.
riefenfaut, strong as a giant.
ichnemeiß, white as snow.
piegeiglatt, smooth as a mirror.
ficinalt, very old.
ficinhart, hard as stone.
ficineich, enormously rich.
uralt, very old.
munterschön, extremely beautiful.

§ 186. The superlative of groß, great, is ber größte, which is a contraction for größeste.

An interchange of th and h takes place in hoth, high, hoher, ber hothste; and in nah or nahe, near, naher, ber nathste.

But, good, has beffer, ber befte.

Biel, much, has mehr, ber meiste. The plural of mehr—namely, mehre, or more commonly mehrer—is used in the sense of 'several.'

Benig, little, few, has the regular forms meniger, ber wenigste, and also the irregular forms minber, ber minbeste.

The superlative per erfte, the first, is formed from eh, early; and the superlative per lette, the last, from the old lat, late. From these two superlatives there are again formed the comparatives per erftere, the former, and per lettere, the latter.

The following adjectives, derived from adverbs of place, have the form of comparatives, but the meaning of simple adjectives. They make the following superlatives:—

ober, upper; ber oberste, the uppermost.
unter, under; "unterste, "undermost.
inner, inner; "innerste, "inmost.
außer, outer; "außerste, "outmost.
vorber, sore; "vorberste, "foremost.

- § 187. There are many adjectives which cannot have any degrees of comparison, because they denote qualities which we cannot conceive as being possessed by different persons or things in a higher or lower degree; e. g.—tobt, dead; lebenbig, alive; flumm, dumb; blinb, blind; leer, empty; recht, right; abelig, of noble birth; heutig, belonging to this day, &c.; and particularly those which denote the material of which a thing is made, as—fleinern, made of stone; hölgern, wooden; golben, golden, &c. However, when such words assume a figurative meaning, they also admit of the degrees of comparison, as in—ber leerfte Ropf, the emptiest head; fein Betragen war hölgerner als je, his behaviour was more awkward than ever.
- § 188. Participles do not admit of the degrees of comparison, with the exception of such as have entirely assumed the nature of adjectives; e.g.—gelehrt, learned; gewant, active, versatile; betrübt, sorrowful; berebt, eloquent; ergeben, devoted, and others; also most of the present participles mentioned in § 177.

PRONOUNS.

- § 189. Pronouns are words which supply the place of the name of a person or thing, and at the same time show the relation in which a person or thing stands to the speaker. Pronouns which are not joined to substantives, but stand by themselves, are called substantive pronouns; as—ith, I; bu, thou; et, he; wer, who; was, what. Pronouns which are connected with a substantive like an attributive adjective, so as to qualify the substantive, are called adjective pronouns; as—mein, my; bein, thy; sein, his; bieser, this; sener, that; welcher, which.
- § 190. In regard to signification, all pronouns are divided into six classes:—
- 1. Personal pronouns—ich, I; bu, thou; er, he; she; es, it; wir, we; ihr, you; ste, they.
- 2. Possessive pronouns—mein, my; bein, thy; fein, his; thr, her; unser, our; euer, your; thr, their.
- 3. Demonstrative pronouns—ber, that; berjenige, that; bersfelbe, the same; biefer, this; jener, that, yon; joldjer, such.
- 4. Interrogative pronouns—wer, who; was, what; welcher, which; was für ein, what kind of.
- 5. Relative pronouns—wer, who; was, what; ber, who; welcher, which.
- 6. Indefinite pronouns—man, one; Jemand, somebody; Niemand, nobody; etwas, something; nichts, nothing; Jedersmann, everybody.

, I. PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

§ 191. The personal pronouns point out the person speaking, or the first person—ith, I; in the plural wir, we; the person spoken to, or the second person—bu, thou; in the plural introperson—the person or thing spoken of, or the third person—er, he; fit, she; e8, it; in the plural fit, they. They are declined as follows:—

SINGULAR.

		SECOND	THIRD PERSON.
FI	RST PERSON.	PERSON.	MASCULINE.	FEMININE.	NEUTER.
Nom.	ich, I;	bu, thou;	er, he;	ffe. she;	es, it.
Gen.	meiner (or	beiner (or	feiner (or	"hor:	feiner (or mein), of	bein), of	fein)		` ofit.
	me:	thee;	him
Dat.	mir, to me;	bir, to thee;	ihm, i		to it.
			him;
Acc.	mich, me;	bich, thee;	ibn, him;

PLURAL.

Nom.	mir, we;	ihr, you;	fie, they.
Gcn.	unser, of us ;	eurer, of you;	ihrer, of til
Dat.	uns, to us;	end, to you;	ihnen, to the.
Acc.	uns, us;	euch, you;	fie, them.

Notes.

- 1. In the early language, there were employed in the genitive singular the forms mein, tein, fein, in the place of which meiner, beiner, feiner, are now commonly used. The old forms still occur in poetry, and in a few phrases; as—vergif mein nicht, forget me not; ich gevente vein, I think of thee; man pottet fein, one sneers at him. The corresponding genitive ihr, for ihrer, is no longer in use.
- 2. The neuter cs is often, for the sake of euphony, contracted with the word that precedes it, and sometimes (in poetry) with the word that follows it, and the omission of the vowel c is marked by an apostrophe ('); e.g.—Nimm's hin, take it. Sit's genis? is it certain? What girly shat is the matter? 's found Regen, Sch., rain is coming.
- § 192. As the pronoun of the third person has in the singular different forms for the three genders, it must agree in gender with its antecedent—that is, with the substantive to which it refers. For example:—Sie (namely, die Erde) ift rund, it (the earth) is round. Ich have ihn (namely, den Schliffel) verloren, I have lost it (the key). Es war ein Meisterschuß, ich muß ihn loben, Sch., it was a master-shot, I must praise it. So verabschut ist die Thrannei, daß sie kein Werkzeug findet, Sch., the tyranny is so detested, that it finds no tool.
 - § 193. On account of the identity of the genitive and dative of the neuter pronoun of the third person with the genitive and dative of the masculine, the use of feiner and ihm in the neuter gender is generally avoided, and the corresponding forms of the neuter demonstrative pronoun bas-namely, beffen and bem-are employed in their stead. For example :-Ich erinnre mich beffen, I remember it. Sie waren geehrt und freuten sich bester G_n , they were honoured and were glad of it. 34 L. feinen Glauben, I give it no credit. The 'e third person, moreover, cannot The adverb ba, there, or, when the be j a vowel, bar is used instead, and prep the xed, as in baburch, through it; bafur, cit; bamit, with it; bavon, of it; barin, for i in it t: barunter, beneath it. For example:-I vote for it. Bift bu bavon überzeugt? 3ch i art th .ed of it? Sie fonnen fich barauf verlaffen, apon it. When the pronoun refers to a definite vou n , it can be rendered by a form of the demonstrative substa derfelb ...e same. Note.

Es answers to the English 'so' in such phrases as—ich hoffe es, I hope so; ich zsaube es, I believe so; or when it takes the place of an adjective, participle, or substantive mentioned in the preceding clause, as in the following examples:—Sett set hip fret, the set's durch ties Gesey, soh,, now you are free, you are so through this law. Dann waren wir Stsaven, und verbigaten es zu sein, Sch., then we should be slaves, and should deserve to be so. We die Gesey eine gewöhnliche Erseinung ist, ist es auch der Muth, Jacobs, where danger is an ordinary phenomenon, courage is likewise so.

§ 194. The most usual mode of addressing one or more persons is by the third person plural—Sie, you; Ihnen, to you; Ihr, your. This mode is now generally adopted in the conversation of people of education, even when speaking to those of an inferior condition. The natural address by the second person singular—bu, thou—is confined to such relations of intimacy as exist between the members of a family and confidential friends. The Supreme Being is also addressed by Du. The second person plural—ihr, you—is used in speaking to two or more persons, each of whom would be entitled to the familiar bu. Other modes of address, such as the third person singular—er, he, second person plural—ihr, you—(to a single individual) are customary among country-people and others living in a similar sphere. Inferiors, especially servants, are sometimes addressed by their employers in the third person singular; but even in such relations it is more common now to use, according to circumstances, either the second person singular, or the third person plural. In the poetical style, but and the are employed.

The addressing pronoun, especially that of the third person plural, is always written with a capital initial; e.g.—Bo find Sie gewesen? Ich banke Ihnen, I thank vou.

Note

The strange and unnatural mode of addressing a person by the third person plural is of comparatively recent origin. In ancient times every person, even the sovereign of the country, was addressed by Du. But in imitation of the usage of the Romanic languages, the custom was introduced about the beginning of the thirteenth century, of addressing men or women of rank by 35t, Euch, Euct (or rather Euct, according to the orthography of that time).* After the middle of the seventeenth century, it was considered more polite to use the third person singular—Er, or Sic. But when in course of time even this usage lost its respectability by being extended to people of an inferior station, the third person plural was at last resorted to. The latter mode, however, was not firmly established till about the middle of last century.

*A remaining trace of this old custom is the pedantic fashion, still rather tenaciously clung to in Germany, of using in ceremonious letters the address furt (or abbreviated Em.) Behlgeboren; Euer Hochwehlgeboren, &c., varying according to the rank or station which the person addressed holds in society.

REFLECTIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 195. The German language expresses the reflective relation in the first and second persons singular as well as plural by means of the personal pronouns; but in the third person both of the singular and plural by means of the word fith, which serves at once for the dative and accusative. For example:—ith fleith mith an, I dress myself; wir fleithm und an, we dress ourselves; bu rüthmit bith, thou boastest thyself; thr rühmit euth, you boast yourselves; er (or fit) erholt fith, he (or she) recovers himself (or herself); fit erholtn fith, they recover themselves; erholen Sie fith, recover yourself (or yourselves). In old English, the personal pronouns were also used with a reflective meaning; e.g.—I have bethought me of another fault; hie thee; hold you content; wash you, make you clean.

The English reflective pronouns 'myself, thyself, himself,' &c., are often used in an exclusive sense, the emphasis being laid on 'self,' e. g.— I myself have been a witness of it. I myself can save her. There he is himself. You have told it yourself. We have seen it ourselves. In German, the indeclinable word fether of fether is employed in this sonse:— 3ch felbst bin Zeuge bavon gewesen. 3ch selber tann sie retten, Sch. Da ist er selber, Sch. Sie selbst haben es gesagt. Wir haben es selbst gesehen. In cases where the English resective pronoun conveys at once an exclusive and resective meaning, the word selbst sadded to the reflective pronoun in German. For example:—Extenne bich selbst, know thyself. Homer vergaß sich selbst zuletzt, Sch., a brave man thinks last of himself. Der brave Mann bentt an sich selbst zuletzt, Sch., a brave man thinks last of himself.

The word fether is also used with an inclusive signification, and is translated by 'even,' or by the pronouns 'myself, thyself, himself,' &c. In this sense it always has a subordinate accent. Examples:—Selbst ber Reichste ist nicht ohne Sorgen, even the richest, or the richest himself, is not without cares. Banten auch bie Berge selbst? Sch., do even the very mountains shake? Der Prinz selbst versor seinen Ernst, Sch., the prince himself lost his seriousness.

§ 196. The reflective pronouns of the plural—uns, euch, sich—can also be employed when a reciprocal action between two or more subjects is to be expressed. For example:—Wir sahen uns besturzt an, Sch., we looked at each other with surprise. Warum zanst ihr euch? Why do you quarrel with one another? Die Turannen reichen sich die Sände, Sch., the tyrants reach their hands to one another. This relation is more commonly expressed, however, by the indeclinable word cinander, especially if an ambiguity could possibly arise from the use of the reflective pronouns; e.g.—Wir schägen einander, we esteem one another. Sie sennen einander, they know each other; or with prepositions—Wir schreiben an einander, we write to each other.

EXERCISE XXXIV.

I have wounded ¹ myself. Have you wounded yourself? She is dressing ² herself. They pride ³ themselves in their wealth. ⁴ He came himself. The physician ⁵ himself is ill. I shall do it myself. They did it themselves. Have you heard it yourself? She herself has betrayed ⁶ the deed. ⁷ Know ⁸ thyself. He thinks ⁹ only of ¹⁰ himself. Even the king (or, the king himself) could not save ¹¹ him. Even his enemies admire ¹² him. Even his name is unknown ¹³ to me. The wisest himself can err. ¹⁴ My best friends them selves have forsaken me. We wished ¹⁵ each other a goodnight. We met ¹⁶ each other. They hate ¹⁷ each other. They betrayed each other. We shall see one another again. We travelled with one another. We sat beside ¹⁹ each other.

To wound, verwunden.
 To dress, ankleiden.
 To pride one's self, sich drüften.
 Physician, Arzt.
 To betray, vertathen.
 Deed, That.
 To know, erfennen.
 To think, denten.
 Of, an.
 To save, retten.
 To admire, bewundern.
 Unknown, unbekannt.
 To err, irren.
 To wish, wünfchen.
 To meet, treffen.
 To hate, haffen.
 To assist, beistehen.
 Beside, neben.

II. POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 197. The possessive pronouns represent the object to which they are joined, as being in the possession of one of the three persons—the person or persons speaking, spoken to, or spoken of. They are formed from the genitive of the personal pronouns, the latter assuming the form of adjectives, and are therefore rightly denominated personal adjective pronouns.

		SINGULAR.
First Po Second Third	_	mein, bein, fein, fin,	meine, beine, feine, ihre,	mein, my. bein, thy. fein, his, its. ihr, her, its.
			PLURAL	•
First Page Second Third	erson,	unser, euer, ibr.	unsere, eure, ihre,	unfer, our. euer, your. ihr, their.
1 mira	"	(Íhr, whe	Ihre,	Ihr, your, address one or

The possessive pronouns agree with the substantive which they qualify in gender, number, and case. They are declined after the strong declension of adjectives, but they have, like the indefinite article, no inflectional termination in the nominative singular masculine, or in the nominative and accusative singular neuter.

SINGULAR.			PLURAL.
MASCULINE. Nom. mein, Gen. meines, Dat. meinen, Acc. meinen,	,	mein, my; meines, of my; meinem, to my; mein, my;	meine, my. meiner, of my. meinen, to my. meinen, to my.

As there are two pronouns for the third person singular—fein and ibrit depends in every instance upon the gender of the ante-edent which of the two must be employed; whilst the declension of the pronoun—that is, in what gender, number, and case it is to be put—depends upon the substantive which it precedes and qualifies. For example:—Die Nume hat ihren schonen Geruch versoren, the slower has lost its sine smell. Die Natur sorbert unwiderstehlich ihre Nechte, G., nature irresistibly demands its (or her) rights. Das Dorf mit seinen Bewohnern, the village with its inhabitants. Das Schiff mit seiner ganzen Mannschaft, the ship with her whole crew.

§ 198. When the substantive which the possessive pronoun qualifies is omitted or understood, the pronoun takes either the weak or the strong declension throughout, according as the definite article precedes it or not. For instance:—Wen gehört dieser Gut? Es ist meiner, or der meine. To whom does this hat belong? It is mine. Leihe ihm dein Buch, er hat seines (or das seine) verlegt, lend him thy book, he has mislaid his. Sein Loos ist meines, Sch., his sate is mine.

Instead of ber, bie, bas meine; ber, bie, bas feine; ber, bie, bas unfere, &c., the following forms are in more ordinary use:—

ber, bie, bas meinige, mine; ber, bie, bas unfrige, ours.

" " beinige, thine; " " eurige, yours.

" " feinige, his; " " ihrige, theirs.

They always have the definite article, and are accordingly declined after the weak declension. For example:—Sein Nam' ift Friedland; auch der meinige, Sch., his name is Friedland; mine also. Meine Gesundheit ist dauerhafter als die seinige, my health is stronger than his. Wir wohnen in einem fremden Hause, wir haben das unsrige vermiethet, we live in another person's house; we have let ours, or our own.

When the possessive pronoun is the predicate of a sentence, the forms mein, bein, sein, unser, ever, ihr (without any change whatever), are also used. For instance:—Was diesed Zimmer enthält, ist mein, what this room contains, is mine. Dieser Augenblick ist dein, this moment is thine, or thy own. Sein sind die Märkte, die Gerichte, sein die Kausmannöskraßen, Sch., his are the markets, the courts, his the highways. Kein Kaiser kann, was unser ist, verschenken, Sch., no emperor can give away what is ours.

Note.

The plural tie Meinigen, bie Deinigen, &c., signifies 'those belonging to me, to thee,' &c., or 'my, thy friends or relations;' and the neuter bas

Meinige, das Deinige, &c., signifies 'my, thy property, or share, or duty.' For example:—Ich gehe mit ben Meinigen nach Krankfurt, G., I am going with my family to Frankfort. Wie besinden sich die Ihrigen? how are you all at home? Das ist meine Hitte! Ich siehe wieder auf bem Meinigen, Sch., that is my hut! I stand once more upon my own property. Er hat all bas Scinige verschwendet, he has squandered all that belonged to him. Ich hade das Meinige gethan, I have done my duty, or my utmost, or all in my power.

EXERCISE XXXV.

 ²³ To squander, verſchwenben.

III. DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 199. Demonstrative pronouns point to an object, and can all be used substantively as well as adjectively. There are six demonstrative pronouns; namely—ber, die, das, the, that.

bieser, diese, dieses, this.
jener, jene, jenes, that, yon.
solcher, solche, such.
berjenige, diesenige, dasjenige, that.
berselbe, dieselbe, dasselbe, the same.

They are declined as follows:-

The declension of ber, bie, bas, when used adjectively—that is, in an adjective connection with a substantive—is the same as that of the definite article. But when used substantively—that is, not in an adjective connection with a substantive—it has the following enlarged forms:—

Sing. Gen. bessen, bessen, bessen (or bes), of that; of him, of her, of it.

Plur. Gen. berer, or beren, of those, of them.

" Dat. benen, to those, to them.

The form beren, of them, in the genitive plural can be used only in the sense of the genitive plural of the third personal pronoun, ihrer. Defi in the genitive of the neuter occurs only in poetry.

Dieser, jener, and soldyer, are declined according to the strong declension of adjectives. Soldyer occurs also with the indefinite article placed either before or after it:—ein soldyer, eine soldyes; or soldy ein, soldy eine, soldy ein. In the former case, ein soldyer is declined like an adjective; in the latter, soldy romains unchanged.

Derjenige and berfelbe are declined like adjectives with the definite article, according to the following specimen:—

SINGULAR.

Gen. Dat.	berjenige, besjenigen, benijenigen,	biejenige, derjenigen, derjenigen,	dasjenige, desjenigen, demjenigen,	biejenigen. berjenigen. benjenigen.
Acc.	denjenigen,	diejenige,	basjenige,	diejenigen.

§ 200. Der, bie, bas, has of all demonstrative pronouns the most general signification, as it may stand for biefer, icner. and berjenige. Examples :- Da ift ber Tell, ber führt bas Ruber audy, Sch., there is that (man) Tell, he (or, that one) also manages the helm. Des Wegs fant er, Sch., he came that (or this) way. Dort broben ift bein Bater! Den ruf' an! Sch., there above is thy Father! call on him! 3ft's ber im Nachen, den ihr sucht? Sch., is it that one in the boat whom you seek? Das ift des Kaisers Hand und Siegel, Sch., that is the emperor's hand and seal. Nimm bas Gelb, ich beharf beffen nicht, take the money, I do not require it. Raufe feine Blumen, ich habe beren genug, do not buy any flowers. I have enough of them. Das Unfeben berer, bie feine Berson umgaben, Sch., the high rank of those who surrounded his person. Das Gebeimnig bes Berrn ift unter benen, die ihn fürchten, B., the secret of the Lord is with them who fear him.

Notes.

- 1. The genitive of this demonstrative pronoun in its enlarged forms—bessen and beten—is sometimes employed for the possessive pronouns of the third person, in order to avoid ambiguity. For example:—Advise sphilipp August von Frankreich bestätte ben Bringen Zohann in der Keindscligkeit gegen seinen Bruder und dessen Frennde, Philip Augustus, King of France, consirmed Prince John in die enmity towards die brother and his friends—that is, his brother's friends. Reland vitt hinter'm Bater her mit dessen Speec und Schilde, U., Roland rode behind his father with his—that is, his father's—spear and shield. Sie beschenkte ihre Schwester und beren Tochter, she gave presents to her sister and her daughter, namely, her sister's daughter.
- 2. When the demonstrative 'that' is joined to a preposition proper, its equivalent in German very often assumes the form of the adverb ba, or when the preposition begins with a vowel, of tar, and the preposition is annexed. But this takes place only if the notion of a thing (and not of a person) is expressed, and if, at the same time, the prenoun is not joined with a substantive. Thus baburth is said for 'through that,' bamit for 'with that,' rafur for 'for that,' babei for 'at that,' barin for 'in that,' barauf for 'upon that,' &c. For example :- 3ch bin bafur verantwortlich, I am responsible for that. 3ch weiß nichts bavon, I know nothing of that. Darin haft bu Recht, in that you are right. 3ch habe nicht baran gebacht, I did not think of that. Seine Stuble waren uralt, aber er lub taglich Bemanben ein, barauf zu fiten, G., his chairs were very old, but he daily invited somebody to sit upon them. (See § 193.) When the demonstrative pronoun stands as antecedent to a relative, the adverb be cannot be used in its place. For example :- Mein Bater fagte mir menig von bem (not baron), was er mit ihm gerebet hatte, G., my father told me little of that about which he had spoken with him. Bergebens erinnerte ter Abgeothete ben Evoberet an bas (not baran), was bie Gerechtigseit von ihm forterte, Sch., in vain did the delegate remind the conqueror of what (literally, of that which) justice demanded of him.

§ 201. Dieser, diese, dieses, this, points to a particular object near to the speaker, either with regard to space or to time; jener, jene, jenes, that, yon, points to a particular object distant from the speaker; e.g.—dieser Baum ist höher als jener, this tree is higher than that one. In dieser West und in jener West, in this world and in the world to come. In the same way, when two objects have been spoken of, the last mentioned is referred to by dieser, English 'the latter,' and the first mentioned by jener, English 'the former;' e.g.—der Frühling und der Gerbst hat seine Freuden: dieser glebt Früchte, jener Blumen, spring as well as autumn has its delights: the latter gives fruits, the former flowers.

Notes.

- 1. The neuter diefes, when used substantively, is, like the neuter das or es, often employed in the nominative and accusative, to indicate the most general and indefinite notion of a person or thing, without any regard to the gender or number of the object pointed at. Diefes is then usually contracted into dies. Examples:—Dies ist ein seigenbaum, this is a figtree. Dies ist eine Nette, this is a pink. Wofür hältst du dies? what doest thou take this for? Dies sind wichtige Bapiere, these are important documents. Dies hier ist mein Schwesterohn, Sch., this is my sister's son. Das ist deer Neting, Sch., that is Mr Reding. Das sind meine Schwestern, those are my sisters. Das sind des Königs Wille nicht, Sch., that is not the will of the king. Das sind des Simmels surchtbare Gerichte, Sch., those are the fearful judgments of Heaven. Es war meine Wutter, it was my mother. Es sim Frente, they are strangers.
- 2. When the neuter birges, used substantively, and applied to notions of things in a general way, comes to be connected with a preposition, the adverb hier is generally used instead, the preposition being annexed. For example:—Sieran extenne is, ihn, by this (or hereby) I know him. Sierven weiß ich nichts, of this I know nothing. Siermit (or hiemit) muß ich schließen, with this I must close.
- § 202. Solcher, solche, solches, such, points to an object, with respect to its nature or quality. For instance:—Richt jeder Baum trägt solche Frucht, it is not every tree that bears such fruit. Wit solchen Federn kann ich nicht schreiben, I cannot write with such pens. Ein solches Betragen ist sehr tadelnswürdig, such conduct is very blameworthy. Solth ein Better ift selten zu solcher Ernte gekommen, G., rarely was such weather for such a harvest.

Notes

1. When such in English is placed before an adjective, it unites with its demonstrative nature the power of an adverb of intensity, and is generally translated by so. For instance:—Such bad weather, so solvetter. To be seen by ladies of such high breeding in such vulgar attitudes! Goldsmith, You so vornehmen Damen in so gemeinen Stellungen geschen zu werden!

2. Soldjer is but rarely used instead of the personal pronoun of the third person.

- § 203. Dersenige, biesenige, bassenige, that, does not, like sener, point to a particular or definite object, but to an object which requires to be defined by means of a relative clause. For example:—Dassenige Haus, welches auf Sand gebaut ist, steht auf keinem sesten Grunde, that house which is built upon sand, stands on no firm foundation (to be compared with senes Haus ist zu vermiethen, that [particular] house is to be let). Dersenige, der nicht an Gott glaubt, wird ein Atheist. Ich school des not believe in God, is called an atheist. Ich school des not believe in God, is called an atheist. Ich school des not believe in God, is called an extent those who speak the truth.
- § 204. Derselbe, dieselbe, dasselbe, the same, points to an object as being identical either with one before mentioned, or with one described in a subjoined clause. For example:—Bir wohnen in derselben Straße, we live in the same street. Es sind dieselben, die wir gestern sahen, they are the same that we saw yesterday.
- Notes.

 1. The pronoun terfeibe is frequently used instead of the personal pronoun of the third person, and instead of the possessive pronouns sein, his, and ist, her, especially if, for the sake of perspicuity, a precise distinction requires to be made between two before-mentioned objects. In such a case, the demonstrative pronoun generally refers to the object which is mentioned last. For example:—Die Achter schieb in London last. For example:—Die Achter schieb in London was expected in London. Der Bater sprach von seinem Sohne und rüsmte die Aalente desselbe, the father spoke of his son, and praised his (the son's) talents. See § 200, note 1. Sometimes derselbe is used for the third personal pronoun merely for the sake of euphony, as in the following examples:—Sobate die Mutter ihre Achter sak, fragte sie dieselbe (instead of sie sie), as soon as the mother saw her daughter, she asked her. Der Bein ift gut, ich sam Ihnen denselbe (for ihn Ihnen) empselben, the wine is good, I can recommend it to you.

2. Derse bige and ter namlice are also in use as well as terselbe. The identity of an object is made more emphatic in even berselbe, the very same, the self-same, and in ein und berselbe, one and the same.

EXERCISE XXXVI.

That one has broken the glass. Do you know that one? I have seen her (or, that one). With those oncs I am wellpleased.² We have heard that already. I do not recollect³ that. I shall buy no more pictures, I have enough 5 of them. These grapes will soon be ripe. I admire the beautiful blossoms of this tree. Do you like these ribbons? Do you know that lady? My friend lives in 9 that house. That house is to be let. 10 That piece of land is to be sold. 11 That old tree shall 12 be cut down. 13 That tree which 14 bears 15 no fruit, will be cut down. The sister as well as 16 her friend 17 commanded 18 our admiration; 19 the latter by 20 her beauty, the former by her modesty.21 I prefer 22 those advisers 23 who 4 love my welfare.25 He (or, that one) who 26 performs27 his duties conscientiously,²⁸ enjoys²⁹ true³⁰ peace of mind.³¹ Such deeds deserve³² imitation,³³ Such fruits do not grow everywhere.34 Can you write with such a pen? The same sun illuminates35 the whole earth. It is the same lady. Play the same piece once more.³⁶ I have struggled³⁷ with the same difficulties.³⁸ My friend has written to me on ³⁹ the same day. This is a day of [the] joy.40 This is my younger brother, and these are my sisters. Is this your umbrella? These are my gloves. That is a falsehood. That is Dr B. We have heard nothing 41 of 42 that. I declare 43 myself satisfied 44 with that. By 45 this you will know me. Have the goodness 46 to inquire 47 after 48 this.

⁴¹ Nothing, nichts. ⁴² Of, von. ⁴⁸ To declare, crflären. ⁴⁴ Satisfied, zufrieben. ⁴⁵ By, an. ⁴⁶ Goodness, Güte. ⁴⁷ To inquire, sich . . . zu etfundigen. ⁴⁶ After, nach.

IV. INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 205. Interrogative pronouns inquire regarding an object. There are four:— wer? who? was? what? welcher, welche, welches? which? was für ein, eine, ein? what kind of?

The declension of mer and mas is as follows:-

Nom. wer, who; maß, what.

Gen. weffen, whose; meffen, of what.

Dat. wem, to whom; (dative is wanting).

Acc. wen, whom; waß, what.

Neither wer nor was has a plural.

Bas cannot be connected with a preposition; the adverbers is then used in its stead (or wor, if the preposition begin with a vowel), and the preposition is annexed; as—woven, of what; wordth, through what; would, with what; wordt, in what; wordth, upon what. For example:—Bovon frach er? what did he speak of? Bounit fann ich Ihnen bienen? with what can I serve you? Borin habe ich gefehlt? in what have I done wrong? But instead of worum, for what, why, warkin is generally used.

Belder, e, es, is declined like an adjective after the strong declension. In was für ein, only ein is declined. Before names of materials, and in the plural, ein is dropped, as in was für Bein? what kind of wine? Bas für Gläser? what kind of glasses?

Note.

The old genitive of wer and of was—namely, wes or wes—occurs sometimes in poetry; e.g.—Mes ift bie unsichtsare hand, bie Mumentranz um Khâler wand? Wessenberg, whose is the invisible hand which wound wreaths of slowers round valleys? It is also preserved in weshalb and weswegen, on what account, wherefore.

§ 206. Both wer and was are substantive pronouns, whence they cannot be joined to a substantive. For example:—Wer ruft Hise? Wer war's? Sch., who calls for help? who was it? Wessen Gantschrift ist dies? whose handwriting is this? Wen meinen Sie? whom do you mean? Ich weiß nicht, wen Sie meinen, I do not know whom you mean. Was ist geschehn? what has happened? Was sehe ich! what do I see! Sag an, was du geschen hast, say what thou hast seen.

Notes

- 1. It is but very rarely that mas occurs in connection with a substantive, and in such instances it signifies 'what a quantity,' or 'what a number;' e. g.—WB as Golp, mas Exclicine! U., what gold, what precious stones!
- 2. Was is sometimes employed in the sense of 'why;' e.g.—Was lachst tu? why doest thou laugh? Was jauberst tu? Sch., why doest thou hesitate? Was gagt mein Herz? Gellert, why does my heart sear?
- § 207. Welcher and was für ein have the nature of adjectives, and can therefore be joined to substantives. Whilst wer and was inquire quite indefinitely, the former after a person, the latter after a thing, welcher, e, es, inquires after a particular person or thing, and was für ein, eine, ein, after a particular kind or sort. For example:—Welches Buch soul ich zuerst lesen, Schiller's William Tell, ober Wallenstein? Which book am I to read first, Schiller's William Tell, or Wallenstein? Was für ein Buch soll ich lesen, eine Novelle ober ein historisches Wert? What kind of book am I to read, a novel or a historical work? Welches Pserd wollen Siereiten? Den Braumen. Which horse are you going to ride? The bay horse. Bas für ein Pserd ist dies? Ein Araber. What kind of horse is this? An Arabian.

Notes.

1. The same mode of expression as the German mas für ein, is to be met with also in old English; e.g.—What art thou for an animal, to suck thy livelihood out of my carcass? What is he for a fool, that betroths himself to unquietness, Shakspeare. It is worthy of notice that, as in these examples, so also in German, the pronoun mas is sometimes separated from für ein; as in was soll ich fur ein Buch lesen? what kind of book am I to read? Was ist bas für ein Mann, bas ihm Wind und Meer gehorsam ist! B., what manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

2. Weich ein (welch being indeclinable) is sometimes used in the sense of was für ein, especially in expressions of wonder. For example:—Seht, welch cin Kell: Sch., see, what a feast! Ach, welch ein Wehnert ter Unichuld und Kreube! Kr., ah, what an abode of innocence and joy! Or without ein:—Welch Bertrauen ist bas! G., what considence is this! Welch Schückla aber with das eure sein! Sch., but what will be your fate! Welch is inflected, however, when the substantive is of the semining gender:—In dieser Armut, welche Külle! In dieser Kerser, welche Scligfeit! G., In this poverty, what abundance! In this dungeon, what bliss!

EXERCISE XXXVII.

Who comes? Who are these strangers? Who is the author of this comedy? Whose works do you study? To whom do these fine horses belong? Whom did he mention? From how have you received this present? What do you seek? What is the matter? What is more hateful than [the] lying? I do not know what he means. My Of what is the woman accused? With what can I console you? With what shall? I pass! the time? Of what is she so proud? Which tailor do you employ? Which countries have you visited? What sort of hats are now [being] worn in Paris? To which fashion do you give the preference? What kind of play? Which part does Mr K. act? E Advise (15) me what kind of books I am to read. Which authors to be let? From

V. RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

§ 208. A relative pronoun puts an explanatory clause in connection with another sentence. The Germanic languages have no peculiar word for the relative pronoun, but employ other pronouns in its place. Thus the German language uses in the sense of relatives three interrogative pronouns and one demonstrative, namely—wer, who;

was, what;
welcher, e, es,
ber, die, das,
} who, which, that.

The declension of wer, was, and welder, is the same as when these pronouns are used interrogatively; and ber, Die, Das, is declined in the same manner as the demonstrative when used substantively, namely—

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	ber, die, das;	bie.
Gen.	deffen, beren, beffen ;	beren.
	bem, ber, bem;	benen.
Acc.	den, die, das;	die.

1. The form best in the genitive, for bessen, is met with only in poetry; e.g.—Wo bist bu, Faust, best Stimme mir erflang? G., where art thou, Faust, whose voice resounded to me? Dut liegt ber Sanger auf ber Bahre, best bleicher Mund kein Lieb beginnt, U., there lies the minstrel upon the bier, whose pale mouth begins no song.

2. The use of 10 as a relative pronoun is obsolete. It occurs now and then in poetry, is indeclinable, and can only stand for the nominative and accusative in the singular and plural.

§ 209. Wer and was, being substantive pronouns, cannot be used as relatives in connection with a noun or personal pronoun. As mer, who, is equivalent to 'he who' or 'the man who,' and was, what, to 'that which,' or 'the thing which,' they do not even require that a demonstrative should precede them. For example :- Wer nicht horen will, muß fuhlen, Prov., who (or, he who) does not wish to hear, must feel. Was bu beute thun fannft, verschiebe nicht auf morgen, what (or, that which) thou canst do to-day, do not delay till to-morrow. But the demonstratives corresponding with mer and mas-namely, her and bas-may be put at the head of the second clause, as in Wer nicht boren will, ber muß fühlen. Wer lügt, ber stiehlt auch, he who lies, steals also. Was bu beute thun fannst, das verschiebe nicht auf morgen, latter case, the demonstrative may go before the relative :bas mas bu heute thun fannft, verschiebe nicht auf morgen. Er gestand bas, was er wußte, he confessed that which he knew.

Was is also used after nichts, nothing; etwas, something; alles, everything; vieles, much; manches, many a thing; and after the neuter of an adjective in the superlative degree, as—bas Befte was ich habe, the best that I have. Wer can be used after Jeber, every one.

Note.

There is one other case in which was is correctly used, namely, when the relative pronoun which refers to the whole preceding clause, and not to a particular word in that clause, as—cr ging ofine einen güfrer fort, was feft unversichtig war, he went away without a guide, which was very imprudent.

§ 210. Welcher, e, cs, and ber, bie, bas, are adjective pronouns, and agree in gender and number with the noun to which they refer. There is no material difference of signification between these two pronouns, and it must be decided by euphony or taste which shall be employed in any particular case.

There are only two cases in which the requisite forms of ber, bie, bas must be used; namely—

1. When the relative pronoun stands in the genitive, in English 'of which, of whom, whose.' For example:—Der Herr, beffen Haus ich kaufte, ist ausgewandert, the gentleman whose house I bought, has emigrated. Der Mond, dessen Scheibe fast voll war, beleuchtete die runden Gipfel des Gebirges, in dessen Thale Carracas liegt, Humboldt, the moon, whose disk was nearly full, illuminated the round tops of the mountains in whose valley Carracas lies. Die Bücher, deren ich bedarf, sind bestellt worden, the books which I require have been ordered. Die Geschichte, deren Kenntniß so wichtig ist, history, the knowledge of which is so important.

Note

The genitive of welder, e, es, is used only when the relative is joined to a substantive explanatory of the antecedent—that is, of the name of the person or thing to which the relative refers; e. g.—Cicero, weiches großen Redners Schriften ich gelesen habe, Cicero, the writings of which great orator I have read.

2. Der, bie, bas, must be used when the relative refers to a personal pronoun of the first or second person of the singular or plural, or to that of the third person plural in the sense of 'you.' Some of the subjoined examples shew that the personal pronoun is sometimes repeated in the relative clause, and that the verb in the relative clause is then made to agree with the personal pronoun. This, however, is not always done. Examples :- Erfennft du mich, Die ich in manche Wunde bes Lebens bir ben reinsten Balfam aofi? G., Dost thou recognise me (namely, the goddess of truth), who poured the purest balm into many a wound of thy life? Das wissen wir, die wir die Gemsen jagen, Sch., we know that who hunt the chamois. Du, die du alle Wunden heilest, ber Freundschaft leise, zarte Hand, Sch., thou which healest all wounds, the soft, tender hand of friendship. Berachtest bu so beinen Raifer, Tell, und mich, ber bier an feiner Statt gebietet? Sch., Dost thou thus despise thy emperor, Tell, and me who rule here in his stead?

EXERCISE XXXVIII.

Who has understanding, possesses a great treasure. Who is my friend, must tell [to] me my faults. I shall do what I have promised. Let me know what I have to fear. He has told [to] me all that he knew. Nothing which happened 9 escaped 10 her attention. 11 That is something 12 that I could never 13 understand. 14 The best 15 that you can do is, to give up the contest. The man who gave [to] me the letter was well dressed. He is a man whom thou canst trust.18 I know the advisers 19 whom thou followest.20 The sculptor²¹ who has made this statue,²² is a famous²³ artist.24 I give [to] you the same sum 25 which I have received.26 The plans 27 which you have mentioned will not be executed, 28 The book which I read is very entertaining. 29 The house which I inhabit³⁰ is my property.³¹ The affair³² of 33 which we talked 34 yesterday, is more important 35 than we thought.36 The finest joys 37 are those which we prepare 38 for others.³⁹ The merchant in whose hands⁴⁰ your money is, has become bankrupt.41 Is Mr M. the lawyer42 whose integrity 43 you praised so much? 44 Dr C. is a man in 45 whose skill 46 you can confide. 47 I shall send [to] you the books which you require. 48 They were daily 49 [being] entertained 50 with songs, the subject 51 of which (say, whose subject) was the happy valley. I who [1] am older than you, will assist 62 you with my advice. 53 I owe 54 it to thee who [thou] hast always 55 loaded 56 me with kindness.57

⁹ To happen, vergehen. ¹⁰ To escape, entgehen; governs the dative. ¹¹ Attention, Aufmertfamfeit. ¹² Something, etwas. ¹³ Never, nie. ¹⁴ To understand, begreifen. ¹⁵ The best, tas Beht. ¹⁶ To give up the contest, ten Etreit aufgageben. ¹⁷ Well dressed, webt gefleitet. ¹⁸ To trust, trauen; governs the dative. ¹⁹ Adviser, Rathgeber. ²⁰ To follow, folgen; governs the dative. ²¹ Sculptor, Eithhauer. ²² Statue, Etatie. ²³ Famous, terühmt. ²⁴ Artist, Künßter. ²⁵ Sum, Summe. ²⁶ To receive, empfangen. ²⁷ Plan, Man. ²⁸ To execute, ausführen. ²⁹ Entertaining, unterhattenb. ³⁰ To inhabit, hendham. ³¹ Property, Eigenthum. ³² Affair, Angelgenheit. ³³ Of, von, with the dative. ³⁴ To talk, reten. ³⁵ Important, nichtig. ³⁶ To think, glauben. ³⁷ Joy, Steube. ³⁸ To prepare, bereiten. ³⁹ For others, Antern. ⁴⁰ Use the dative which is governed by in. ⁴¹ To become bankrupt, Banferott machen. ⁴² Lawyer, Aboutat. ⁴³ Integrity, Rediaffeit. ⁴⁷ To confide, fich verlaffen. ⁴⁸ In, here auf. ⁴⁶ Skill, Gefchäfichteit. ⁴⁷ To confide, fich verlaffen. ⁴⁸ To require, bedürfen; governs the genitive. ⁴⁹ Daily, tāglich. ⁵⁰ To entertain, unterhalten. (See § 109.) ⁵¹ Subject, Gegenfant. ⁴² To assist, beiftehen; governs the dative. ⁵³ Advice, Rath; use the dative which is governed by mit. ⁵⁴ To owe, verbanten. ⁵⁵ Always, immer; comes after ⁴ me. ⁵⁶ To load, überhaufen. (See § 109.) ⁵⁷ Kindness, Güte.

§ 211. From pronouns are formed some Pronominal Adverbs, denoting place, time, and manner. They are partly of a demonstrative, partly of an interrogative and relative nature.

The following are demonstrative:—1. Denoting place—tq, there, at that place; bort, yonder; hier (or hie), here, at this place; her, hither, towards the speaker; hin, hence, thither, away from the speaker: bannen, or bon bannen, from thence, away; and hinnen, or bon hinnen, from hence, are obsolete.

2. Denoting time—bann, then, at that time.

3. Denoting manner—fo, so, thus.

The following are interrogative and relative:—1. Denoting place—wo, where, at what place; woher, whence, from what place; wohen, whither, to what place: von wannen, from whence, is obsolete. 2. Denoting time—wann, when, at what time. 3. Denoting manner—wie, how, in what manner.

Da, hier, wo, her, and hin can be joined with prepositions. When the preposition begins with a vowel, har is used for ha (from the old High-German thar, English 'there'), and wor or war—the latter form in one instance only, namely, warum—for wo (from the old High-German war, English 'where.') hie can be used for hier before a consonant. Numerous examples of prepositions joined to ba, hier, and wo, have been given above, to illustrate the prevailing practice of employing such forms as bafür, barauf, hiervon, hienit, woven, worin, &c., instead of joining prepositions with the neuter pronouns e8, bas, bies, was. See § 193; § 200, note 2; § 201, note 2; § 203.

Ger and hin are frequently connected with prepositions to express at once the motion of an object, and the direction of the motion with regard to the position of the speaker. For example:—Er fam herauf, he came up, that is, to where I am. Er ging hinauf, he went up, that is, away from where I am. Gehen Sie hinauß, go out, away from me. Kommen Sie herauß, come out, towards me.

§ 212. The relative pronouns wer, was, and welcher, and the relative pronominal adverbs we, woher, wohin, wann, wie, are often put in connection with auch, or immer, or nur, in English 'ever,' or 'soever,' by which means their signification becomes generalised and indefinite. For example:—Und welchen Breis nun auch mein Werf erhält, euch bant' ihn, G., and whatever praise my work receives, it is to you that I owe it. Sie brachte, was sie nur hatte, G., she brought whatever she had. Was ihr auch Schweres mögt zu leiden haben, tragt's in Geduld, Sch., whatever hardships you may have to susser, bear them with patience. Wer die Wahrheit hier suchte, dem blüht dort Freude hervor, wo er nur hindlickt, Engel, who sought the truth here, to him joy blooms yonder whithersoever he looks.

¹ Invert the order, according to § 48, 3. ² See § 195, note. ³ Account, Mcchaung. ⁴ To end, enten. ⁵ War, Krieg. ˚ Use the perfect. † Shall, foll. ⁵ To turn, wenten. ⁵ To spell, buchflabiren; use the present of the passive. ¹⁰ Up, . . . auf. ¹¹ In, . . . ein. ¹² Out, . . . auf. ¹³ Down stairs, hinunter. ¹⁴ Price, Breis. ¹¹⁵ To ask, fortern. ¹¹⁶ Creator, ⊗chbufer. ¹¹ To look, bitiden.

VI. INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

§ 213. The indefinite pronouns speak of persons and things in an indefinite or general way. They have the nature of substantives, but can be used only in the singular number. The following are of this description:—

Severmann, everybody; Semand, somebody, anybody; Niemand, nobody, not anybody; man, one, people; etwas, something, anything; nichts, nothing, not anything.

Sebermann takes & in the genitive—Sebermanns. Semanb and Niemanb have in the genitive Semanbes, Niemanbes; in the dative and sometimes in the accusative Semanben, Niemanben. Man, etwas, and nichts are indeclinable.

The numeral Einer, some one, is often used for Semanh, and Reiner, no one, for Niemanh. They are both declined after the strong declension of adjectives. Einer supplies also the wanting cases of the indeclinable man.

§ 214. Sebermann answers precisely to the English 'everybody.' But it should be noticed that the English 'any, anyone, anybody,' are sometimes used in affirmative sentences in the sense of 'every, every one, everybody,' and must in such cases be translated by Sebermann or Seber; e.g.—Sebermann (or Seber) fann Ihnen fagen, wo ich wohne, anybody can tell you where I live; or, when used adjectively, jebe (or bie erste beste) Feber ift gut genug, any pen will do.

§ 215. Man, like the French 'on,' is used to a greater extent than the English 'one.' As it indicates the notion of a person in the most indefinite manner (being originally the same as the substantive Mann, in old High-German man, that is, a human being, a person), it is very properly employed when an action, which is naturally conceived as being performed by a person, is to be represented without any definite subject. The English make use of different expressions for the same end; such as 'one, people, they, a person,' or they give the sentence a passive form. For example:—Man läuft, they are running. Man schreit, they scream. Man fagt, people say. Ertragen muß man, was ber himmel fendet, Sch., one must bear what Heaven sends. Man führt bie Waffen nicht vergebens, Sch., one does not carry arms to no purpose. Man hört eine Trommel, Sch., a drum is heard. Dit grobem Binn bebient man ihre Tafel, Sch., her table is served with coarse pewter.

The indefinite possessive pronoun, correlative with man, is fein, one's, and the indefinite reflective pronoun sich, one's self. For example:—Man muß auf seiner hut sein, one must be on one's guard. Man erfältet sich leicht, one easily catches cold.

Notes.

^{1.} When placed after an adjective or pronoun, as the substitute for a substantive either mentioned before or understood, 'one' is not translated; as—Dem frohen Tage folgt ein trüber, Platen, after the happy day follows a dull one. Ich mag bas einfache Muster lieber als bas geblümte, I like the plain pattern better than the flowered one. Belches gefällt Inen am besten? which (one) do you like best?

- 2. 'One' before a proper name, as in—one Albert Schmid; one Captain Jones; one Louise Karsch, is rendered by ein gewisser:— ein gemisser Albert Schmib; ein gewisser Capitan Jones; eine gewisse Louise Karfch.
- § 216. Etwas and nichts can be joined to an adjective in the neuter gender, the latter assuming the force of a substantive. For example:—Etwas Unerhörtes, something unheard of. Mit nichts Geringen, with nothing small. Der Reichthum hat durch sich selbst nie etwas Großes erzeugt, Jacobs, wealth by itself never produced anything great. Die Liebe thut dem Nächsten nichts Böses, B., love worketh no ill to his neighbour.

Notes.

- 1. Instead of ctwas, the abbreviated was is sometimes used; e.g.—3ch will bit was sagen, I'll tell you what. Bright bu was Neues? I'll tell you some news. Bu was Bessern sinb wir geweren, Sch., we are born for some better end. In the same manner wer has often, in the familiar style of speaking, the force of Semand, somebody, wer being an abbreviation for the old High-German etver or etswer, meaning 'somebody.' For example:—Es is were given compensation for the old representation of the old representation of
- 2. Etwas, when connected with the name of a material or an abstract noun, assumes the meaning of an indefinite numeral, as in—etwas Geld, some money; etwas Brod, some bread; etwas Berfland, some understanding. Some indefinite numerals, on the other hand, as einige, etlide, mancher, feinet, jever, can assume the character of substantive pronouns, when the substantive to which they stand in the relation of adjectives is omitted or understood, as in—Einige behaupten, some (people) maintain; Mancher tentt, many a person thinks; Keiner will es glauben, nobody will believe it. But, strictly speaking, these words are not substantive pronouns, like Severmann, Niemand, &c., but adjectives expressing an indefinite numerical relation.
- § 217. There remain to be noticed a number of Indefinite Pronominal Adverbs, which denote place, time, and manner in an indefinite way:—

irgent originally denotes the relation of place indefinitely, but is now employed more generally for any other indefinite relation. It is joined to other indefinite pronouns and pronominal adverbs; as—irgent Semant, any person; irgent ein, any one; irgent etwas, anything; irgent wo, somewhere, anywhere; irgent wie, in some way, in any way, &c.

nirgent, or nirgents, nowhere, is the opposite of irgent, but can be used with regard to place only.

je, ever, at any time, refers to time in its whole unlimited extent.

nie, never, is the opposite of je.

immer, always, at all times. When joined to relative pronouns or relative pronominal adverbs, it makes their signification more indefinite and general. See § 212.

ninumer, never, at no time (literally, no more, from the old High-German niomer, that is, nie mely) is the opposite of immer (old High-German iomer, that is, je mely). It is chiefly employed by poets.

cinft, once, one day, either in the past or in the future (in old High-German eines).

etma, perhaps (from etmas).

NUMERALS.

§ 218. Numerals are words which are joined to substantives to denote the number or quantity of objects. They participate to a certain extent in the nature of adjectives, yet do not, like these, express qualities inherent in objects, but merely their outward numerical or quantitative relation. Hence numerals are justly designated quantitative adjectives.

Numerals denote either a definite or indefinite number or quantity, and are therefore divided into definite and indefinite numerals. Of the former class are, for example, brei, three; vier, four: ber britte, the third; ber vierte, the fourth; of the latter, jeber, every; einige, some; viel, much; menig, little. The definite numerals are subdivided as follows:-

I. CARDINAL NUMERALS.

1. eins, one (ein, eine, ein).

2. zwei, two. 3. brei, three.

4. vier, four.

5. fünf, five.

6. sechs, six.

7. steben, seven.

8, acht, eight.

9. neun, nine.

10. gehn, ten.

11. elf, eleven.

12. amölf, twelve.

13. breizehn, thirteen. 14. pierzehn, fourteen.

15. funfzehn or fünfzehn. fifteen.

16. sechzehn, sixteen.

- 17. stebsehn, seventeen.
- 18. achtzehn, eighteen.
- 19. neunzehn, nineteen.
- 20. zwanzia, twenty.
- 21. ein und zwanzig, one and twenty.
- 22. zwei und zwanzig, two and twenty.
- 23. brei und zwanzig, three and twenty.
- 30. breißig, thirty.
- 40. vierzig, forty.
- 50. funfzig or fünfzig, fifty.
- 60. sedzia, sixty.
- 70. stebzig, seventy.
- 80. adytzig, eighty.
 90. neunzig, ninety.
- 100. hundert, a hundred.
- 101. hunbert (unb) eins, one hundred and one.
- 102. hundert (und) zwei, one hundred and two.

- 103. hunbert (unb) brei, one hundred and three.
- 130. hunbert (unb) breißig, one hundred and thirty.
- 131. hunbert ein unb breißig, one hundred and thirtyone.
- 200. zweihundert, two hundred.
- 300. breihundert, three hundred.
- 1000. tausend, a thousand.
- 2000. zweitausenb, two thousand.
- 10,000. zehntausenb, ten thousand.
- 100,000. hunberttausenb, one hundred thousand.
- 1,000,000. eine Million, a million.
- 2,000,000. zwei Millionen, two millions.

Note.

Cardinal numerals, in the strict sense of the word-that is, principal or fundamental numerals - are only those from eins up to sehn, with huntert and taufent. From these all the rest are formed, either by being compounded with one another, as-breigehn, viergehn, or by being compounded with some other words, as-clf, sworlf, swanzig, breißig, vierzig, &c. Elf or cilf, which latter form is obsolete, is in old High-German einlif: amount is in old High-German zuelif. The word lif is derived from the Gothic leiban-that is, bleiben, to remain-(in Anglo-Saxon lyfan, in English 'leave'); hence clf signifies literally 'one over (ten);' and swolf (substituted in new High-German for the middle High-German zwelf) signifies literally 'two over (ten).' The syllable aig, which is affixed to the units to form the tens, and which is in breißig softened into ßig, is derived from the Gothic noun tigus, Greek dekas, meaning the number 'ten,' which in all the compound numerals from twenty up to ninety was changed into zuc or zoc in old High-German, zec in middle High-German, and zig in the language of the present day. Swanzig is a corrupt form for zweinzig, which was formerly in use. The substantive Million is borrowed by the modern language from the French million, which is derived from the Latin mille, a thousand.

§ 219. Among all the cardinal numbers, only ein has a complete declension. It is declined like an adjective either after the strong or the weak declension, according to circumstances. But when followed by a substantive, and declined after the strong form, it loses, like the indefinite article, its inflectional termination in the nominative of the masculine, and in the nominative and accusative of the neuter gender. In simply counting, eins (a contraction for the neuter eines) is used, when the object counted is understood. When it stands in connection with another numeral, as in ein unb breißig, it is not inflected.

Note.

The plural of cin, namely, tie Ginen, occurs only in the signification of 'the one set or party, some people,' in opposition to the Andern, 'the other set or party, other people.' Gin is also used, like 'one' in English, in the signification of 'the same;' e. g.—Gine Stadt hat une geboren, Sch., the same (one) town has given birth to us. Fire cine Sache heben mir ten Arn, Sch., we raise the arm for the same (one) cause.

§ 220. Swei and brei have no different forms for the three genders, but can be inflected in the genitive and dative; namely—genitive zweier, breier; dative zweien, breien. These inflected forms are employed only when no substantive follows; but that of the genitive is also used, even before a substantive, if the case of the substantive is not shewn by any article or pronoun preceding the numeral. For example—bie Ausgage zweier Zeugen, the evidence of two witnesses; but bie Ausgage biefer zwei Zeugen, the evidence of these two witnesses. In have a breien gefagt, I have said it to three persons; but ich have es ben brei Brübern gefagt, I have said it to the three brothers.

Notes.

 Swet had formerly a complete declension for each of the three genders, which was preserved even beyond the middle of last century, but is now quite obsolete. The nominative was gueen for the masculine gender, goo for the feminine, gwet for the neuter.

2. Brite, both, does not, like zwei, signify a number, but, presupposing the number as known, it expresses that of two persons or things, not the one only but also the other is meant. Being an adjective, it is declined either after the strong or the weak declension. For example:—Er hat awei Soone after beite fint taut, he has two sons, but both are deaf. Der

Mann hat beibe kuse verloren, the man has lost both feet. Die beiben Brüber sinb tobt, both the brothers are dead. Meine beiben Augen, both my eyes. Beibes kann geschehen, both things can happen. 'Both...and' cannot be expressed by beite, but by the conjunction sowost...as.

§ 221. The other cardinal numbers (except those ending in n) take the termination en in the dative (and rarely e in the nominative and accusative), when they are used substantively. For example:—Ich habe es fünfen gesagt, I have said it to five persons. Auf allen vieren kriechen, to crawl upon all-sours. Wit sechsen fahren, to go in a coach and six. Alle neune wersen, to knock down all the nine (at ninepins).

Sundert and tausend are used as substantives of the neuter gender both in the singular and plural; e.g.—bas crite Sundert, the first hundred. Sunderte waren zugegen, hundreds were present. Bu Tausenden, in thousands. Ein gauzes Tausend, a whole thousand. When they form part of a compound numeral, however, they remain unchanged, as in zweihundert, viertausend.

Million always retains the nature of a substantive. It is of the feminine gender, and is declined accordingly:—mit einer Million Soldaten, with a million of soldiers; einige Millionen, some millions.

Note.

Tie Eins, die Inei, die Drei, the one, the two, the three, &c., upon dice, cards, or the like, are substantives, and follow the weak declension. By means of the suffixes et and ling, masculine substantives are formed from cardinal numerals with various significations; as—ein Bierziger, a man of forty years of age; ein Achtziger, a man of eighty years of age (octogenarian). Ein Dreite, ein Sechse, names of small coins. Elier, Sechse und vierziger, wine of the vintage of the year eleven, forty-six. I willing, twin; Drifting, one of three children born at a birth.

§ 222. Distributive Numerals—that is, numerals answering to the question, 'How many each time?'—have no special form in German. The cardinal numbers are used for the purpose, the adverb je being prefixed; as—je zwei, two at a time; je brei, three at a time; or the cardinal number is put twice, with unb between, as—zwei unb zwei, two and two; brei unb brei, three and three.

II. ORDINAL NUMERALS.

§ 223. The ordinal numerals, from zwei to neurzehn inclusive, are formed from the cardinal numerals by adding t, and from zwanzig upwards by adding ft. They are declined like adjectives. For 'the first' there is used the superlative ber crite (from eh, early), and for 'the third' ber britte (from the old High-German dritto). In compound numerals, the last only takes the termination of the ordinal. The following table contains some of the ordinal numerals, according to which all the others may be formed:—

1. ber, die, das erfte, the first.
               " zweite, the second.
   2.
               " britte, the third.
   3.
   4.
               " vierte, the fourth.

               " funfzehnte, the fifteenth, &c.
  20. //
               " zwanziaste, the twentieth.
  21. "
               " ein und zwanzigste, the twenty-first.
  22.
               " zwei und zwanzigste, the twenty-second.
       11
  30.
               " breifigste, the thirtieth.
  31.
               " ein und dreißigste, the thirty-first.
       11 11
               " vierzigste, the fortieth.
  40. " "
               " hundertste, the hundredth.

               " zweihundertste, the two hundredth.
1000.
               " tausenoste, the thousandth.
```

Note

The ordinal bet sweits, the second, is a word of modern formation. The older language, even down to the time of Luther, employed bet anbett, the other, which has now lost the force of a numeral. When 'another' is used in English in the sense of 'one more,' it is expressed in German by noth in; e.g.—Darf ich Mnen noch ein Glas Wein antieten? may I offer you another glass of wine? 'The other day' is expressed by neutich; 'the other evening' by neutich Mends; 'the other morning' by neutich Morgens.

§ 224. When an ordinal number is used, for the sake of distinction, in conjunction with the proper name of a person, it is placed after the name, as in English; e. g.—Friedrich der Zweite, Frederick the Second. Ludwig der Sechzehnte, Louis the Sixteenth.

In stating the date of the month, the ordinal number is employed adjectively; as—her erste Januar, the first of January; hen (or am) secheten December, on the sixth of December.

§ 225. Distinctive Numerals—that is, adverbs expressing succession—are formed from the ordinal numerals by adding cn8; as—erftens (or critici), firstly, or in the first place. zweitens, secondly, or in the second place. brittens, thirdly, or in the third place. viertens, fourthly, or in the fourth place, &c.

III. NUMERALS FORMED BY COMPOSITION.

§ 226. Variative Numerals answer to the question, 'How many kinds?' and are formed from cardinal numerals by adding to the genitive in et the old feminine substantive tei, which signifies, 'way, manner, or kind,' but is no longer in use as a separate word. They are used adjectively, but cannot be declined. For example:—

einerlei, of one kind. zweierlei, of two kinds. breierlei, of three kinds. viererlei, of four kinds, &c.

In the same manner are formed—vielerlei, of many kinds; manderlei, of various kinds; mehrerlei, of several kinds; allerlei, of all kinds,

§ 227. Multiplicative Numerals, answering to the question, 'How many fold?' are formed by adding futh or faltig to cardinal numerals. They are used and declined like adjectives. For example:—

einfach, simple.
zweifach or zwiefach, twofold.
breifach, threefold.
vierfach, fourfold.
hunbertfach, a hundredfold, &c.

Or zweifältig, breifältig, vierfältig, hunbertfältig, &c. The latter forms are less common. The word einfältig is only used in a figurative sense, meaning 'simple, artless, or silly.' The indefinite multiplicatives vielfady or vielfältig, mehrfady or mehrfältig, mannigfady or mannigfaltig (not mannigfältig), are formed in the same way.

§ 228. Reiterative Numerals, answering to the question, 'How often?' are formed from cardinal numerals by adding the noun Mal, time; as—einmal, once. zweimal, twice. breimal, thrice. viermal, four times, &c.

And in the same manner allemal, manchmal, jedesmal, &c. Being adverbs, they are indeclinable; but adjectives are formed from them by adding the syllable ig; e.g.—sein breimaliger Besuch, his thrice-repeated visit.

Note.

From the adverbial numeral cinmal (with the accent on cin) must be distinguished the adverb of time cinmal (with the accent on mal), meaning 'once, once upon a time.' For instance:—Ad habe the murcinmal gefehen, I have only seen him once. Go war cinmal cin König, there was once a king.

§ 229. Fractional Numbers are formed by compounding the ordinals with tel, which is a contraction for Eneil, part; as—ein Drittel, a third (part).

" Viertel, a fourth.

" Fünftel, a fifth.

" Sechstel, a sixth, &c.

These are declined like substantives of the neuter gender. Instead of Swettel is used the adjective half, half, which is declined like every other adjective; e.g.—ein halbes Stück Tuch, half a piece of cloth; ber halbe Tag, half the day; eine halbe Stunde, half an hour. But before names of towns and countries without the definite article, halb remains unchanged; as—halb Paris, half Paris; halb Frankreich, half France (§ 175, 4).

By compounding the ordinal numerals with halb, the following indeclinable fractionals are formed:—

anterthalb, one and a half (used for zweitehalb). brittehalb, two and a half. viertehalb, three and a half. funftehalb, four and a half.

Examples:—Buri Drittel, two-thirds; brei Fünftel, threefifths; anberthalb Boll, one inch and a half; brittehalb Weilen, two miles and a half; viertehalb Stunden, three hours and a half; vier und drei Viertel Pfund, four pounds and three quarters; neun und ein Viertel Ellen, nine yards and a quarter.

§ 230. The hours of the day are indicated in the following manner:—

es ift fünf Uhr, it is five o'clock.

" " ein Viertel auf seche, it is a quarter past five.

" " halb sechs, it is half-past five.

" " brei Biertel auf feche, it is a quarter to six.

" " in zehn Minuten sechs, it is ten minutes to six.

" " funf Minuten nach or über sechs, it is five minutes past six.

INDEFINITE NUMERALS.

§ 231. The following words are comprised under the class of indefinite numerals:—

fein, feine, fein, no, not any. jeder, e, eß, jeglicher, e, eß, jedmeder, e, eß, aller, e, eß, all. mancher, e, eß, many a, some. einige, some. some. biel, much. wenig, little, few.

These are all declined as adjectives, under certain restrictions in some particular cases, which will be noticed in their proper places.

§ 232. Kein, keine, kein, no, none, not any, is declined exactly as the definite numeral ein, eine, ein (on which see § 219). For example:—Wir haben keine Waffen, Sch., we have no weapons. Dich schreckt kein Sturm, Sch., no storm terrifies thee. Ift unter allen meinen Dienern keiner, ber die verhaßte Wahl mir spart? Sch., is there not one among all my servants who spares me the hated choice? Ex scheint ein Rathsel, und doch ist ex keines, G., it seems a riddle, and yet it is none. Keiner is also used substantively for Niemand, nobody, no person. (See § 213, and § 216, note 2.)

§ 233. Jeber, jede, jedes, or with the indefinite article, ein jeder, eine jede, ein jedes, is used both adjectively ('every, each') and substantively ('everybody'). It can only be employed in the singular number. Jeglidjer, e, es, or ein jeglidjer, eine jeglidjer, eine jeglidjer, eine jeglidjer, and jedureder, e, es, have the same meaning as jeder, and are likewise used substantively as well as adjectively, but, generally speaking, occur only in poetry. Examples:—Seinen Lauf hat jeder Bach, jeder Strom hat seine Sphäre, Rückert, every brook has its course, every stream its sphere. Ein jeder ift seines Glückes Schmied, Prov., everybody is the artisicer of his own fortune. Ein jeglicher benft nur sich selbst zu befriedigen, G., every one thinks only how he will satisfy himself. Sedwede Lugend, Königin, hast du auf deinem Ehron verherrlicht, Sch., queen, thou hast gloristed every virtue on thy throne.

§ 234. Aller, alle, alles, all, denotes number as well as quantity, and is used both adjectively and substantively. For example:—Willfommen waren alle Gäfte, Sch., all guests were welcome. Alle find frant, all are ill. Alles Geld ift ausgegeben, all money has been spent. Er weiß Alles, he knows everything. The definite article, which in English is often placed between 'all' and the substantive, is not expressed in German, except when it has the force of a demonstrative pronoun. Alle Einwohner der Stab begleiteten seine Leiche, all the inhabitants of the town attended his funeral. All sometimes remains uninflected before a possessive or demonstrative pronoun joined to a substantive in the singular number, as in all mein Erbtheil, Sch., all my inheritance; all dieser Glanz, all this splendour.

The neuter Miles, everything, is also applied to persons, in order to bring out with greater force the collective meaning; e.g.—Alles war entirely, all (without exception) were enraptured. Alles rath ihm ein milberes Klima zu suchen, Sch., all advise him to go to a warmer climate. Alles slichet mith, Sch., all flee from me.

The English 'every' is expressed by alle in the following and similar phrases:—alle Jahre, every year; alle Jage, every day; alle brei Monate, every three months; alle gwanzia Schritte, every twenty paces.

NT-4--

- 1. Gan, whole, differs from all, inasmuch as it expresses the complete and undivided state of an object, or of a unity consisting of parts, without in the least referring to the number of individual parts constituting the whole. The English employ 'all' as well as 'whole' in this sense. For example:—but ganze haus, the whole house; cin ganze Sanze awhole year; mein ganzer Körper, my whole body; tie ganze Familie, all the family; ten ganzien Taz, all day. Before proper names of countries and places, when used without the definite article, ganz is not declined, e.g.—ganz Gricchenlant, all Greece; in ganz Wien, in all Vienna. (See § 175, 4.)
- 2. Sammtlich, all together, and gesammt, whole, united, total, are stronger expressions for all and gang. Both have a collective meaning, but in sammtlich the numerical sense is predominant, whilst gesammt generally conveys the notion of an undivided mass or body; c. g.— sammtige Ammfente, all present; seine sammtichen Freunde, all his friends; tie gesammte Familie, the whole family; der gesammte Nachsaß, the whole bequest.

- § 235. Mancher, manche, manches, many a, some, signifies an indefinite plurality. It is used both in the singular and plural, with or without a substantive. For instance:— Mancher Mensch glaubt, or Mancher glaubt, many a one believes. Manche Menschen behaupten, or Wanche behaupten, many or some people assert. Er hat manches Unglud ersafren, he has met with many a missortune.
- § 236. Einige, some, a few, signifies a small number of persons or things indefinitely, and is generally used in the plural, either with or without a substantive; as—einige Menschen or Einige behaupten, some people, or some assert. Sie machte einige schenupten, some people, or some assert. Sie machte einige schenupten flunnersungen, G., she made some jocular remarks. When employed in the singular before names of materials and abstract nouns, it denotes an indefinite small quantity; as—einiges Hosz, some wood; einiges Possi, some fruit; einige Hossinung, some hope. The indefinite pronoun etwas can also be used in this case; as—etwas Geld, some money; etwas Obst, some fruit; etwas Giust, some luck. (See § 216, note 2.)

Etliche has much the same meaning as einige, but is less common.

Notes

- 1. In familiar conversation, the word weigher, \mathfrak{e} , $\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{s}$, is not unfrequently employed for the English 'some,' in reference to an object previously mentioned. It is a contraction for the old word etnether, the use of which has now become obsolete. For example:— $\mathfrak{G}\mathfrak{s}$ was frin \mathfrak{S} mufe, and in the Mähe liest frin $\mathfrak{D}\mathfrak{r}\mathfrak{t}$, we igh weighte $\mathfrak{s}\mathfrak{s}$ hat beforement finnen, Jacobs, there was no gunpowder in the house, and in the neighbourhood there is no place where I neighbourhood some.
- 2. When the English 'some' denotes neither an indefinite small number nor an indefinite small quantity, but an individual, although indefinite, person or thing, it must be translated by ein or irgent ein. For instance:—Some friend has told me, ein Freund hat es mit gesagt. I have read of it in some book, ich have bavon in irgent einem Buche gesesen.
- § 237. Biel, much, many, and wenig, little, few, denote, the former a large, and the latter a small number or quantity. When they refer to quantity, they are generally not declined;

as in—er trinkt viel Wasser, aber wenig Wein, he drinks much water, but little wine. When, on the contrary, they point out a number, they are always declined if used substantively; as in—Viele waren eingelaben worden, aber Wenige waren gekommen, many had been invited, but sew had come. But if used adjectively, they are sometimes declined, sometimes left unchanged; e.g.—er hat viele Freunde, he has many friends. Maria hat noch viel verborgne Freunde, Sch., Mary still has many secret friends. Wenige Jahre können Vieles ändern, a sew years can change many things. In wenig Stunden sann die Nachricht da sein, Sch., in a sew hours the news can be here.

The comparatives mehr, more, and weniger, less, fewer, are not declined. Mehrere has the meaning of 'several;' as in—mehrere Monate, several months. The superlatives ber, die, das meiste, most, and der, die, das wenigste, least, sewest, are declined, and, contrary to the custom of the English language, cannot be used without the definite article; e.g.—die meisten Städte Deutschlands, most towns of Germany. Die wenigsten Leute hatten davon gehört, sewest people had heard of it.

§ 238. If a number is to be stated by approximation only, the following adverbs and prepositions are employed:—etwa, ungefähr, an, gegen, about; beinahe, faft, nearly; faum, scarcely; über, above; unter, under; bis, to (as breißig bis vierzig, from thirty to forty). 'Thirty and odd, forty and odd,' &c., is expressed by breißig unb einige, vierzig unb einige.

EXERCISE XLIL

ADVERBS.

§ 239. Adverbs are words which modify the ideas expressed by verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs; as in fit fingt fchön, she sings beautifully; er ift gefährlich frant, he is dangerously ill; wir fchreiten fehr langfam vorwärts, we advance very slowly. Adverbs express relations of place, time, manner, intensity, and mood. They are indeclinable.

§ 240. With regard to their form, the adverbs may be divided into three classes; namely—

- 1. Primitive adverbs, as—nun, noth, je, jest, both, ja; also most prepositions, as in, an, aus, auf, vor, &c., which, when compounded with verbs, assume the force of adverbs.
 - 2. Adverbs derived from other words, more especially-
- a. Such as are derived from demonstrative and interrogative pronouns, as—ba, bann, hier, we, wann, wie, &c. (See § 211.)
- b. Adverbs formed from adjectives. Almost all adjectives are used also as adverbs, without undergoing any change. Some adjectives, however, and also a few substantives, are changed into adverbs by means of the suffix lith or lings, especially the following:—

bitterlich, bitterly.

cwiglich, eternally.

freilich, indeed, it is true.

ganzlich, entirely.

gewißlich, certainly.

höchlich, highly.

fürzlich, recently.

From substantives-eiblich, upon oath. jährlich, yearly. fünftlich, artificially. mündlich, orally. Ieriglith, merely.

neulith, lately.
fdwerlith, hardly.
fitherlith, surely.
treulith, faithfully.
wahrlith, verily.
weißlith, wisely, &c.

fchriftlich, by writing.
ftunblich, hourly.
täglich, daily.
vorzüglich, preferably, &c.

With the suffix lings-blindlings, blindly. jählings, precipitously.

föpflings, headlong. rüdlings, backward, &c.

It must here be observed, however, that in the older language the suffix lich (lih) was used only to form adjectives. It was not till a later period that the custom was introduced of forming adverbs by adding lich to the adjective; most adverbs thus formed have since either assumed the force of adjectives, especially those derived from substantives, or have thrown off their characteristic termination; whence, at the present time, only very few have preserved their purely adverbial nature. The greater number of these are mentioned above.

Adverbs formed from participles by means of the suffix lift occur very rarely; e.g.—

flehentlich, suppliantly. gefliffentlich, deliberately. gelegentlich, by and by. hoffentlich, it is to be hoped.
wiffentlich, wilfully.

- c. Adverbs derived from substantives, adjectives, and participles, by means of the termination &, or end; as—(bed) Morgene, in the morning; (bed) Abende, in the evening; fluge, quickly; theile, partly; ringe, in a circle; anfange, in the beginning; linfe, on the left; rechts, on the right; bereite, already; flete, continually; befondere, separately, particularly; andere, otherwise; eilende, in haste; zusechende, visibly; übrigene, for the rest; erstene, in the first place; zwettene, in the second place, &c.; and the superlatives hochstene, schooling, neistene, &c., on which see § 241, c, note.
- 3. Adverbs formed by composition; as—hervor, forth; hienieben, here below; vorbei, past; bergauf, up-hill; bergab, down-hill; beizeiten, betimes, early; fürwahr, in truth; überall, everywhere; überhaupt, generally; zuweilen, sometimes; zollweile, by inches, &c. In adverbs compounded of substantives and adjectives, or adjective pronouns, the genitive form is of very frequent occurrence; as in—glüdliderweise, luckily; natürliderweise, naturally; feineweise, by no means; sebenfalls, at all events; großentheils, for a great part; meistentheils, for the most part; mittlerweise, in the meantime; einigermaßen, in some measure; einerseits, on the one hand; andrerseits, on the other hand; allerbings, certainly; untermeas, on the way; and others.

EXERCISE XLIII.

Are you still here? It is already evening. It will soon strike seven. We visit each other very seldom. Have you often been in Scotland ?1 It rained yesterday and the day before vesterday.2 Shall3 we take a drive4 to-day? Will you take a ride to-morrow? The day after to-morrow is Julia's 7 birthday. 8 You walk 9 fast. 10 She writes distinctly, 11 They have fought bravely. 12 He is severely 13 wounded. 14 She wept bitterly. Have you recently been in Dublin? I have lately been in Brussels.15 He came indeed, but too late. The Lord has ordained 16 all things 17 wisely. I see him daily. We shall inform ¹⁸ you by writing. He rushes ¹⁹ blindly into ²⁰ every danger. We study in the morning, in the evening we amuse 21 ourselves (say, amuse we ourselves). On the left is the dining-room, 22 on the right, a study. 23 The drawing-room 24 is up-stairs. 25 We went up-hill and down-hill. Come betimes. He has been everywhere. I was luckily from home.²⁶ At all events you must (say, must you) visit us once more.27 He has by no means acted 28 as 29 he ought to have done.

7 Julia, Sulie.

8 Birthday, Geburtstag.

9 To walk, gehen.

10 Fast, schuell.

11 Distinctly, bentlich.

12 Bravely, tapfer.

13 Severely, schuen.

14 All things, Alles.

15 To inform, benachtstigen.

16 To ordain, orbnen.

17 All things, Alles.

18 To inform, benachtstigen.

19 To rush, sich stürgen.

20 Into, in, with the accusative.

21 To amuse one's solf, sich befultigen.

22 Dining-room, ©pecifesimmer.

23 Study, ©tubirstube.

24 Drawing-room, Geschen.

25 To once more, nech einmal.

26 To act, hanbeln.

29 As he ought to have done, wie er hatte hanbeln sollen.

§ 241. Some adverbs are capable of comparison—that is, may have a comparative and superlative—namely, all adverbs which denote manner; e.g.—fcnell, quickly; leicht, lightly; fchon, beautifully; also a few which express a relative determination of place or time, as—nah, near; fern or welt, far;

früh, early; îpăt, late; oft, often; häufig, frequently; felten, rarely.

- 1. The comparative of such adverbs is formed in the same manner as the comparative of adjectives, namely, by affixing er; as—fchneller, more quickly; fchöner, more beautifully; näher, nearer; länger, longer; öfter, oftener. The modification of the vowels a, o, u, in the formation both of the comparative and superlative, is subject to the same restrictions as in the comparison of adjectives. (See § 181.)
- 2. The relative superlative (or superlative of comparison) is formed by prefixing am, 'at the...,' and adding sten to the simple adverb; as—am schnellsten, (at the) quickest; am schonsten, (at the) finest; am schnellsten, (at the) longest. Examples:—Wer fann am schnellsten lausen? who can run quickest? Er schreibt am schnellsten von allen, he writes best of all. Die Urner sind es, die am langsten säumen, Sch., it is the men of Uri who tarry longest.

Note.

In some particular cases, the relative superlative is formed by prefixing zero to the simple form of the superlative in it, as in zero, (at the) first; zero, (at the) last; zero, next, in the next place; zero, first of all; zero, uppermost; zeenterft, lowest.

- 3. The absolute superlative (or superlative of eminence) can be expressed in various ways:—
- a. The adverb can be joined to another adverb denoting a high degree, such as sehr, recht, höchst, äußerst, außervorbentlich, ungemein. For example:—Sie tanzt sehr schön, she dances very beautifully. Die Ansührer kannten die Natur des Bolkes recht wohl, Leo, the leaders knew the character of the people right well. Seine Gesundheit stellte sich wieder her, aber äußerst langsam, his health improved again, dut exceedingly slowly.
- b. The simple form of the superlative in ft without inflection is exclusively employed in the sense of the absolute superlative, but its use is limited to those adverbs which end in ig, lich, sam, bar, besides a few monosyllables, as—längst, long ago; höchst, in a very high degree; jüngst, recently. For example:—Sie wurde innigst gesieht, she was most intensely loved. Er läßt freundlichst grüßen, he desires to be most kindly remembered. Die Theilung war längst geschen, Sch., the division had long ago taken place.

c. The neuter of the attributive form of the superlative with the preposition auf preceding it, is employed for the same end; as-auf bas araufamite, or contracted auf's arau= famfte, most cruelly, in a most cruel manner. Examples:-Ich murbe auf bas freundlichfte begrüßt, Jacobs, I was most kindly received. Die Bauern waren auf bas elenbefte bewaffnet, Ranke, the peasants were most miserably armed. Laf meine Leute bir auf's beste empfohlen sein, G., let my attendants be commended to thy best care. Er besprat seine Geschäfte auf's gemissenhafteste, he attends to his business most conscientiously.

A few adverbs form a superlative by the termination stens, that is, ens being affixed to the simple superlative in ft. But superlatives of this kind are used only in peculiar significations, as will be seen from the following list :-

höchstens, at the most. meistens, for the most part. menigstens, at least. eneftens, at the soonest. frühestens, not before. fpateftens, at the latest.

langitens, at the longest. nachstens, shortly, very soon. erstens, in the first place. lettens, in the last place. beffens, in the best manner. fconficus, in the finest manner.

The last two are only used in some complimentary phrases; as -- ich empfehle mich beftens; er bantt fconftens.

§ 242. The following adverbs make their comparative and superlative from other stems:-

COMPARATIVE.

SUPERLATIVE.

wohl or gut, well; beffer, better; bald, soon: gern, gladly;

eher, sooner; lingly;

am besten, best. am ebesten, soonest. willingly, lieber, more wil- am liebsten, most willingly.

EXERCISE XLIV.

EXERCISE XLV.

I have at present no money to spare.1 What is now (that is, under these circumstances) to be done?2 Well, I agree to it.3 We have taken4 the very same house which you occupied⁵ last summer.⁶ Mr N. has (say, is) just arrived. I am just now writing to 7 my cousin. He has just as much right⁸ as thou. That is just the thing I wished to know.9 Do you like pudding?¹⁰ I like fish¹¹ very much. Which wine do you like best? I like Spanish wines better than French. She is fond of dancing. I should like to know if we may expect you.12 I cannot give you a definite 13 answer till the day after to-morrow. We have only gone over 14 fifty miles vet. The girl is only sixteen years old. Have you ever been on the continent? 15 The letters have [already] been delivered 16 an hour ago. 17 I doubt not but that they will come to an agreement. 18 I have not seen the new comedy yet. Read the whole passage 19 once more. May I offer 20 [to] you another piece of cake.21 I thank 2200 you for another cup of tea. I have read the book indeed. but I have not understood it. PREPOSITIONS.

§ 244. Prepositions indicate the relation which a person or thing bears to an action, or to another person or thing. Such a relation, however, is often expressed by the mere cases of the substantive or substantive pronoun. Prepositions are, as the term implies, generally put before the noun or pronoun, with the exception of a few which are sometimes, and a few others which are always placed after it. Whilst prepositions are themselves indeclinable, they exercise an influence upon the noun with which they are connected, by causing it to be put in a particular case; in other words, prepositions govern certain cases.

V-4-

Prepositions are also joined to verbs in the capacity of prefixes, mostly of a separable nature. They are in such a connection to be considered as adverbs, pointing out the direction of a motion in a general way; as—aufflehen, to stand up; unifehen, to turn about; nachfolgen, to follow after.

§ 245. As to their origin, the prepositions are either genuine or spurious. The former class comprises all original prepositions, the latter all those which are derived from other kinds of words—such as substantives, adverbs, adjectives, participles—and compound expressions which have assumed the power of prepositions. Among the genuine prepositions, some govern the dative, others the accusative, others sometimes the dative and sometimes the accusative. Most spurious prepositions, on the other hand, govern the genitive, a few the dative, still fewer the accusative, and only two sometimes the dative and sometimes the accusative. The prepositions, especially those of the first-named kind, principally denote relations of place, but, besides these, they also express relations of time, manner, cause, object, and attribute.

I. GENUINE PREPOSITIONS.

§ 246. The following seven govern the dative: aus, out of, from (motion). außer, out of, without (rest); except, besides. bei, at, by, near, with (nearness). mit, with (company, and instrumentality). nach, to (motion to a place); after; according to. bon, of, from. gu, to (motion to a person); at, in; for (purpose).

Auger occurs with the genitive in the phrase auger Landes, out of the country, abroad.-The preposition ob, over, is obsolete, its place being supplied by uber. Ob in its primary signification governs the dative, in the signification 'on account of,' the genitive also.

gegen, towards, against (denoting an amicable as well as hostile relation); compared with.

wiber, against (denoting a hostile relation only). um, round, about; for (in exchange for).

Note.

Gen is used for gegen in poetry, and commonly in the phrase gen Simmel, towards heaven. The orthographical difference between the preposition witer, against, and the adverb wieter, again, was introduced only in modern times; originally both are the same word.

II. SPURIOUS PREPOSITIONS.

§ 249. The following govern the genitive:—

ftatt, or anstatt, instead of.
außerhalb, without, on the outside of.
innerhalb, within.
oberhalb, above.
unterhalb, below.
bießfeit or bießfeitß, on this side of.
jenfeit or jenfeitß, on the other side of.
halben or halber, on account of (follows the case).
wegen, on account of (preceding or following the case).
um... willen, for the sake of (the case being inserted between um and willen).

fraft, by virtue of.
permöge, by virtue of.
laut, conformably to.
permittelft, by means of.
permettelft, by means of.

ungeachtet, notwithstanding (preceding or following the case).

trop, in spite of.

unweit or unfern, not far from.

mährend, during.

längs, along.

guiolge, according to (either precedes or follows the noun; in the latter case it governs the dative).

- 1. Even and lange are used also with the dative. Salben, megen, and um... willen, are contracted with the genitive of personal pronouns; as—meinethalben, on my account; beinetweigen, on thy account; um feinetweillen, for his sake; unferthalben, on our account, &c. Salber is commonly used instead of halben after names of materials and abstract substantives without the article; as—Gelees halber, for the sake of money; Ehren halber, for the sake of honour; Alters halber, on account of old age.
- 2. The following adverbs also occur with the genitive, and therefore partake of the nature of prepositions, although they are not generally recognised as such; namely—hinfichts, hinficitic, rünflichtlich, with regard to; angefichts, in face of, in the presence of; behufs, in behalf of; immitten, in the midst of; unbeficatet, without prejudice.

EXERCISE XLIX.

I shall come instead of my brother. The mill lies outside the village. The water rose² within an hour upwards of ³ two feet.4 One part of the town lies on this side, the other on the other side of the river. He travels on account of his health.⁶ On account of his advanced age he has (say, has he) resigned⁸ his office.⁹ One esteems¹⁰ him on account of his merits, 11 He does everything for the sake of [the] gain. 12 Heavy 13 loads 14 can be moved forward 15 by means of locomotives,16 We reached 17 the shore by means of a Boat. Notwithstanding the strictest 18 investigation 19 the truth has (say, has the truth) not yet been brought out.20 In spite of the difficulties 21 with which we are threatened, 22 we shall (say, shall we) make the attempt.23 The gentleman after whom you inquire 24 resides during the summer months 25 at his country-house 26 not far from the town. A row 27 of trees shades28 the way along the brook,29

1 Mill, Mühle. 2 To rise. sieigen. 3 Upwards of, über. 4 Use the singular. 5 Part, Theil. 6 Health, Gesuncheit. 7 Advanced, vergerückt. 8 To resign, nichertsgen. 9 Office, Amt. 10 To esteem, föhägen. 11 Merit, Bervieußt, ni. 12 Gain, Gewinn. 13 Heavy, schwer. 14 Load, Rast. 15 To move forward, sertisewigen. 16 Locomotive, Seconnetive. 17 To reach, erreichen. 18 Strict, streng. 19 Investigation, Untersuchung. 20 To bring out, heraustringen. 21 Difficulty, Schwerigsteit. 22 To threaten, bervehen. 23 Attempt, Bersuch, Bersuch, Sanchauß. 27 A row of trees, eine Reihe Baume. 28 To shade, beschatten. 29 Brook, Bach.

§ 250. The following spurious prepositions govern the dative:—

binnen, within (in regard to time only).
gegenüber, opposite (is put after the case).
gemäß, according to, agreeably to (either precedes or follows the case).
nächst, next to.
nebst, along with.
samunt, together with.
seit, since.
summer, contrary to (is put after the case).

Note.

Regarding the difference between nebst and sammt, it must be observed that nebst, being derived from nebsn, by the side of, beside, indicates an accidental joining of things in the mind, and may therefore be compared with the conjunction unb; whilst sammt, being of the same origin as sammeln, to collect, denotes the joining of objects which, even in themselves. are conceived as allied or belonging to one another.

§ 251. The following three govern the accusative:—

bis, till, as far as (is used both with regard to place and time).

entlang, along (generally follows the noun). ohne, without (is the opposite of mit).

Note

Nis is frequently joined to another preposition; as—bis zu Thränen gerüft, moved even to tears; bis auf tiefen Tag, up to this day; bis in ben Tob, or bis zum Tote, even to death; bis zum Ente tes Kapitels, down to the end of the chapter; bis an bie Statifbre, as far as the gates of the town; Alle bis auf einen, all except one.—Entlang, when preceding the noun, governs the genitive.—Souter, a synonym of office, has now become obsolete. Phrases like fonter Zweifel, without doubt; fonter Ashl, without number; fonter Gleichen, without equal; fonter Klang, without sound; funter Wanten, without wavering, occur only in poetry.

§ 252. Two derivative prepositions govern sometimes the dative and sometimes the accusative, according as they denote rest or motion; namely—neben, beside.

gwifthen, between, betwixt (is generally used in regard to two objects only).

For example:—Der König saß neben der Königin, the king sat beside the queen. Er setzte sich neben die Königin, he took his seat beside the queen. Zwischen dir und mir ist kein Geheimniß, between thee and me there is no secret. Er stellte sich zwischen und beibe, he placed himself between us two.

Note

Bwischen is sometimes, though improperly, used in regard to more than two objects; e.g.—Kein Frember soll mir zwischen meinen Weizen Untraut fireun, Rückert, I will permit no stranger to sow tares among my wheat. Unser Nachtigallen verfünden zwischen grünen Sweigen das Lob der verjüngten Kr., our nightingales proclaim amidst green boughs the praises of renewed nature.

EXERCISE L.

- § 253. Some prepositions can be joined to adverbs of place and time, as in English; e.g.—Er warf es von oben herunter, he threw it down from above. In say him from afar. Es ift weit von hier, it is far from here. Wir find auf heute versagt, we are engaged for to-day. Für jeht mag dies genug sein, let this be enough for the present. In have expected him since yesterday.
- § 254. Sometimes a preposition is accompanied by an adverb, or another preposition used in the sense of an adverb, to express the direction or course of a motion, or the commencement or extent of a space of time. For example:—Ein Schiff! Es formut von Fluelen her, Sch., a ship! it comes from Fluelen. Bon Nom aus, proceeding from Rome. Bir gehen nach bem Walte zu, we go towards, or in the direction of the wood. Er fam auf mich zu, he came up to me. Nach bem Weere hin, towards the sea. Er sprang zum Fenster hinaus, he jumped out of the window. Er fommt zur Thur herein, he comes in by the door. Der Weg führt am Abgrund hin, the road leads along the brink of a precipice. Schiller war vom frühesten Alter an ein zartes Kind, Schiller was up from his earliest years a delicate child. Von Kindheit an, up from childhood. Von Jugend auf, up from the age of youth. Von nun an, henceforward.

CONJUNCTIONS.

- § 255. Conjunctions are words which connect clauses or sentences, and shew the relation in which they stand to one another. They are indeclinable. As to form, conjunctions are either primitive words, as—und, benn, als, both, wenn, weil, daß, &c.; or derivatives, as—namlich, übrigens, ferner, mährend, bevor, &c.; or compounds, as—jedoch, bennoch, nachem, indem, feithem, obgleich, damit, daßer, deshalb, somit, bestenligenchtet, &c.
- § 256. When two or more clauses are put in connection with one another, one is, in regard both to matter and form, either dependent on or independent of the other. In the former case, the one clause is subordinate to the other; in the latter case, they are co-ordinate. Hence those conjunctions which introduce a dependent clause are termed subordinative conjunctions, whilst those which place clauses side by side as independent of one another, are termed co-ordinative conjunctions.

I. SUBORDINATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

- § 257. A dependent clause stands to its principal clause in the relation either of a substantive, or of an adjective, or of an adverb. A dependent clause, therefore, is either a dependent substantive clause, or a dependent adjective clause, or a dependent adverbial clause.
- 1. A dependent substantive clause is introduced by the conjunction baß, that, or ob, if, whether.

- 2. A dependent adjective clause is not introduced by any conjunction, but by a relative pronoun.
- 3. A dependent adverbial clause is introduced by various conjunctions, according as it expresses a relation of place, time, manner, cause, purpose, condition, or concession.
- a. The relation of place is expressed by the pronominal adverbs no, where; noter, whence; notin, whither.
- b. Time is expressed by the conjunctions als, ba, when, as; wenn, when, whenever; wahrend, indeff, indeffen, indem, whilst; so lange, as long as; nadden, after; ehe, before; seit, seithem, since; bis, till; so halb (als), so wie, as soon as.

Note

Bann is commonly used only in the sense of a pronominal adverb, meaning 'at, what time,' but occurs also as a conjunction in the place of mean. Beil, in the signification of 'while,' is gradually going out of use.

- c. Manner is expressed by the conjunctions wie, as (comparing); als ob, als wenn, as if; (so) bas, (so) that.
- d. Cause is expressed by the conjunctions well, because; ba, as, since; nun, now.
- e. Purpose is expressed by the conjunctions baß, that; bamit, in order that.
- f. Condition is expressed by the conjunctions wenn, if; salls, wo, mosern, in case; wenn anters, provided; wenn nicht, wo nicht, if not. The use of so for 'if' is obsolete.
- g. Concession is expressed by the conjunctions obgleich, observed, observed, wenn gleich, wenn shou, wenn auch, wiewohl, although, even though; wie ... auch, so ... auch, however ...; ungeachtet, notwithstanding.

II. CO-ORDINATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

- \S 258. The co-ordinative conjunctions may be divided into four classes :—
- a. Copulative Conjunctions serve to put clauses in the relation of equality to one another, by placing one thought side by side with another. Of this description are—und, and; auch, also; subem, außerbem, besides; überbieß, moreover; souch... als as well as, both... and; weber... noch,

- neither ... nor; nicht nur, or nicht allein, or nicht bloß ... fonsbern auch, not only ... but also; theils ... theils, partly ... partly; balb ... balb, now ... then, sometimes ... sometimes. To these may be added the adverbs erstens or erstlich, firstly; zweitens, secondly, &c.; bann, then; ferner, farther; enblich, finally, and others; and also the explanatory particles namlich, namely; wie, als, as.
- b. Adversative Conjunctions denote an opposition, in which two thoughts stand to each other in such a manner that the one thought either entirely denies, or merely limits the other. Negation is expressed by night...fondern, not... but; night... vielmehr, not... but rather; entweder... oder, either... or; fonft, else, otherwise (a contraction for the old so ne ist, if it is not). Limitation is expressed by aber, allein, but, however; both, fedoch, bennedh, yet, still; indeffen, however; gleichwohl, beffenungeachtet, notwithstanding; nightse beftomeniger, nevertheless; hingegen, bagegen, on the contrary
- c. Concessive Conjunctions introduce a fact which is limited in a correlative clause by the adversative conjunction body or aber. Of this kind are—ywar, it is true (in old High-German zi ware, in truth); freilid, wohl, indeed.
- d. Causative Conjunctions indicate a cause or reason. Denn, for, introduces the reason of a thought contained in a preceding sentence. The explanatory particle namilial often has the same force as benn. The following conjunctions, on the other hand, are employed to draw an inference from a preceding statement:—baher, therefore; bedwegen, bedhalb, barum, on that account, for that reason; also, folglich, consequently; mithin, bennach, somit, accordingly.
- § 259. Most co-ordinative conjunctions have the nature of adverbs, and therefore usually affect the structure of a sentence in the same manner as adverbs. But the 'pure' conjunctions und, after, allein, fondern, oder, benn, exercise no influence whatever upon the arrangement of a sentence.

EXERCISE LI.

Do1 what is right, and dread2 no one. He carries on3 a lucrative business, moreover he has (say, has he) a rich wife.6 He is both active 7 and clever. I have not only seen him, but also spoken with him. Some people can neither read nor write. Neither gold nor jewels⁸ can purchase⁹ immortality.¹⁰ The journey is partly expensive, ¹¹ partly attended ¹² with dangers. Our friend is a German, namely, a Hanoverian. 13 He speaks English, but not fluently. 14 My brother looks 15 younger than I, and yet I am (say, am I) three years younger than he. The horse is already old, and yet it has (say, has it) been sold at a good price. 16 He is very rich; nevertheless he spends 17 (say, spends he) very little. These soldiers 18 have not served 19 in the infantry, 20 but in the cavalry.21 I never drink (say, drink never) wine, but water. The medicine 22 will be of no use 23 to me; I shall take²⁴ it however. He is either an impostor²⁵ or himself imposed upon.26 She must be ill, otherwise she would (say, would she) not have (say, be) stayed away.27 It is true she is (say, she is, it is true) young, but she has had much experience.²⁸ He is indeed a poor man, but he is honest.²⁹ It is cold, for the windows are frozen. INTERJECTIONS.

§ 260. Interjections are words or sounds expressing momentary feelings of joy, pain, wonder, abhorrence, &c. They are called interjections, because they are thrown in between the parts of a sentence, without being essential to it, and without exercising the least influence upon its construction. Joy, for instance, is expressed by ah! ha! heifa! juchhe! hurra!—pain or sorrow by ad! o!—wonder by ei! ah! ha! oh!—abhorrence by pfui! fi!—doubt by hm! hem! &c. The following are used for calling out to a person:—he! head! holla! pft!—for bidding silence: fd! ft! pft!—for agreeing to a proposal: topp! To these may be added the imitations of various sounds; as—bauz! fnads! puff! hufth! plumps! &c.

§ 261. From the genuine interjections must be distinguished such expressions as—web! o web! wo is me!—Icider! alas!—beil! hail!—gottlob! God be praised!—woblan! well!—woblauf! cheer up!—getroft! be of good cheer! &c. These partake of the nature of interjections, being thrown in between the parts of a sentence, but they originally belong to other parts of speech, or, in the case of some, must be regarded as elliptical sentences.

FORMATION OF WORDS.

XXIV.

DERIVATION.

I. ROOTS.

§ 262. The first germs from which words are sprung are called roots. All roots are monosyllabic. A root by itself has no distinct signification, but contains an idea which, in being developed, becomes the main idea of a family of kindred words. The first stage in this process of development is the idea of action or condition; hence a root appears first in the form of a verb. All verbs, therefore, which come from a root by direct derivation, are called radical verbs. The number of such verbs is very great; for not only do all verbs of the strong (or ancient) conjugation belong to this class, but a great many verbs which have now assumed the weak (or modern) conjugation, are likewise radical verbs.

Note.

Many radical verbs are no longer used in new High-German, but are to be found in the older language, or in particular dialects still spoken in nany provinces of Germany, or in other languages belonging to the Germanic family. It lies in the nature of the origin of radical verbs that their signification is in most instances less definite than that of derivative verbs, a variety of meanings being frequently attached to the same word. The verb [decen, for example, which now means 'to shear,' had originally a more general signification, namely, 'to cut, divide, separate;' hence Bfugfour, ploughshare; beforein, to distribute presents; and the English words 'short' and 'share.'

§ 263. A root usually passes through two other stages of development. The general idea conveyed by a root, after having assumed a certain, though still general, meaning in the radical verb, becomes more individualised in the second stage—that of primary derivatives or stems (Stämme); and still more so in the third stage—that of secondary derivatives or branches (Sprofformen).

The following general laws are commonly adhered to in the process of derivation:-1. A primary derivative is formed out of the root of a radical verb; a secondary derivative is usually formed from a primary derivative, sometimes from a root, and sometimes from another secondary derivative. The modes of this process will be more fully explained hereafter. 2. From one word is usually derived a word of a different kind-that is, from a verb there is formed a substantive or an adjective, from a substantive a verb or an adjective, from an adjective a verb or a substantive; and from the name of a thing the name of a person, or, vice versa, from the name of a person the name of a thing. For example, the substantives Flug and Flucht, flight, as well as the adjective fluct, fledged, spring from the radical verb fliegen, to fly; the derivative verb fluction, to take to flight, and the adjective fluction, fugitive, come from the substantive Flucht, flight. The verb stärfen, to strengthen, and the substantive Stärfe, strength, come from the adjective ftart, strong. The name of a person, as Bürger, citizen, is derived from the name of a thing, namely, Burg, castle; and, vice versa, Bürgerschaft, community, from Bürger, citizen.

II. PRIMARY DERIVATIVES.

§ 264. A primary derivative is formed out of the root of a radical verb, in the first place, simply by a change of the radical vowel. In not a few instances, however, the vowel remains unchanged, especially if it be a or au. Examples:—
1. Substantives—Tranf and Trunf, a drink, from trinfen, to drink; Banb, ribbon, and Bunb, band, from binben, to bind; Schlüß, close, and Schlöß, lock, from falleßen, to close; Ritt, a ride, from reiten, to ride; Schlag, stroke, from schlagen, to strike; Schläf, sleep, from schlagen, to sleep; Laut, sound, from lauten, to sound. 2. Adjectives—froh, glad, from (sch) freuen, to rejoice; gram, averse, from grimmen, to be in wrath; treu, faithful, true, from trauen, to trust; 1946, awake, from machen, to be awake; schon, beautiful, from scheinen, to shine; blank, polished, bright, from blinken, to glitter.

Many substantives and adjectives of this description take one of what are commonly termed the insignificant terminations, namely, et, el, en. Examples:—I. Substantives—Fehler, fault, from fehlen, to fail; Flügel, wing, from fliegen, to fly; Deffel, cover, from beefen, to cover; Biffen, bit, from beißen, to bite; Bogen, bow, from biegen, to bend; Graben, ditch, from graben, to dig. 2. Adjectives—bitter, bitter, from beißen, to bite; macker, brave, from wachen, to be awake; ettel, vain, from the old High-German itan, to shine.

Note

The terminations termed insignificant, cr, et, en (and in one or two words cm) differ in their nature from derivative terminations—that is, suffixes added to stems for the purpose of producing secondary derivatives. For instance, the primary derivative &the, fault, has the same meaning as the monosyllable &the, which is now obsolete; but the signification of the secondary derivative &the, shepherd, differs from that of the stem &the secondary derivative &the first sheep. The minor value of these terminations becomes very obvious from the circumstance that many words which were formerly monosyllables have now assumed one of the insignificant syllables; as—$\text{2mmed}$, wether; &thigh; \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{3high}$, \text{3ammed}$, wether; &thigh; \text{2high}$, \text{2high}$, \text{3high}$, \text{3am}$, \text{3am}$, \text{3am}$, \text{3am}$, \text{3m}$, \text{3m}$, \text{3m}$, \text{3m}$.

The termination cn, moreover, is thrown off when a derivative suffix is added, as in \text{2high}$, a little bit; \text{3at}$, a little garden; Inchig, bony. (See § 269.)

§ 265. Many primary derivatives are formed from radical verbs, not by a change of the vowel only, but at the same time by the addition either of the vowel a (which is a substitute for the old High-German α or i), or of one of the following lingual sounds:—t, te, b, be, or, after a liquid, ft. If the last consonant of the root is g or b, the adding of the letter t is always attended by the change of the soft mute into the corresponding aspirate, namely, the in the former case, and f in the latter. It deserves notice, that most substantives of this class are of the feminine gender. Examples:— 1. Substantives-Grube, pit, from graben, to dig; Sprache, language, from sprechen, to speak; Saat, seed, from saen, to sow: That, deed, from thun, to do: Bucht, bay, from biegen, to bend; Schlacht, battle, from schlagen, to beat; Schrift, writing, from schreiben, to write; Gruft, grave, from graben, to dig; Bluthe (or Blute), blossom, from bluben, to bloom;

Jagb, chase, from sagen, to hunt; Kunbe, information, from fennen, to know; Bürbe, burden, from the old High-German beran, to bear; Brunst, conflagration, from brennen, to burn; Kunst, art, from können, to be able, &c. (See also § 132, 1, note 2.) 2. Adjectives—trage, lazy; weise, wise; schlecht, bad; recht, right; bicht, dense.

§ 266. The augment ge is prefixed to many primary derivatives, without affecting their signification. Among the verbs from which they are derived, only few have preserved the augment. Examples:—1. Substantives — Gebot, command; Gerinn, gain; Gebrauch, usage; Genuß, enjoyment; Geruch, smell; Gefang, song; Glück (contracted for Gelück), luck; Gefahr, danger; Geburt, birth; Gebörbe, mien; Gefchichte, history.

2. Adjectives—gefund, sound; geriß, certain; getreu, faithful; gerecht, just; genehu, agreeable.

III. SECONDARY DERIVATIVES.

§ 267. The formation of secondary derivatives consists in the adding of suffixes to the word from which they are derived. Most secondary derivatives are formed from primary derivatives; as—Schloffer, locksmith, from Schloff, lock; machtig, mighty, from Macht, might. Some are formed from radical verbs; as—Schneiber, tailor, from schneiben, to cut; expar, eatable, from effen, to eat; some from other secondary derivatives; as—Dantbarkeit, gratitude, from bantbar, grateful; ritterlich, knightly, from Ritter, knight.

§ 268. The vowels a, v, u, and the diphthong au of the stem usually become modified, if the derivative suffix have the vowel i or e, as in the following:—ig, icht, ifch, ing, in, lein, chen, lich, niß, en, ern, el, sel, e. For example:—Grafin, countess, from Graf, count; närrisch, foolish, from Narr, fool; töden, to kill, from todt, dead; Gute, goodness, from gut, good; Häuptling, chieftain, from Haupt, head. Many words which formerly had the suffix e, have retained the modified vowel, although they have thrown off the suffix; as—Gespräch, talk; Gespött, mockery; Gemüth, mind.

§ 269. A derivative suffix is generally joined immediately to the last consonant of the stem. If the stem ends in ¢ or en, these terminations are thrown out; as in Weis-heit, wisdom, from weise, wise; gut-ig, kind, from Gute, kindness; Tröpsen, small drop, from Tropsen, drop; fnot-ig, knotty, from Knoten, knot. But, on the other hand, a suffix is often joined to a stem by means of some euphonic letter or syllable, which comes in between the two, without in any way affecting the meaning of the word; as in leserslich, legible; furchterlich, fearful; fenn-t-lich, recognisable; wesential; Glödsen-er, bell-ringer; Güß-ig-keit, sweetness; rein-ig-en, to clean: bestied-een, to satisfy.

a. DERIVATIVE VERBS.

§ 270. Derivative verbs are generally formed from substantives and adjectives by merely adding the termination of the infinitive en, and in many instances also modifying the vowel of the stem. For example:—tranten, to give to drink, from Trant, drink; fallen, to fell, from Fall, fall; tröften, to console, from Troft, consolation; fatteln, to saddle, from Sattel, saddle; ftarten, to strengthen, from ftart, strong; [dyradhen, to weaken, from fdynadh, weak; töbten, to kill, from tobt, dead; leeren, to empty, from leer, empty; mirrigen, to hold worthy, from murbig, worthy; trodnen, to dry, from troften, dry. Most verbs of this description have a transitive meaning.

Some transitive verbs, however, are derived directly from intransitive radical verbs by a mere change of the radical vowel; as—fegen, to set, from figen, to sit; legen, to lay, from liegen, to lie; fenten, to cause to sink, from finten, to sink; frengen, to burst, from fpringen, to spring; fdwenmen, to water, make swim (cattle), from finment, to swim; verfewenben, to squander, from verfewenben, to vanish; hängen, to hang or suspend, from hangen, to hang or be suspended; fäugen, to suckle, from faugen, to suck; and a few others.

§ 271. Some derivative verbs are formed by means of the suffixes ein and ern, which give the sense of diminution, repetition, or contempt; e.g.—lächein, to smile; frantein, to be sickly; fröftein, to feel chilly; minfein, to moan; lispein, to lisp, whisper; fäufein, to rustle; frömmein, to affect picty; migein, to affect wit; näfein, to snuffle; tängein, to trip; fräusein, to curl; tänbein, to trifle; flüstern, to whisper; gittern, to tremble; wimmern, to whine; platichern, to splash; ichläfern, to feel drowsy.

A few verbs having the suffix zen or sen, denote repetition of a sound; as—ächzen, to groan; schluchzen, to sob; frächzen, to croak; summsen, to buzz.

Verbs ending in iren are, for the most part, of foreign origin; a few only are derived from German words.

b. DERIVATIVE SUBSTANTIVES.

§ 272. The following suffixes are employed to form concrete substantives:—

T. The suffix er, English er, or, is used to form appellations of male persons, chiefly from substantive stems, but also from radical verbs. Such substantives generally denote a person performing the action implied in the stem or the verb. For example:—Sänger, singer; Räufer, buyer; Räuber, robber; Schneiber, tailor; Reiter, rider; Lefer, reader.

Appellations of male persons are also derived from names of countries and places by means of the suffix er; as—Englander, Englishman; Irishman; Schweizer, Swiss; Römer, Roman; Londoner, Hamburger, Wiener, &c., inhabitant of London, Hamburgh, Vienna, &c. In Afrikaner, Amerikaner, Spartaner, Merikaner, Meapolitaner, and in Italianer, the foreign termination has been adapted to the analogy of German words.

Note.

It must be observed, however, that not all names of nations are formed in this manner, for in some the name of the country is derived from the name of the nation; as, her Deutsche, the German; her Schotte, the Scotsman; her Dane; her Russian; her Schwebe, the Swede; her Breuße, the Prussian; her Sacon, and others.

The suffix er occurs also in a few names of things; as—Bohrer, gimlet; Beiger, hand of a clock; Wecker, alarum, &c. It indicates the male of an animal in Kater, tom-cat; and Lauber, male pigeon.

2. The suffix in, English ess, ine, changes appellations of male persons and also of some male animals into appellations of females; e.g.— Gräfin, countess; Kaiferin, empress; Königin, queen; Heldin, heroine; Wirthin, hostess; Freundin, female friend; Lömin, lioness; Hündin, bitch.

Note.

The use of the feminine of Mann—namely, Mannin for Frau—is quite obsolete, except in a few compound substantives, as Landsmannin, country-woman. In three substantives the foreign suffix ess and the German suffix in are combined namely, Pringessian, princess; Actissian, abbess; Ranonissian, canoness.

- 3. By the termination ling, English ling, some appellations of persons are formed from substantives and adjectives, rarely from verbs; as—Flüchtling, fugitive; Günftling, favourite; Säuptling, chieftain; Süngling, youth; Frembling, stranger; Liebling, darling; Finbling, foundling; Lehrling, apprentice. A few substantives of this kind express contempt; as—Miethling, hireling; Beichling, weakling; Dichterling, poetaster.
- 4. By the terminations then and lein, English kin, ct, or let (as in 'lambkin, islet, streamlet') diminutives are formed from other substantives. Diminutives are employed also as terms of endearment. It depends in every instance on the laws of euphony and on usage whether the one or the other of these terminations should be employed. For example:—Blümchen, floweret; Båndhen, little ribbon; Söhnchen, little son; Mütterchen, dear mother; Båchlein, little brook; Büchelein, little book; Knählein, little boy; Böglein, little bird; Fräulein, young (unmarried) lady.
- 5. The following terminations occur only in a few substantives:—

ing in Pfenning or Pfennig, half a farthing; Schilling, shilling; Herring.

ig in König, king ; Effig, vinegar ; Rettig, radish.

rich in a few names of male persons and animals; as— Butherich, tyrant; Fähnrich, ensign; Gänserich, gander; Enterich, drake.

ith and ith in a few names of animals and in a few collectives; as—Aranich, crane; Sabicht, hawk; Rehrich(t), sweepings; Dicticht, thicket.

- § 273. The following suffixes are employed to form abstract substantives:—
- 1. Substantives in ung, English ing, ion, are chiefly formed from derivative and compound verbs of a transitive or reflective signification, and a few from simple radical verbs.

They express either simply an action, as-Starfung, strength-Befreiung, liberation: Erinnerung, recollection: Reigung, inclination; or, at the same time, the result of an action or an effected state or condition, as-Erfinbung, invention; Erfahrung, experience: Mischung, mixture—that is. that which has been invented, experienced, mixed; Berbindung, alliance; Trennung, separation; Ordnung, order—that is, the condition of being allied, separated, in order. To a few substantives und imparts a collective meaning; as-Walbung, forest : Holzung, woods : Stallung, stabling : Rleibung, clothing.

2. Substantives in nif, English ness, are derived from substantives and verbs, very rarely from adjectives. Some express abstract, others concrete notions. For example:-Bespraniff, apprehension; Verhältniff, relation, proportion; Finsterniß, darkness; Begräbniß, funeral; Erlaubniß, permission : Gefängniß, prison : Verzeichniß, catalogue : Bilbniß, portrait.

3. By the suffixes fel and fal, substantives are formed from other substantives, and also from verbs. Some have an abstract, others a concrete meaning. For instance: Rathfel, riddle; Ueberbleibfel, remainder; Labfal, refreshment;

Schickfal, fate.

4. Substantives in ei, English y, are formed from verbs, others from names of persons. The former denote an action, mostly in a bad sense, as-Seudielei, hypocrisy; Schmeichelei, flattery; Spielerei, trifling; Biererei, affectation; the latter denote the employment, condition, residence, or place of business, or a collective notion of persons; as-Fischeret, fishery; Sflaverei, slavery; Farberei, dyer's workshop; Dructerei, printing-office : Reiterei, cavalry.

5. By means of the terminations e and beit, abstract substantives denoting a quality are formed from primary adjectives, and by means of feit from derivative adjectives; as-Länge, length ; Breite, breadth ; Warme, warmth ; Ralte, cold. Freiheit, freedom; Schonheit, beauty; Seltenheit, rarity; Gesundheit, health. Beiligkeit, holiness : Dankbarkeit, gratitude : Ehrlichkeit, honesty ; Betriebsamkeit, industry. Some primary adjectives, however, take the termination feit, the syllable ig being inserted for the sake of euphony; as-Sußiakeit, sweetness : Frommiakeit, piety : Müdiakeit, weariness. (See § 269.) A few ending in er or el also take feit; as—Bitterfeit, bitterness; Eitelfeit, vanity.

In the older language, abstract substantives in heit were also formed from names of persons. The following only are preserved:—Kindheit, childhood; Gottheit, Godhead; Ehorheit and Narrheit, folly; and with a collective sense, Wenschheit, mankind; Christenheit, Christendom.

- 6. By schaft, English ship, and thum, English dom, abstract and collective substantives are formed from names of persons, a few from adjectives and verbs. For example:—Freundschaft, friendship; Feindschaft, enmity; Herrschaft, lordship, dominion; Knechtschaft, slavery; Eigenschaft, quality; Wiffenschaft, science; Ritterschaft, knighthood; Brüderschaft, brotherhood. Heidenschaft, heathenism; Königthum, royalty; Priesterschum, priesthood; Reichthum, wealth; Irrthum, error.
- 7. A very few substantives have the suffixes ut, at, and; e.g.—Urmut, poverty. Bierat, ornament; Seimat, home. Tugend, virtue; Jugend, youth.
- § 274. A great number of substantives are formed by prefixing to a stem the syllable ge, commonly termed the augment, and, in most instances, by modifying at the same They are derived from subtime the vowel of the stem. stantives as well as from verbs. The greater number of substantives of this kind have either a collective or frequentative signification. For example :- Bebuich, bushes ; Gerath, implements: Gefinde, domestics: Geflügel, birds, poultry; Befieder, plumage; Gebirge, range of mountains; Gewölf, collection of clouds; Gebrange, crowd; Geheul, howling; Despräch, conversation; Gelaufe, running to and fro; Gelaut, ringing of bells; Gefdmat, chattering. Some denote persons, implying at the same time the idea of companionship; as-Gefpiele, playmate; Gefährte, comrade; Gehülfe, assistant; Deschwister, brothers and sisters. Others have various other meanings.

c. DERIVATIVE ADJECTIVES.

§ 275. Adjectives are derived from substantives and verbs, a few from other adjectives. The following suffixes are employed for this purpose:—

1. ig, English y, added to the stem of substantives and a few verbs, simply denotes the quality or condition implied in the stem; as—würbig, worthy, from Bürbe, worth, dignity; mächtig, mighty; zornig, angry; fleißig, diligent; fäumig, tardy, from fäumen, to tarry. If the substantive from which an adjective is thus formed has a concrete signification, the vowel of the stem does not undergo modification; as in blumig, flowery; walbig, woody; fanbig, sandy; luftig, airy, &c.; excepting walferig, watery; and förnig, granulous.

By means of the termination ig, adjectives are also formed from adverbs of time and place; as—heutig from heute, to-day; gestrig from gestern, yesterday; jesig from jest, now; basing from bash, soon; hiesig from hier, here; bortig from bort, there; bisherig from bisher, hitherto; nadherig from nadher, afterwards; banualig from bannals, at that time; sonsiting from sonst, formerly, else, &c. But for morgen, to-morrow, the adjective is morgens. The possessive pronouns ber meinige, beinige, seinige, &c., are formed in the same way.

Note.

The word felig, which occurs as a derivative suffix in several adjectives, has arisen from the suffix fal, by which a few derivative substantives are formed (§ 273, 3), the syllable ig having been added to change them into adjectives; as—mūḥſelig, toilsome; trūbfelig, woful; from Đhhḥal, Xrūbfal. But afterwards it has been more generally employed, without any regard to its origin, to denote a fulness or abundance of what the stem implies; as in glūtfelig, exceedingly happy; feintfelig, bostile; leutfelig, affable; frietfelig, peaceful; armfelig, needy; hotbſelig, most kind; retfelig, loquacious, and others.

2. isch, English ish, added to names of persons, nations, places, and countries, produces adjectives which denote belonging, or relating, or being similar to, a person or place; as in himmlisch, heavenly; irbisch, earthly; englisch, English; spanisch, Spanisch; lutherich, Lutheran; berlinisch, of Berlin; biebisch, thievisch; biechterisch, poetical; finbisch, childisch; närrsisch, foolisch; weibisch, effeminate. In several adjectives derived from stems of an abstract meaning, it signifies an inclination to the action implied in the stem; as in murrisch, morose; neibisch, envious; zänsisch, quarrelsome; abergläubisch, superstitious. The suffix is also generally employed to form adjectives from foreign words, as the Englisch ical, for the Latin icus; e.g.—physisch; fritisch, critical;

poetifch, poetical; historical; politifch, political; livifch, lyrical.

Notes.

- 1. The adjectives hūbich (hūbich), pretty; melich (mulisch), Welsh; beutich (old High-German diutisch), German; and the adjective-substantive Menich (old High-German mennisco), man, are formed in the same way.
- 2. From names of places of a compound form, such as Cribetberg, Magbeburg, the substantive form in er is generally used for the sake of euphony instead of the adjective form in ifth, as in rat Heidelberg tun; rer Magbeburger Dom, the cathedral of Magdeburg But in simple names of places the form in ifth is commonly preferred, as in fulnithet Majjer, cau de Cologne; bat halltight Maijenhaus, the Orphan Hospital of Halle. (See § 176.)
- 3. lift, English ly, when added to substantives, denotes manner or resemblance; as in freundlich, friendly; brüberlich, brotherly; fürstlich, princely; manusch, manly; weiblich, womanly; finblidy, childlike; funfilidy, artificial; naturlidy, natural; gefährlich, dangerous. When added to adjectives, it gives a diminutive signification, like the English ish or ly; e. g.- altlich, elderly; rothlich, reddish; grunlich, greenish; fußlich, sweetish; fauerlich, sourish. When added to the root of a verb, it denotes a possibility, which is conceived either in an active or passive sense, according as the verb is intransitive or transitive. It shares this signification with the suffix bar. For example: - bienlich, serviceable; nutlich, useful: sterblich, mortal; vergänglich, perishable; begreiflich, conceivable; glaublich, credible; löblich, laudable; unfaalich. unspeakable: thunlidy, feasible.
- 4. bar, English able or ible, and fam, which may be compared to the English some, when added to abstract substantives and verbs, produce adjectives denoting a possibility or inclination; as—fiditian, visible; bentbar, imaginable; efbar, eatable, edible; lentfam, manageable; bantbar, grateful; fruchtbar, fertile; arbeitfam, industrious; furchtfam, timid; some are made from other adjectives, namely—einfam, lonely; gemeinfam, common, mutual; genugfam and fattfam, sufficient; but though used as adjectives, they have, strictly speaking, the force of adverbs.
- 5. haft is likewise used to form adjectives from abstract substantives and from verbs, and chiefly denotes a propensity to an action; as in zanfhaft, quarrelsome; fdmaghaft, talkative;

tugenbhaft, virtuous; lasterhaft, vicious; zaghaft, timid. Some are derived from names of persons, and express a resemblance; as—meisterhaft, masterly; riesenhaft, gigantic; schalkhaft, waggish. A few formed from adjectives, and also a few formed from substantives, signify the manner of an action; as—boshaft, malicious; frankhaft, morbid; wahrhaft, true; schmerzhaft, painful; herzhaft, courageous; frampshaft, spasmodic.

6. en, English en, is used to form adjectives from names of materials; as—golven, golden; filbern, of silver; feiben, silken; irven, earthen. If the stem ends in n, 8, 3, 1, or a vowel, ern is generally used instead; as—fteinern, of stone; gläsern, of glass; hölzern, of wood; stählern, of steel; bleiern, leaden

7. idit, English y, is added only to substantives of a concrete signification, especially to names of materials, and denotes a resemblance; as—strinicht, stony; holgicht, wood-like; salgicht, salty; blumicht, flower-like, flowery. Only thericht, foolish, is formed from the appellation of a person.

XXV.

FORMATION OF COMPOUND WORDS.

§ 276. When two words are so joined into one that they express but one idea, the word obtained is called a compound word. Every compound word consists of only two components or members. The principal member—that is, that component which determines the other—generally has the principal accent; while the subordinate member, or the component which is determined, has a subordinate accent. For example, in Beinglas, wine-glass, Bein determines Glas; in hellfau, light blue, hell determines blau; in ausgehen, to go out, aus determines gehen. Each component may be a compound word in itself. In that case, the principal member of the determinative component has the principal accent, as for instance Schuh in Schuhmacherhandwerf, shoemaker's trade; or Buch in Buchhändlerladen, bookseller's shop.

I. COMPOUND SUBSTANTIVES.

- § 277. Substantives are compounded with other substantives, as—Schulftube, school-room; or with adjectives, as—Bollmond, full moon; or with verbs, as—Singftunde, singinglesson; or with particles, as—Abgrund, abyss.
- 1. When the two component parts are substantives, they are very often simply joined together without any connecting link, as in Saushund, house-dog; Seeman, seaman; Briefeträger, letter-carrier; Kunstwerf, work of art; Regenbogen, rainbow. When the first component ends in e, it sometimes drops the vowel, as in Schulstube, school-room; Erdbeere, strawberry; Augapfel, eyeball.

Frequently the first component takes a termination namely, 8, c8, or n, en, ens-according as it belongs to the one or other of the declensions; e.g. - Wirthshaus, tavern; Rönigsfrone, king's crown; Frühlingszeit, season of spring; Gotteffurcht, fear of God; Tageslicht, daylight ;- Sonnenstrahl, sunbeam : Ehrentitel, honorary title ; Barenfell, bear's skin; Belbenmuth, heroism ;- Willensfreiheit, freedom of will; Glaubensartifel, article of faith. But sometimes the termination & or es is added, for the sake of euphony, even to substantives of the feminine gender, as in Liebesbienst, act of kindness; Geburtstag, birthday: Sulfstruppen, auxiliary forces. This takes place especially if the first component is in itself a compound word, or if it has one of the derivative suffixes, heit, feit, ing, ling, schaft, thum, ung, and in foreign words, ion, at, tat; e. g. - Hochzeitstag, wedding-day; Sand= werkszeug, workman's tools; Bufluchtsort, place of refuge; Weisheitszahn, wisdom-tooth; Beringsfang, herring-fishing; Ordnungsliebe, love of order; Erziehungsanstalt, educational establishment; Religionefreiheit, religious liberty; Univerfitatsfirche, college-church.

The euphonic letters e, I, er, are but very rarely inserted between the two components, as in Tagewerf, day's work; Mausefalle, mouse-trap; Seidelbeere, bilberry; Uschermittwoch, Ash-Wednesday.

In Brautigam, bridegroom, and Nachtigall, nightingale, the vowel i is also enphonic. Brautigam, being compounded of Braut, bride, and the old High-German gomo, man, hero, means literally 'man of the bride.' Nachtigall is compounded of Nacht, night, and the old High-German galan, to sing, and therefore means literally 'singer of the night.'

The first component is commonly in the singular number; the plural occurs only in a few words; e.g.—Wörterbuch, dictionary; Kindermädchen, nursery-maid; Götterlehre, mythology; Bilderbuch, picture-book; Kleiderschrauf, wardrobe, &c., along with others compounded with Kinder, Götter, Bilder, Kleider.

- 2. When the first component is an adjective, it is joined to the substantive without any connecting link; e.g.—Großzvater, grandfather; Weißborn, hawthorn; Gleidymuth, equanimity; Edelstein, precious stone.
- 3. When the first component is the root of a verb, it is either simply joined to the substantive, or, if euphony require it, the vowel e is inserted; e.g.—Reitpferd, riding-horse; Treibhaus, hothouse, literally forcing-house; Washhaus, wash-house; Wohnert, dwelling-place;—Reifemagen, travelling-carriage; Lesebuch, reading-book; Labetrant, refreshing drink; Beigefinger, forefinger; Babewanne, bathing-tub.
- 4. Particles of whatever kind are joined to substantives without any connecting link. All the prefixes which are used in the composition of verbs, occur also in substantives derived from them. Respecting the accent of such substantives, see § 29, 3 and 4. Some particles, however, are chiefly peculiar to substantives, a few to adjectives also. With substantives they always have the principal accent.
- un, English un, in, im, dis, mis, usually denotes negation, as in Unglud, misfortune; Unfall, disaster; Unrecht, wrong; lluftun, nonsense. In some words it indicates more particularly that an object has departed from its natural condition, and that it is bad, repulsive, or injurious; as in Unmenfch, an inhuman person; Unthier, a monstrous animal, a brute; Unfraut, weeds; Ungeftalt, deformity; Unthat, misdeed; Unwetter, tempest.

ur (as a verbal prefix er) is originally the same as the preposition auß (Gothic us, old High-German ur), and accordingly signifies a proceeding from or originating; as in Uriprung, origin; Urheber, originator; Urquell, fountainhead; Urbilb, prototype, and a few more. In some adjectives, it merely strengthens the fundamental idea; as in uralt, very old; urplöglich, very sudden.

ant (as a verbal prefix ent) from the Gothic and, which means 'towards,' or 'against,' is preserved in Untwort, answer; and Untlit, face.

aber, meaning originally 'again' (as in abermals, once again), conveys the idea of 'false' in Abermis, false wit, craziness, and Aberglaube, superstition.

after signifies that which is behind or follows, as well as that which is false, inferior, or spurious; e. g.—Aftergeburt, after-birth; Afterpacht, under-tenure;—Afterfönig, mockking; Afterrede, slander.

erz, English arch, denotes the first or most distinguished in its kind, either with regard to dignity or inner condition; e. g.—Erzengel, archangel; Erzherzeg, archduke; Erzfeind, archfiend; Erzhöfewicht, arrant villain; Erzhieb, arrant thief.

miß, English mis, expresses the defectiveness or entire want of a thing, as in Wißgriff, mistake; Wißfrauch, abuse; Wißton, dissonance; Wißtrauen, mistrust; Wißfethat, misdeed; Wißgunst, ill-will; Wißvergnügen, displeasure. It is also used as a verbal prefix.

II. COMPOUND ADJECTIVES.

§ 278. Adjectives are compounded with other adjectives, as—bunfelblau, dark blue; or with substantives, as—ficinhart, hard as stone; feefranf, sca-sick; volfreich, populous; ge-fdmactvou, tasteful; hoffnungevou, hopeful; treuloe, faithless; gebanfenloe, thoughtless; or with verbs, as—merfwurbig, remarkable; glaubwurbig, credible; or with particles, as—übervou, overfull; außerorbentlich, extraordinary; mitschulbig, accessory to a crime; unrecht, wrong; ursprünglich, original; erzbumm, extremely stupid. In the composition of adjectives, the same rules are observed as in the composition of substantives.

Note

Some adjectives with the prefix un have the principal accent on the prefix, but others on the stem. The accent is given to the stem when the idea conveyed by the adjective is simply negatived, as in unfirth ide, immortal; untrofities, inconsolable; unerofities, infinite; unglaub ide, incredible; unmogities, impossible; unfeption, infallible; unficht bar, incestimable, and others. But the accent is laid on the prefix un when the negation of the idea is to be rendered emphatic, or when the idea is not only negatived, but a positive idea is expressed through the negation of the simple adjective, as in un'gleich, unequal; un'ath, not genuine; un'etel, ignoble; un'fruchtbar, sterile; un'fhultig, innocent; un'ath, unnecessary; un'aghun, ill; un'aghaen, ill-bred; un'erfchant, impudent.

III. COMPOUND VERBS.

- § 279. Verbs are compounded with nouns—that is, substantives and adjectives; or with adverbs and prepositions (the latter assuming the nature of adverbs); or with syllables which are only used as prefixes, and have no meaning by themselves. The grammatical use of compound verbs of every kind, as well as their accentuation, has been fully explained in chapter XI. It only remains to give a short account of the syllables employed as inseparable prefixes.
- 1. be (which has sprung from the preposition bei) usually gives the action expressed by an intransitive verb a direction to an object conceived as suffering the action-in other words, it changes an intransitive verb into a transitive one; c. g.—bewachen, to guard, from wachen, to watch; beweinen, to bewail, from weinen, to weep; belochen, to laugh at, from lachen, to laugh; besitzen, to possess, from sitzen, to sit; befommen, to come by, obtain, from fommen, to come. Sometimes it gives a transitive verb a direction towards another object, as in behauen, to cultivate (land), from bauen, to build (a house); bemalen, to paint on (a wall), from malen, to paint (a picture); befäen, to sow (a field), from fäen, to sow (seed); bepflangen, to plant (a garden), from pflangen, to plant (a tree). There are also many transitive verbs formed from substantives and adjectives by means of the prefix be; as-bemüben, to trouble; beneiden, to envy; befreunden, to befrieud; befreien, to free; betäuben, to deafen, from Diube, Neid, Freund, frei, taub; sometimes with the insertion of a euphonic syllable between the stem and the termination, as in begnatigen, to pardon; befänftigen, to appease; begeistern, to inspire, from Onabe, fanft, Geift. With intransitive verbs the prefix be occurs very seldom; e.g.—beharren, to persevere; beruhen, to rest upon; behagen, to please; bemachfen, to overgrow with, and a few others.
 - 2. cnt chiefly denotes privation or separation. It is joined either to verbs, as in enthinben, to absolve; entstiehen, to escape; entsuffen, to run away; entwenden, to steal; entsiehen, to withdraw; or to substantives and adjectives, changing them into verbs, as in enthaupten, to behead; entstäften, to weaken; enterben, to disinherit; entvässern, to depopulate; entschuldigen, to excuse; entschigen, to release from. In entsprechen, to correspond; entbieten, to bid; enthalten, to contain, ent stands in the place of an.

- 3. emp occurs only in three verbs; namely—empfehsen, to recommend; empfangen, to receive; empfinden, to feel.
- 4. er has, like the prefix ur, sprung from the preposition auß (see § 277, 4). This original signification is still to be traced in words like erretten, to save from; erschaffen, to produce, create; erschöpsen, to exhaust; ergießen, to pour out; erzießen, to educate, and others. The prefix er is joined to verbs and adjectives, and chiefly denotes a growing, making, or passing into another condition; or an obtaining. For example:—erwachsen, to grow up; crhauen, to build up; erwachen, to awake; erstären, to explain; erstarsen, to grow strong; erwärmen, to warm; errötßen, to blush; erschisch, to refresh; erneuen, to renew; ersalten, to obtain; erzwingen, to obtain by force; erbetteln, to obtain by begging; ersausen, to obtain by purchase.
- 5. ber has sprung from für or bor, and generally denotes a turning away. It occurs, therefore, in verbs which signify perishing or destroying, as in vergeben, to pass away; verwelfen, to wither; perblüben, to fade; perschallen, to die away (said of sounds); perbrennen, to burn; -or losing, as in perlieren, to lose; verlernen, to forget; verspielen, to lose by playing; vertrinfen, to spend in drinking ;-or erring, as in verfennen, to mistake; verziehen, to spoil (a child); verlegen, to mislav. In verbs formed from substantives and adjectives, especially from the comparative of adjectives, the prefix per indicates a change of condition: e. a. versteinern, to petrify: vergolben, to gild; permusten, to lay waste; perjungen, to make young; veralten, to become antiquated; verarmen, to become poor; verbittern, to imbitter; vergrößern, to enlarge; verlängern, to make longer: perschönern, to embellish: perseinern, to refine.
 - 6. zer denotes a dissolution or destruction, as in zergehen to dissolve; zerfallen, to crumble to pieces; zerfpringen, to burst; zerfließen, to melt away; zerflören, to destroy; zerreißen, to tear to pieces; zerbrechen, to break to pieces.

- 7. miß denotes doing the contrary of what is expressed by the simple verb, or doing it in a wrong way; e. g.—mißgönnen, to grudge; mißglüden, to succeed ill; mißleiten, to mislead; mißbrauchen, to abuse.
- 8. The augment ge occurs only in a few verbs, in most instances without exercising any distinct or material influence on their signification; e.g.—germmen, to win; genießen, to enjoy; genesen, to recover; gebrauchen, to use.

SYNTAX.

XXVI.

SIMPLE AND COMPOUND SENTENCES.

§ 280. Every simple sentence contains either an assertion, or a question, or a command; e.g.—Die Schwester schreibt einen Brief, the sister writes a letter. Schreibt die Schwester einen Brief? does the sister write a letter? Schreibe (du) cinen Brief, write (thou) a letter. The leading principles of the construction of simple sentences have been explained in Chapter III.

§ 281. A simple sentence necessarily consists of a subject—that is, a thing or person spoken of—and of a predicate—that is, what that thing or person is asserted to be or to do as as—bie Schwester schwester, the sister writes. Der Fluß ist tief, the river is deep. All the rules of syntax which bear upon the connection of the subject and predicate, are here comprised under the head 'Predicative Combination.'

A substantive, whether it fill the place of the subject or of any other member of a sentence, can be qualified or individualised; as—ber Brief ber Schwester, the sister's letter. Ein tieser Fluß, a deep river. The various modes in which this is done will be considered under the head 'Attributive Combination.'

The predicate of a sentence can be completed or individualised by being referred to some particular object or objects, or to some particular place, time, manner, or cause; as—bie Schwester wird heute einen Brief schreiben, the sister will write a letter to-day. Der Gärtner pstangt einen

Baum in bem Garten, the gardener plants a tree in the garden. This relation will come to be considered under the head 'Objective Combination,' which admits of the two subdivisions, 'Completing Object,' as in the above examples, einen Brief, einen Baum; and 'Adverbial Expression,' as beute, in bem Garten.

§ 282. When two or more clauses are joined together, they are either independent of each other, and hence co-ordinate, or one is made to depend on or to be subordinate to the other.

Co-ordinate clauses are sometimes placed side by side without any connecting link, as—ber Mensch benkt, Gott Ienkt, man proposes, God disposes; but more commonly they are joined by means of one of the co-ordinative conjunctions, as und, aber, both, over, benn, &c., which have come under consideration in § 258, sq. For example:—Wir sehen mit ben Mugen, und wir hören mit ben Ohren, we see with our eyes, and we hear with our ears. Die Fürsten der Erde sind mächtig, aber Gott ist mächtiger als alse Fürsten der Erde, the princes of the earth are mighty, but God is mightier than all the princes of the earth. Berschiebe nicht auf morgen, was du heute thun kannst, denn die Jufunst ist ungewiß, delay not till to-morrow what thou canst do to-day, for the suture is uncertain.

§ 283. When a clause is made to depend on another, it is cane! a dependent clause, whilst the clause to which it is subordinated is called a principal clause. A dependent clause, the peculiar structure of which has been explained in § 49, generally cannot be understood by itself, but becomes intelligible only when put in connection with a leading clause. Its object is either to explain the whole thought contained in the principal clause, or to supply the place of, or qualify, one of its members. Hence a dependent clause stands to the leading one in the relation either of a substantive, or of an adjective, or of an adverb, and is called respectively a dependent substantive, or adjective, or adverbial clause. Several subordinate clauses are often ranged under the same principal clause. Two or more clauses thus united form a compound sentence. Subordinate clauses are commonly joined with their principal clause by subordinative conjunctions (§ 257), or by relative pronouns or relative adverbs. Examples: Dag er tobt ift, ift mir bekannt, that he is dead (or his death) is known to me. Here bag er tobt ift is the subject of ift mir befannt, accordingly it is a dependent substantive clause,-Er weiß, daß fein Leben auf bem Spiele fteht, he knows that his life lies at stake (that is, the danger of life). Here daß sein Leben auf bem Spiele fteht is the object of er weiß, and hence a dependent substantive clause.—Ein Baum, welcher keine Frucht trägt, wird umgehauen, a tree which bears no fruit (that is, an unfruitful tree) is cut down. Here the words welcher keine Krucht trägt qualify ein Baum, and therefore make a dependent adjective clause.—In werde ihn besuchen, wenn ich Zeit übrig habe, I shall go to see him if I have time to spare. Here the clause menn ich Reit übria habe, expressing the condition on which the visit is promised. is a dependent adverbial clause.—Er hat fich unwohl befunden. seitbem er von Amerika zurückgekehrt ist, he has been unwell, since he returned from America. Here the words seithem er von Amerika zurückgekehrt ist express a relation of time of the principal clause, and accordingly make a dependent adverbial clause.

§ 284. A dependent clause follows, precedes, or is inserted in the principal clause. When it precedes the principal clause, it is termed the protăsis (antecedent, Borbersas), and the other the apodăsis (consequent, Nachsas); but these terms are usually employed only when the dependent clauses adverbial, denoting time, cause, concession, or a condition. The apodosis always takes an inverted form. For example:—Seitbem er von Amerika zurückzefehrt ift, hat er sich unwohl besunden, since he returned from America, he has been unwell. Wenn ich Zeit sibrig habe, werde ich ihn besuchen, if I have time to spare, I shall go to see him.

§ 285. When a dependent clause is arranged in the usual way, the auxiliary verb of tense which contains the assertion is often omitted; e.g.—Es leben Wiele, die das nicht gesein, Sch. (understand haben), many live who have not seen that. Tell soll mir's zeugen, ob die Fahrt zu wagen, Sch. (understand ist), Tell shall be my witness, whether the passage is to be ventured. Nein, ich verlor nicht Alles, da solder Freund im Unglück mir geblieben, Sch. (understand ist), no, I did not lose all, since such a friend has been lest to me in missortune.

I. PREDICATIVE COMBINATION.

XXVII.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN SUBJECT AND PREDICATE.

§ 286. The subject of a sentence is always in the nominative case. It is generally a substantive, or a pronoun representing a substantive, or an adjective used substantively; as for instance—ber Mensch benst, man thinks. Er benst, he thinks. Das Use vergest, old things pass away. But any word which is used in the sense of a substantive, may also be made the subject of a sentence; e. g.—bas Wenn ist ein bebeutendes Wort, the 'is' is a significant word. Irren ist menschild, to err is human. Lange seden heist viele übersleben, G., to live long is to survive many. Sometimes a whole clause stands in the place of the subject; e. g.—Wer slug ist, serne schnelden, Sch., let him who is wise learn to be silent and obey. Wann er fommen with, ist noch ungewis, when he will come, is still uncertain.

Notes.

1. In imperative sentences, the subject is omitted when a person is addressed in the second person; as—found, come; geht himas, go out; uffices the pronoun requires to be made emphatic for the sake of contrast. In the first and third persons, however, the subject is always expressed; as in gehe er, let him go; gehen wir, let us go; gehen fie, let them go; gehen sie, go (you). (See § 316.)

2. When a substantive pronoun is the subject of a sentence, it agrees in gender and number with the substantive it represents. But when the substantive is a neuter diminutive of the name of a person, it is not unusual to make the pronoun agree with the natural gender of that person; e. g.—28as gichts? tas Staulein! Sie will stersen, Sch., What is the matter? the lady! she is dying.

§ 287. The predicate is generally a verb, or a substantive, or an adjective. A verb is referred to the subject by means of its inflectional changes, or by an auxiliary verb; a substantive or adjective is joined to the subject by means of the verb sein, to be—hence called the 'copula,' or 'link'—or by similar verbs, such as merben, to become; bletben, to remain; setting, to seem. A substantive, when employed as a predicate, is, like the subject, in the nominative case. A predicative adjective remains uninflected. Examples:—Die Rose blühet, the rose blooms. Sie hat geblühet, it has bloomed. Der Bogel kann sliegen, the bird can fly. Die Rose if roth, the rose is red. Der Weg wird eben, the road becomes even. Nero war ein Thrann, Nero was a tyrant. Wir bleiben Freunde, we remain friends. Das Urtheil scheint gerecht, the sentence seems just.

1. Sometimes the predicate consists of an adverb, or of the genitive of a substantive with or without an adjective to qualify it, or of a substantive preceded by a preposition, as von, in, ohn, &c. For example.—Ore Summer if vorüber, the storm is over. Der Sommer ift hin, Sch., the summer is gone. Alles war vergebens, all was in vain. 34 bin gang 3hrer Meinung, I am quite of your opinion. Set gutes Muths, be of good cheer. Gr ist von Avel, he is of noble birth. Die Sache ist von großer Wichtigkeit, the matter is of great importance. Gr war in Buth, he was in rage. Set ohne Furcht, be without fear.

2. Some adjectives are not employed in a predicative sense, namely—
1. Derivatives in en or ern; as—gotten, golden; feiren, silken; hötgern, wooden; giafern, of glass (§ 275, 6). 2. Many derivatives in ifc) and lich; as—tiebich, thievish; heuchlerifch, hypocritical; rauberifch, rapacious; northich, northern; taglich, dally; nachtlich, nightly; jabriich, annual; munblich, oral; mortich, literal, &c. 3. All adjectives in ig derived from adverbs of time and place; as—heutig, of to-day; gesting, of yesterday; hiefig, of this place, &c. (§ 275, 1).

- 3. A considerable number of adjectives, on the contrary, can be used only in a predicative connection, some of them under particular restrictions; namely—1. The following stems: bereit, ready; brad, fallow petis, hostile; gar, ready (boiled); gange und gete, current; getroft, confident; genety, sensible, aware; grant, averse; irre, wrong; fund, known; leit, sorry; nüt, of use; quer, oblique; quitt, quit. 2. The following derivatives and compounds: abboth, disinclined; adpenting, alienated; abmentig, estranged; anticitig, getting a sight of a thing; eingevent, mindful; habboft, getting possession of a thing; theithaft, partaking; under, unwell; wrufuffig, forfeiting, and a few more. Regarding the use of participles as predicates, see § 177.
- § 288. The verb agrees with the subject in number and person:—ich bin zufrieden, I am content. Du schläfst, thou sleepest. Der Wiensch ist frei, man is free. Wir mussen sterben, we must die. Ihr sprecht, you speak. Hünser werden gebaut, houses are being built.
- § 289. When there are to the same predicate several subjects of different persons, one of which is the first person, the verb is put in the first person plural; when there is no subject of the first person, but one of the second and one of the third, the verb is put in the second person plural. For example:—Ich und du find immer Freunde gewesen, I and thou have always been friends. Du und bein Bater seid derselben Meinung, thou and thy father are of the same opinion. It is usual, however, to add a personal pronoun in the plural number comprehending both subjects:—Ich und du, wir sind immer Freunde gewesen. Du und dein Bater, ihr seid derselben Meinung.

§ 290. When there are several subjects in the third person. the verb is put in the third person plural; e.g. Schönheit und Jugend vergeben, beauty and youth pass away. Da hangen Belm und Schilb, Sch., there hang helmet and shield. Gefundheit, Ghre, Glud und Pracht find nicht bas Glud ber Scele, Gellert, health, honour, wealth, and pomp, are not the happiness of the soul. This rule, however, is often departed from, the third person singular being employed, when the several subjects may be conceived as forming one general idea, provided they are all in the singular: e. q.-Auf blut'ge Schlachten folgt Gefang und Tanz, Sch., after bloody battles follow song and dance. Berrath und Aramobn lauscht in allen Ecten, Sch., treachery and suspicion lurk in Werschwört fich Sag und Liebe mich zu every corner. scheden? Sch., do hatred and love conspire to terrify me?

$291. When two subjects are connected by over, or; or by entweder ... over, either ... or; weder ... noch, neither ... nor; nicht nur ... sondern auch, not only ... but also, the predicate agrees with the subject nearest to it; as—ich over du mußt weichen, I or thou must yield. Ich muß weichen, over du, I must yield, or thou. Ich will dich führen lassen und verwahren, wo weder Mond noch Sonne dich bescheint, Sch., I shall have thee led and kept, where neither moon nor sun shines upon thee.

§ 292. When the subject is a collective in the singular, the verb likewise stands in the singular; as—bas Bolf hat fict verlaufen, the people have dispersed. Der Rath war in seiner Meinung getheist, the council were divided in their opinions. But the collectives ein Paar, a pair, a couple, a few; eine Menge, a number; ein Duzend, a dozen, and some others of a similar kind, are considered as indefinite numerals, and the verb agrees in number with the substantive joined to them; as—ein Raar Bücher sind mir zugesandt, a couple of books, or some books have been sent to me. Gine Menge Rebhühner sind geschoffen worden, a great number of partridges have been shot.

§ 293. When the predicate conveys the idea of an action or condition which is conceived without a distinct subject, the place of the latter is supplied by the neuter pronoun eg, which is then termed the grammatical subject. It is chiefly used with impersonal verbs, as—eß regnet, it rains; eß fdyett, it snows; and with phrases which assume an impersonal form, as—eß hungert midh, I feel hungry; eß bünft midh, methinks; also with the passive of intransitive verbs, as—eß wirb gelausen, there is running (taking place).

When, for the sake of emphasis, or merely to give variety to the mode of expression, the real subject of a sentence follows after the inflected part of the verb, its place before the verb is supplied by the grammatical subject, provided it be not filled by an adverbial expression. The verb, however, agrees in number with the real subject. For example:—Es läckelt ber See, Sch., the lake smiles, or there smiles the lake. Es raufthet das Waffer, G., the water rushes. Es eilen die Stunden, Sch., the hours hasten. Es reden und träumen die Menschen viel von fünstigen bessern Tagen, Sch., men tolk and dream much of suture better days.

The grammatical subject is also used when the real subject, following after the predicate, is expressed by a supine, or by a complete clause. For example:—Es ift eine Wollust, einen großen Mann zu sehen, G., it is a delight to see a great man. Es ist der Wille meiner Königin, daß euch nichts Billiges verweigert werde, Sch., it is the will of my queen that no just request shall be denied to you.

§ 294. The English usage of making the subject (or any other part of the sentence) emphatic by 'it is,' 'it was,' &c., is not quite foreign to the German language, but is not so fully carried out as in the English. The verb fein, in such cases, agrees with the substantive which is to be made emphatic; e.g.—Es ift die Sorge eures treuen Gerzens, die euch vergebne Schrecknisse erschaffe, Sch., it is the anxiety of your faithful heart which causes you vain terrors. Die Richter sind es nur, die ich verwerse, Sch., it is only the judges that I reject. Die Urner sind es, die am längsten säumen, Sch., it is the men of Uri who tarry longest.

Note.

Another mode of rendering the subject (or also an object) of a sentence emphatic, is to make it precede the sentence, and then refer to it in the sentence itself by a personal or demonstrative pronoun. For example:—Die Augent, sie list sein server Schall, Sch., virtue (it) is no empty sound. Into biefe Bosten, bie nach Wittag jagen, sie suchen Frankreichs sernen Ocean, Sch., and these clouds which fly towards the south (they) seek the distant ocean of France. Die Mauern, bie sind so bicht, Schwab, the walls (they) are so close. Diefe Blatt, ich sey's in eure Hants, Sch., this paper, I put it into your hands. Diefe Beisheit, ich hasse sie in meiner tiefsten Scele, this wisdom, I hate it in my deepest soul. In the first three examples the subject is made emphatic, in the last two the object.

XXVIII.

THE ACTIVE AND PASSIVE FORMS OF THE VERB.

§ 295. The active voice represents a person or thing (the subject of the sentence) as being in a state or as performing an action:—bas Kind schläst, the child sleeps; ber Lehrer lobt ben Schüler, the teacher praises the pupil. The passive voice represents the object which is affected by an action as the subject in a state of suffering that action:—ber Schüler wird von bem Lehrer gelobt, the pupil is praised by the teacher.

§ 296. Only transitive verbs—that is, verbs which have their object in the accusative—admit of a complete passive voice. An active sentence which has a transitive verb for its predicate, can be turned into a passive sentence by changing the accusative into the nominative—that is, the object into the subject—and at the same time changing the nominative into the dative, with the preposition von before it, as in the above example—ber Schüler wird von dem Lehrer gelobt.

Note.

It must be remarked that, when a transitive verb governs not only a direct object in the accusative, but at the same time an indirect object in the dative, the English sometimes change the dative of the active sentence into the nominative of the passive one; e.g.—They have promised him assistance—he has been promised assistance; people have told me—I have been told. In such cases the general rule, as given above, is strictly adhered to, unless an active construction with the indefinite pronoun man for its subject be preferred. The latter mode of expression is generally used, when the active subject is not definitely expressed:—Go iff the Oulfe verfreeden weren, or man but him Oulfe verfreeden weren, or man but mir gefagt weren, or man but mir gefagt.

§ 297. Intransitive verbs—that is, verbs denoting a state or an action the object of which is not expressed by the accusative case, but by the dative or genitive, or in some other way—have, properly speaking, no passive voice. For the only mode in which the passive of such verbs can be used is strictly impersonal, whilst the object, in whatever form it appears in the active, remains the same in the passive. For example:—Es wird auf Sie gewartet, you are waited for. Auf Tod und Leben wird gefämpft, Sch., there is fighting for life and death. Es ward mir hart begegnet, Sch., I was harshly treated. Mir wird nache gefet, Sch., I am pursued. Ihrer wurde oft gedacht, you were often mentioned. Es wurde heftig über diesen Gegenstand gestritten, Sch., this matter was warmly dedated.

Note.

Sentences like those here given as specimens are sufficiently simple, but generally there is a want of ease attending this mode of expression, which prevents it from being much employed. It can easily be avoided, either by using active sentences in the place of passive, or by having recourse to equivalent transitive verbs; as—crivarten for warten auf, to wait for; verlacen for lacen übtr, to laugh at, &c.

XXIX.

REFLECTIVE VERBS.

§ 298. When a person or thing is represented at the same time as performing and suffering an action, the verb assumes a reflective form. A transitive verb, therefore, is used in a reflective sense, if a reflective pronoun takes the place of the direct object (accusative); as—th lobe mith, I praise myself; er maith ith, he washes himself; wir fleiden und an, we dress ourselves; ite schmucken sich, they adorn themselves.

Note.

The reflective pronoun of reflective verbs is always in the accusative. There are a few verbs which have the reflective pronoun in the dative, but as they govern at the same time the accusative of the object, they are, strictly speaking, not reflective verbs, but preserve the nature of transitives. (See § 339, note.)

§ 299. As there are but few verbs in German which may be used both in a transitive and intransitive sense, the reflective form is very frequently adopted, in order to impart to a transitive verb an intransitive meaning; as—brehen and sich brehen, to turn; bersammeln and sich versammeln, to assemble; heben, to raise, and sich heben, to rise; öffnen and sich öffnen, to open; ändern and sich heben, to change; verbreiten and sich verbreiten, to spread, &c. Examples:—Der Wind hat sich gedreht, the wind has changed. Wir Schwestern sasen, die Wolfe hinnend, in den langen Nachten, wenn bei dem Bater sich des Bolfes häupter versammelten, Sch., we sisters sat spinning wool, during the long nights, when at my father's house the chiefs of the people assembled. Es ändert sich die Zeit, Sch., time changes. Die Nachricht hat sich verbreitet, the news has spread.

§ 300. The reflective form is often used for the passive, if the subject from whom the activity proceeds is not expressed. For example:—Es wird sich bald entscheiden, it will soon be decided. Es versteht sich, it is understood. In furzer Beit muß fich Bieles aufklaren, G., in a short time many things must be cleared up. Das Bild wird fich unter ben übrigen Sachen finden, Sch., the portrait will be found among the other things. Du wirft mir meinen Glauben nicht erschüttern, ber auf die tieffte Wiffenschaft fich baut, Sch., thou wilt not shake my faith, which is founded on the deepest science. The reflective form cannot be employed if the active subject is expressed; e. g .- Es wird von ben Richtern entschieben merben, it will be decided by the judges. Es murbe von Reinem berftanben, it was understood by nobody. Der Schluffel ift von einem Schulfnaben gefunden morben, the key has been found by a school-boy.

Reflective expressions similar to the above often occur with the auxiliary verb of mood lassen, to let, to allow. Examples:— Es läßt sich wohl begreisen, it can easily be conceived. Es läßt sich nicht beweisen, it cannot be proved. Bom sichern Port läßt sich's gemächlich rathen, Sch., it is easy to give advice from the sase port.

§ 301. A considerable number of verbs are only used in the reflective form, especially the following:—

fich anschiefen, to prepare, make arrangements.

" bedanfen, to render thanks.

" beeifern, to exert one's self.

" befleißigen, to apply one's self.

" begeben, to betake one's self.

" begnügen, to be contented.

" behelfen, to make shift with.

" belaufen, to amount.

" bemächtigen, to take possession of.

" bestinnen, to recollect.

" bestreben, to endeavour.

" bewerben, to sue, apply for.

" entschließen, to resolve, make up one's mind.

" entitinen, to recall to one's mind.

" erbarmen, to take pity.

" erbreiften, to dare.

ereifern, to get into a passion.

" ereignen, to come to pass, to happen.

" ergeben, to surrender.

" erholen, to recover one's self.

.. erfälten, to catch cold.

" erfühnen, to make bold, to dare.

" freuen, to rejoice.

" gebulben, to have patienco.

" gramen, to grieve.

" schämen, to be ashamed.

" schlängeln, to wind, meander.

" sehnen, to long.

umsehen, to look about.

unterstehen, to dare.

" verirren, to lose one's way.

sich verlieben, to fall in love.

- " versündigen, to sin against.
- " permundern, to be amazed.
- " porsehen, to take care, be on one's guard.
- " widerseten, to resist.
- " wundern, to wonder.

Note

Many verbs assume an entirely different meaning when used in the reflective form; e.g.—vertaffen, to quit, sich vertaffen, to rely; vergessen, to pass away, sich vergesen, to go wrong, commit an offence; verstessen, to displace, sich sufführen, to conduct one's self; fügen, to join, sich fügen, to happen, or to accommodate one's self; juttagen, to carry to, sich juttagen, to occur, and many others. Such peculiarities, however, must be learned from observation and from the dictionary.

XXX.

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

§ 302. The name of Impersonal Verbs—that is, of verbs denoting an action which is conceived without a distinct subject—is properly applied to such verbs only as express phenomena of nature; as, for example—es regnet, it rains; es schneit, it snows; es hagelt, it hails; es friert, it freezes; es thauet, it thaws; es blight, it lightens; es bonnert, it thunders; es tagt, it dawns; es bunfelt, it grows dark.

Of a similar nature are phrases like the following—e8 ift falt, it is cold; e8 ift warm, it is warm; e8 ift hell, it is light; e8 wird bunfel, it grows dark, &c.; and indications of time, as—e8 ift spat, it is late; e8 ift fruh, it is early; e8 ift vier llhr, it is four o'clock, &c.

§ 303. Some verbs which, in regard to signification, are not impersonal, assume an impersonal form, the active subject being expressed in the form of an object—that is, by the accusative or dative. Most of such verbs denote physical or moral sensations. The English language presents an analogy in the phrases 'methinks, methought, meseems.' The following, among others, deserve notice:—

- es hungert mich (or mich hungert), I am hungry.
- " burstet mich, I am thirsty.
- " friert mich, I feel cold.

es frostelt mid, I feel chilly.

" schläfert mich, I feel sleepy.

" verlangt mich, I am anxious (e. g. to know).

" gelüstet mich, I desire, I list.

" jammert mich (with the genitive), I pity.

" schaubert mich, I shudder.

" bunft mir (or mid), methinks.

" däucht mir (or-mich),

" träumt mir, I dream.

" efelt mir (vor etwas), I am disgusted at a thing.

" schwindelt mir, I feel giddy.

" " ahnt mir, I forebode.

" schwant mir, my heart misgives me.

" granet mir (vor etwas), I am afraid of something.

" bangt mir, I feel anxious or uneasy.

Examples:—Reicht nitr einen Trunk Wasser, benn mich burstet, Kr., hand me a drink of water, for I am thirsty. Es verlangt mich sehr, Sie wieder zu sehen, G., I am very anxious to see you again. Es dunkelt schon, mich schläfert, Heine, it grows dark already, I seel sleepy. Wich gelüstete nicht nach dem theuern Lohn, Sch., I should not desire the precious reward. Ich darf ihm nicht gestehen, was mir Böses schwant, Sch., I dare not consess to him what evil I forebode. Wir grauet vor der Götter Neide, Sch., I am askaid of the envy of the gods.

Notes.

- 1. Phrases like the following are of a similar nature:—cs ift mir wohl, or mir ift wohl, I feel well; mir ift übel, I feel sick; mir ift heiß, I feel hot, &c. The verbs fehlen, mangeln, gebrechen (with the preposition an), to Want, and betürfen, brauchen (with the genitive), to need, may also be classed with the above. For example:—Es fehlte an Baffer, water was wanting. Es mangelt an Gelb, money is wanting. Es bebarf nur eines Bortes, only one word is needed.
- 2. The following verbs can be used only in the third person, but in the plural as well as the singular:—gescheften, to happen; gesingen, glüden, gerathen, to succeed, to prosper; mißlingen, mißglüden, mißrathen, to succeed ill. For example:—Es gesang mir, I succeeded. Es if ihm nicht geglüdt, he has not succeeded. Auch mir ift Alles wohl gerathen, Sch., I also have succeeded in everything. Alle Unternehmungen sind ihm geglüdt, he has been prosperous in all undertakings. Thaten sind geschehen, deeds have taken place.

3. The impersonal phrase co girbt, there is, there are, French $il\ y\ a$, is of very frequent occurrence with the real subject in the accusative case.

It expresses existence in an indefinite manner. For example:—Es giebt Bücher, die beim ersten Blick Geist zu verrathen scheinen, im Grunde aber leerer, obersächlichten Schaum sind, Hegner, there are books which at first sight seem to betray spirit, but which are, in reality, mere superficial froth. Es giebt ellere Frichte, als wesche der Gaumen verlangt, Kr., there are nobler fruits than those which the palate desires. Was giebt es hier? what is the matter here? An existence of a definite kind, on the other hand, is expressed by sein; for example:—Es ist ein Gott, there is a God. Es sind zwei Bücher, deren Lesung ich Ihnen empsche, there are two books which I recommend you to read.

§ 304. The passive voice of intransitive, and sometimes also of transitive verbs, is used impersonally when the activity is not conceived as proceeding from a definite subject. For example:—Es wird gelaufen, there is running (taking place). Es wird in B. viel gespielt, there is much gambling going on at B. Es wurde viel bavon geredet, there was much talking about it. Da ward getanzt und gesungen, G., there was dancing and singing (taking place).

The reflective form is used impersonally under similar circumstances; e.g.—Es tanzt sich gut in diesem Zimmer, it is pleasant to dance in this room. Es reis't sich schlecht in diesem Lande, there is bad travelling in this country. Bon eurer Fahrt sehrt sich's nicht immer wieder, Sch., from journeys like yours one does not always return.

XXXI.

THE TENSES.

§ 305. Every verb has three absolute and three relative tenses; absolute tenses being those which represent a state or action as absolutely present, past, or future, that is, with regard to the present of the person speaking—Present, Perfect, Future; and relative tenses being those which represent a state or action as relatively present, past, or future, that is, in reference to some other occurrence—Imperfect, Pluperfect, Future Perfect.

§ 306: The present expresses that which is going on at the time we are speaking—id) fareibe, I write; ein Jaus wirb gebaut, a house is being built. The German language has but this one form for the present, which expresses also the English 'I am writing,' and 'I do write.' In the same manner the imperfect id) farieb answers to 'I was writing,' and 'I did write,' as well as to 'I wrote,' and the perfect id) have geschrichen, to 'I have written,' and 'I have been writing:' and so on in every tense.

The present is also employed to express that which always is or happens; as—Mues Leben geht bem Tobe entgegen, all life advances towards death.

Notes.

1. The present tense is frequently used for the imperfect, when a narrative is to be rendered more lively and impressive, past events being represented as occurring in the presence of the hearer or reader.

- 2. The present is also sometimes used instead of the future, when a future event is to be conceived as one which is sure to take place, or when the time of the action is pointed out in some other way; e.g.—Fs form mt is 3cit, B., the hour cometh. Diefen Frevel beftraf id, man soll es form getenten, G., I shall (to a certainty) punish this offence; it shall be long remembered. Es liegt in guter hand, gewisenhaft wird es zu seiner Beit zurüd gegeben, Sch., it lies in good hands, it will in due time be returned conscientiously. In wenig Angenbliden steht sie ver euch, Sch., in a sew moments she will stand in your presence.
- § 307. The perfect denotes past time absolutely, or, in other words, it represents an event simply as completed in regard to the present of the speaker-ich habe geschrieben. I have written; ein haus ift gebaut worden, a house has been built. But often it denotes more particularly the reality of a completed fact; e. g .- Mein ganges Leben lang hab' ich ben Bogen gehandhabt, Sch., all my life long I have handled the bow. Die Richter haben ihr Schulbig außgesprochen über euch. Sch., the judges have pronounced their Guilty' over you. Um neun Uhr ift er geftorben, Sch., he Ift mein Urtheil gefällt? Es ift died at nine o'clock. gefällt, Sch., is my sentence pronounced? It is pronounced. (See § 104.) In the latter sense the perfect is sometimes used even for the future perfect; e. g.—Ein Opfer ist's, das alle Stimmen forbern ; gemahr' auch biefes, und ber heut'ge Tag hat Englands Wohl auf immerdar gegründet, Sch., it is one victim which all voices demand; grant also this, and the present day has (i.e., will have) for ever established England's weal. But the perfect in German is not used in historical narrative, like the perfect in Latin and the agrist in Greek.

§ 308. The future denotes a condition or action which is to take place at a future time in general, or at a particular moment in future time—ich werde schreiben, I shall write; ich werde morgen schreiben, I shall write to-morrow; ein Haus wird gehaut werden, a house will be built.

Notes.

2. The future, as well as the future perfect, often indicates the

^{1.} The periphrastic forms, 'I am going to write,' 'I was going to write,' denote near futurity, and are expressed by means of the auxiliary verb of mood wollen, with the infinitive, or by the phrase in Bequiff sein, with the supine; as—ich will (or wollte) schreiben; ich bin (or war) im Bequiff zu schreiben. Sometimes the adverb even, just, is joined to these phrases, for the sake of perspicuity.

probability of the predicated action, represented as present in the former case, and as past in the latter. The adverbs tody or mobil are sometimes added, to bring out the sense more clearly. For example:—3dy hore remains fommers; it with the Whith fein, Sch., I hear somebody coming; it is probably the landlord. She werket (body) night verlangen, tak ich meinen Eid brechen foll, G., you probably (or surely) do not desire me to break my oath. Es with was Undres well bedeutet haben, Sch., it probably meant something else.

§ 309. The imperfect denotes an action which is past to the speaker, but not completed in reference to another action performed at the same time—ich schrieb einen Brief, als mein Freund eintrat, I wrote or was writing a letter, as my friend entered; das Haus wurde gebaut, als ein Feuer außsbrach, the house was building, when a fire broke out. The imperfect is especially employed as the historical tense, because in historical narration past events are placed in relation to one another.

The imperfect is also used when a past event is represented as one of long duration, or as a custom; e.g.—Ich gesteh's, daß ich die Hossenia nährte, zwei edle Nationen zu vereinen, Sch., I confess that I entertained the hope of uniting two noble nations. In der freien Natur Lebten die Griechen des Jahres größten Theil mühelvs dahin, Jacobs, the Greeks passed the greatest part of the year without care out of doors.

- § 310. The pluperfect denotes an occurrence not only past to the speaker, but finished and past in reference to another occurrence likewise represented as past to the speaker—ich hatte ben Brief geschrieben, als mein Freund eintrat, I had written the letter, as my friend entered; bas Gaus war gebaut worden, ehe bas Feuer ausbrach, the house had been built, before the fire broke out.
- § 311. The future perfect denotes an event which is future to the speaker, but is conceived as finished in relation to another event likewise conceived as future to the speaker—ich werbe ben Brief geschrieben haben, the mein Freund fommt, I shall have written the letter, before my friend comes; bas haus wirb gebaut worden sein, the ber Winter beginnt, the house will be, or will have been, built before the winter sets in.

XXXII.

THE MOODS.

- § 312. The manner in which a state or action is conceived—namely, as real, or possible, or assumed, or necessary—is indicated by certain forms of the verb, called the Moods, which are four in number, and by auxiliary verbs, commonly termed the Auxiliary Verbs of Mood.
- § 313. The Indicative Mood is used to assert a real fact, either affirmatively or negatively; e.g.—Er hat das Versbrechen begangen, he has committed the crime. Ich verstehe Sie nicht, I do not understand you. It is also employed to put a question in a direct manner—Sat er das Verbrechen begangen? has he committed the crime? Verstehen Sie mich nicht? do you not understand me?

Note.

The indicative is sometimes used instead of the imperative, in order to make a command emphatic by representing it as already obeyed; e. g.—Du trittst vor. Sch., step thou forward. In schweigt, bis man euch austust, Sch., be silent, until you are called upon.

- § 314. The Conjunctive expresses the mere possibility of a fact. It is used in principal as well as dependent clauses, but especially in the latter; namely—
- 1. In clauses containing an assertion or question of a person spoken of, which is quoted by the speaker—Man fagt, daß der König todt set, it is said that the king is dead. Er schrieb mir, daß er sid um eine Stelle beworden habe, he wrote me that he had applied for a situation. Ein Beiser ward gestagt, warmu ihn Gott also gestagt habe, Herder, a wise man was asked, why God had thus blessed him. In clauses of this kind the verb is in the conjunctive of the present, or persect, or suture tense, according as the present, or perfect, or suture tense, according as the present, or perfect, or future would be used, if the quotation were made in a direct way. But if the verb of the principal clause is in the impersect or plupersect, the dependent clause containing the quotation has sometimes the conditional instead of the conjunctive; e.g.—Er sagte, daß er sich um eine Stelle beworden hätte, he said that he had applied sor a situation. The conjunction baß, which introduces an indirect quotation, is very often omitted; in such cases the dependent clause assumes the form of a direct principal one; as—Sie fagt mir flets, ich sei ihr Feind, Sch., she always tells me that I am her enemy.

Note.

An indirect quotation is expressed by the indicative mood, when the assertion which it contains is considered as a real fact by the person making the statement—Er felfit hat gefagt, baß er gefehlt hat, he himself has said that he has done wrong. Hence the indicative often occurs after the verbs wiffen, to know; schen, to see; extennen, to perceive; betennen, gestehn, to consess; beweisen, to prove, and others of a similar signification. For example:—Er weiß, baß schu Leben in Gesahr ist, he knows that his life is in danger. In septement, you see how my name is abused.

- 2. In clauses containing a wish, request, hope, apprehension, permission, advice, &c., the conjunctive is employed when the realisation of the wish, request, &c., is conceived as possible-Willst bu, daß es gleich vollzogen werde? Sch. dost thou wish that it be executed immediately? 3th bitte, daß es treu vollzogen werde, I request that it be faithfully executed. Wir hoffen, daß das Unternehmen gelingen werbe, we hope that the undertaking will succeed. 3d fei, gewährt mir die Bitte, in eurem Bunde der britte, Sch., let me be, grant me the request, the third in your bond of friendship. Gott rette seine Seele vor Berzweislung! Sch., may God save his soul from despair! If the verb in the leading clause stands in the imperfect or pluperfect, the verb in the dependent clause is sometimes put in the conditional; e.g.—Er fürchtete, bag bie Stlaven fich gegen ihn verbanden, or verbinden wurden, he feared, lest the slaves should conspire against him.
- 3. The conjunctive is used in clauses expressing a purpose; c. g.—Birle gut, daß du den Apfel treffeß, Sch., take a good aim, that you may hit the apple. Und Niemand ist, der ihn vor Unglimpf schüße, Sch., and there is no one to protect him from injustice. The conditional is used, however, if the verd of the leading clause is in the imperfect or pluperfect—Er eilte, damit er zu rechter Beit ankame, he hastened, that he might arrive in proper time.
 - § 315. The Conditional Mood expresses a state or action, the reality of which is merely assumed. It occurs, like the conjunctive, both in principal and dependent clauses, especially—

1. In clauses stating a condition or supposition which is contrary to reality, and likewise in clauses containing the inference or conclusion drawn from such a condition. For example:- Wenn er gespart batte, (so) mare er jest ein reicher Mann, if he had saved, (then) he would now be a rich man (but in reality he did not save, and in consequence he is not a rich man). Wenn ich unwohl gewesen wäre, (so) ware ich zu Haus geblieben, if I had been unwell, I should have staved at home. The inference can also be expressed by the conditional of the two future tenses—Wenn er gespart hatte, so wurde er jest ein reicher Mann fein. Wenn ich unwohl gewesen ware, so wurde ich zu Haus geblieben fein. Sometimes the condition is understood or contracted with the inference; e.g.—Ich hätte anders gehandelt, I should have acted differently (namely, if it had been my case). 3dy hatte an feiner Stelle anders gehandelt, in his place (or, if I had been in his place) I should have acted differently. Or the condition may be stated in the form of an adversative clause—3th batte lanaft erfahren konnen, wer ber fremde Berr ift; aber ich mag night, Lessing, I could long ago have learned who the strange gentleman is (namely, if I had chosen); but I do not wish it.

Note.

When a condition is stated without any regard as to whether it has been, or is likely to be, realised, it must be expressed by the indicative mood; e.g.—When Franteich meinen Bund verlangt, muß es auch meine Sorge mit mit theilen, Sch., if France desires my alliance, she must also participate in my care. When it justiceth scib, is ift das Wert vollfommen, G., if you are satisfied, then is my work perfect. When a condition involves the possibility of its fulfilment, it is also expressed by the indicative (often attended by the adverb ctwa; perhaps), or by the auxiliary verb sollen; e.g.—Whenn er (etwa) fragt, or fragen sollite, if he should ask. The conjunctive is used, however, if a condition be introduced by the phrase es sei tend daß, or simply by the adverb tenn (in a direct construction); e.g.—3ch lasse tid, nicht, du segment mich benn (or es sei ben daß du mich segment), I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. But this mode of expression occurs very seldom.

2. In concessive clauses, the conditional is used only when the concession implies a merely assumed reality—Wenn bet

Arzt auch gekommen wäre, so hätte er boch nicht helsen können, although the physician had come, yet he could not have helped (but he did not come). Concessive clauses have generally the indicative mood; as—Degleich er krank ist, geht er boch täglich aus, although he is ill, yet he goes out daily. But sometimes concession is expressed by the conjunctive, or by the auxiliary verb mögen; as in—Ich will bich retten, kost es tausend Leben, Sch., I will save thee, should it cost a thousand lives. Was auch der Ersolg sei or sein mag, whatever be the result.

- 3. In optative clauses, the conditional implies that a wish is supposed to be, or to have been, realised, while in reality it is or was not; e.g.—D hātt' ich nie gelebt, um bas zu schauen! Sch., O that I had never lived to see this! 3ch wollt', bie Mutter fām' nach Gaus! C., I wish my mother would come home! The intensity of such a wish is strengthened by the adverb boch; e.g.—Läg' ich boch in beiner Croe, mein geliebtes Waterland! W. Müller, O that I lay in thy earth, my beloved fatherland!
- 4. In adverbial clauses containing a comparison, and commencing with als ob, or als wenn, the conditional is used when the clause expresses an assumed fact, but the conjunctive when the fact is conceived as possible. For example:—Xhun Sie, als wenn Sie zu uns gehörten, Thümmel, do as if you were one of ourselves. Es fam mir vor, als ob cin ehrwürbiger Greis vor mein Lager träte, Engel, it seemed to me, as if a venerable old man stepped to my couch. Er sieht aus, als ob er frank sei, he looks as if he were ill.
- § 316. The Imperative derives its name from its chief function—namely, that of expressing a command—but it is also employed to express a request, exhortation, or encouragement. It has a particular form only for the second person of the singular and plural:—Romm, folge mir, come (thou), follow (thou) me. Fasse Muth, take (thou) courage. Sprecht, speak (ye). Berzeiht, pardon (ye). The pronoun of the second person is commonly omitted, except when, for the sake of contrast, the person to whom the command is directed must be made emphatic; c.g.—Leb' wohl, und weil ich fern bin, führe du mit flugen Sinn daß Regiment des Hauses, Sch., farewell, and, whilst I am absent, lead thou with prudence the management of the house. Sorgt ihr für euch, ich thu' was meines Umts (ift), Sch., mind you your own business, I do what is my duty. The forms of the third person singular and the first and third persons plural are the same as in the conjunctive present, but in the inverted arrangement, the verb taking the first place; as—Sey' er sich, sit down. Bermengen wir nicht zwei ganz unvereindere Geschöfte, Sch., let us not mix up two quite irreconcilable affairs. Leben Sie wohl, fare (you) well. When the speaker includes himself in the exhortation, the auxiliary verb of mood lassen is generally employed, instead of the first person plural; as—Lass uns gehen, or lassen, or lassen, let us go.

Note

The German language often makes use of elliptical sentences, to impart to a command or exhortation a greater emphasis by the shortness with which it is expressed. For example:—Frifth an bie Arbeit, Alter! Sch., quick to the work, old man! Burûf! bu rettest ben Freund nicht mehr, Sch., back! thou savest the friend no more. Definet die Gase! Plat! Sch., clear the road! make way! The past participle is frequently employed in the same manner—Richt getrauert! mourn not! Fert! teine Beit verloreu! away! lose no time! Frisch, Kameraren, den Rappen gezäumt! Sch., quick, comrades, bridle the steed! The use of the indicative instead of the imperative, for the sake of emphasis, has been noticed in § 313. note.

XXXIII.

USE OF THE AUXILIARY VERBS OF MOOD.

- § 317. The auxiliary verbs of mood are used to express relations of possibility and necessity. They are seven in number; namely—fönnen, butten, mögen, müssen, müssen, sollen, tousen, lassen. They are joined to the infinitive of verbs; but sometimes an infinitive must be understood, as in—Wer fann bas? who can (do) that? Soll er in's Gesagnis? shall he (go) to prison? Sie müssen über biesen Plat, they must (pass) over this place. Was will er? what does he wish (to have)?
- 1. Rönnen, can, to be able, expresses a natural possibility—that is, an ability by nature—ber Logel fann fliegen, the bird can fly.
- 2. Dürfen, dare, to be permitted, expresses a moral possibility—that is, liberty or permission by law or by the will of another person—Isbermann barf Waffen tragen, everybody is permitted to bear arms. Ich barf nicht ausgehen, I dare not, or am not permitted to, go out.
- 3. Mogen, may, to like, also denotes a moral possibility, but differs from burfen in this, that it represents the possibility as depending on the will either of the speaker or of the subject—Sie mögen ben Brief lesen, you may (I allow you to) read the letter. In the latter case, the adverb gern is sometimes joined to mögen, as in—Ich mag nicht gern fragen, I do not like to ask. In affirmative sentences, gern is often used without mögen, as in—Ich lese gern, I like to read.

Note.

Besides these fundamental significations, formen, mogen, and burfen (the last, however, in the conditional only) express a supposed possibility—that is, a supposition on the part of the speaker— Er fann es vergessen haben, he may (perhaps) have forgotten it. Altes tonnte zuten nur salsches Spiel sein, Sch., all may be in the end only salse play. Er mag ein braver Nann sein, he may be an honest man. In ofte soprer zu überreten sein, it might be a difficult matter to persuade me. Seut durste es zu spät sein, it mout would prodably be too late. The conditional (founte, möchte, durste) is here especially employed, if a person wishes to state his opinion modestly and with hesitation.

4. Müssen, must, to be obliged, denotes a natural as well as moral necessity—that is, a necessity which is founded upon a natural or moral law—Der Mensch muß sterben, man must die. Kinder müssen ihren Aeltern gehorchen, children must obey their parents.

When the moral necessity is negatived, branchen, to need, is commonly used instead of muffen; branchen, however, is not, like the real auxiliary verbs of mood, joined to the mere infinitive of verbs, but to the supine; e.g.—Er brancht nicht zu arbeiten, he need not work.

- 5. Sollen, shall, I am to..., expresses a moral necessity enforced by the will or command of another person—Du follft gehorden, thou shalt obey. Er foll fogleich fommen, he is to come directly. The conditional is used in the sense of the English 'ought'—Hud, biefes Legte follten wir versfuchen, Sch., we ought to try also this last resource. Er hätte sich vertheibigen follen, he ought to have defended himself.
- 6. Wollen, to will, to wish, to want, denotes a moral necessity which depends on the will of the subject—Ich will fogleich gehen, I will go directly. Früh übt sich, was ein Meister werden will, Sch., he practises early, who wishes to become a master. It is also used for the English 'I am going to...' (See § 308, note 1.)

Note

The last-mentioned three auxiliary verbs are also used to express a merely supposed or asserted necessity. Minsen, in particular, denotes an assertion proceeding from the judgment of the speaker—Er muß frankfein, he must be ill (judging from circumstances); soften denotes an assertion of another person, in English 'they say?' 'it is said,' in Latin dicitur—Er soft franksein, he is said to be ill; wollen denotes an assertion of the subject, in English 'he says, or pretends'—Er will tick geschen haben, he says (or pretends) he has seen thee.

7. Raffen indicates either possibility or necessity. In the former sense, it answers to the English 'to let, allow, permit, suffer;' as—Lassen Sie mich wissen, let me know. Er läßt sich betrügen, he suffers himself to be cheated. In the latter sense, it answers to the English 'to order, command, cause, make, get;' as—Er ließ die Ochsen auß dem Pfluge spannen, Sch., he ordered the oxen to be taken from the plough. Ich lasse ein Saus bauen, I get a house built. Ich habe mich einschreiben lassen, I have caused my name to be enrolled.

§ 318. Relations of possibility and necessity are expressed also by the auxiliary verbs of tense sein and haven, when joined to the supine of verbs. For example:—Ich bin zu tadeIn, I am to be blamed. Es war nicht zu ertragen, it was not to be endured. Kein Odem war in der ganzen Bersammlung zu hören, Sch., no dreath was to be heard in the whole assembly. Ich have noch einige Seiten zu schreiben, I have still a sew pages to write. Bon ihrem Schne hatte die Königin von Schottland keine Hüsse zu erwarten, from her son the queen of Scotland had no help to expect. In a sew phrases, the verd stehen with the supine is sometimes used instead of sein; e.g.—Es steht zu erwarten, it may be expected. Es steht zu hossen, it is to be hoped. Es stand zu sünchten, it was to be seared. Es steht nicht zu ändern, it cannot be changed.

Note.

From the supine in this particular signification (zu ettragen, to be endured) the modern language has, by adding b to it, formed a participle gerundive (zu ettragenb), which has the same force as the Latin gerundive in -ndus, as tolerandus; for it denotes something which requires or deserves to be done. However, it is only used in the attributive connection with a substantive, and is declined like an adjective. For example:—Gin zu verbeffernder Geher, an error which requires to be corrected; eine nicht zu ertragende Seipe, a heat which is not to be endured; ein nachzuahmende Beipiel, an example which deserves to be imitated.

GENERAL REMARKS.

§ 319. When a substantive representing a whole class or genus of persons or things is to be applied to a particular species, or to an individual comprised under such a class, the generic term requires to be qualified or individualised. That which qualifies a substantive is tenned an attribute of the substantive. The members of the attributive combination. therefore, are the substantive and its attribute. The attributive combination generally results from a predicative combination: for what in the predicative combination is asserted of a person or thing in the form of a sentence, is in the attributive combination considered as an inherent or at least presupposed quality or property. A substantive and its attribute are not sufficient to form a sentence, as the attribute does not directly assert anything of a subject. When we say, for example, 'the horse is young,' the assertion is, 'is young;' but when we say, 'the young horse runs,' ''young' is the inherent quality of the horse, whilst the assertion made in regard to the 'young horse' is, that it 'runs.'

ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVE AND APPOSITION.

The attribute may be expressed :-

- 1. By an adjective, or adjective pronoun or numeral—bas junge Pferb, the young horse; biefes Pferb, this horse; mein Pferb, my horse; bret Pferbe, three horses; alle Pferbe, all horses.
- 2. By a substantive, or adjective, or ordinal number in apposition—Wilhelm ber Eroberer, William the Conqueror; Friedrich der Weise, Frederick the Wise; Karl der Fünste, Charles the Fifth.
- 3. By a substantive in the genitive, or by a preposition with its case—ber Balast bes Kaisers, the palace of the emperor; bie Königin von England, the Queen of England; ber Gebanke an Gott, the thought of God.
- 4. By an adjective clause—her Palast, welchen her Kaiser bewohnt, the palace in which the emperor resides.

XXXV.

THE ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVE AND THE APPOSITION.

§ 320. The attributive adjective agrees with the substantive which it qualifies in gender, number, and case.

Note

The exceptions to which this rule is subject have been stated in § 175, 1. Participles also, as has been observed on a previous occasion (§ 177), partake of the nature of adjectives, and are therefore, when used attributively, made to agree with the substantive. Some adjectives cannot be used in an attributive connection; these have been enumerated in § 287, note 3.

§ 321. The attributive adjective generally precedes the substantive—weiße Rosen, white roses; and if the adjective be accompanied by an adverb or by some other words tending to determine or modify its idea, such complemental words are placed before the adjective—ein sehr reicher Mann, a very rich man; eine vierzig Fuß lange Brüde, a bridge forty feet long.

GERMAN GRAMMAR.

§ 322. In poetry, the attributive adjective often follows its substantive, and then it remains unchanged, unless the article of the substantive be repeated before it, in which case the adjective assumes the nature of an apposition (§ 326). For example:—Da tritt and feiner Kluft herver ber Rauber, groß und wilb, U., then there stepped forth from his den the robber, tall and wild. Wir gefällt ber Herver, ber flare, Rückert, I like the autumn, the clear one. However, in prose this mode of expression is rarely met with.

Note

When the adjective roll has a complement, it usually follows the substantive, and the complement follows the adjective—time Schale roll reifer Weintrauben, a dish full of ripe grapes.

- § 323. When an adjective qualifies a substantive which must be supplied from a preceding clause, it agrees with the substantive which is understood.
- § 324. A substantive is not, as in English, used for an attributive adjective; 'a gold watch,' therefore, is in German eine goldne Uhr; 'a silver cup,' ein filberner Becher; 'a silk gown,' ein seidnes Kleib.
- § 325. Pronouns and numerals are also used as attributes, but they do not, like adjectives, qualify a substantive in the proper sense of the word; they only individualise its meaning by placing it in some relation to the speaker—mein Afrip, my horse; jenes Afrib, that horse; welches Afrib, which horse; or by defining it as to number or quantity—brei Afribe, three horses; viele Afribe, many horses; wenig Kingheit, little prudence. They agree with the substantive in gender, number, and case. With numerals, however, the principle is not followed out to its full extent.
- § 326. When a substantive (or personal pronoun) is qualified by another substantive denoting the same person or thing, or by an adjective or ordinal number, with the view of explaining the substantive, or distinguishing a particular person or thing from others of the same appellation, the qualifying substantive, adjective, or ordinal number, stands in the relation of apposition to the substantive (or personal pronoun) which is qualified. The apposition agrees with the latter in gender, number, and case, and generally stands after it. For example:— Sat er ben Kaiser, seinen Gerrn, verrathen? Sch., has he betrayed the emperor his master? Wir kommen erst aus Spanien zurück, dem schönen Land des Weins und der Gefänge, A., we have just returned from Spain, the beautiful land of wine and songs. Ich siehe, nur ein Jüngling, zwischen euch, den Vielerfahrenen, Sch., I, only a youth, stand between you, the much-experienced men. Er wandte sich an Friedrich den Großen, he applied to Frederick the Great. Karl der Künste wurde zu Gent geboren, Charles the Fisth was born at Ghent. Diana, die Göttin der Jagd, Diana, the goddess of the chase.

§ 327. When the apposition precedes the substantive which it qualifies, the former only is inflected—bie Macht bes Raifer & Rarl, the power of the emperor Charles: Die Kabrif bes herrn Müller, Mr Müller's factory. In this manner are used the words ber Monat, the month; bie Stabt, the town; die Insel, the island; das Königreich, the kingdom; das Herzogthum, the duchy; die Broving, the province; die Universität, the university, and others of a similar meaning; e.g.—ber Monat Mai, the month of May; Die Stadt Berlin, the town of Berlin; die Grenzen bes Konigreichs Breußen, the frontiers of the kingdom of Prussia; Die Sauptstadt der Proving Preußen, the capital of the province of Prussia; die Professoren der Universität Bonn, the professors of the university of Bonn. But when the apposition, thus preceding a proper name and expressing a title or relationship, has no article, the proper name is inflected, not the apposition : as-Brofeffor Bermann's Werke, Professor Hermann's works; Raifer Napoleon's Tob, emperor Napoleon's death; Schwester Sophiens Handschrift, sister Sophy's handwriting. (See § 163.)

XXXVI.

THE ATTRIBUTE EXPRESSED BY THE GENITIVE OR BY PREPOSITIONS.

§ 328. The attributive genitive stands in the same relation to the substantive which it qualifies, as the attributive adjective:—Das Haus des Baters, the house of the father; des Kaifers Heer, the emperor's army, express much the same as das väterliche Haus, the paternal house; das faiferliche Heer, the imperial army. The genitive, however, denotes a variety of relations, which cannot always be expressed by equivalent adjectives.

§ 329. The genitive denotes possession, whence it is often called the possessive:—ber Garten bed Fürsten, the prince's garden (the garden belongs to the prince); bie Krone bed Königs, the king's crown (the crown belongs to the king); bie Ninde bes Baumes, the bark of the tree (the bark belongs to the tree).

§ 330. The genitive is also used to denote a personal connection, such as affinity, friendship, enmity, power, subjection, &c.; e.g.—ber Sohn bes Urztes, the son of the physician; ein Freund des Gauses, a friend of the house; der Bürgermeister der Stadt, the mayor of the city; ein Diener des Staats, a servant of the state.

Mata

This relation is sometimes expressed in English by the preposition 'to'—that is, by the dative; e.g.—physician to the king, a father to the poor, an enemy to finery. In German, the genitive is used instead—Dott wohnt Stauffacher, ein Bater ber Bebrängten, Sch., there lives Stauffacher, a father to the distressed.

- § 331. The genitive further denotes the agent or cause from which the action or effect implied in the governing substantive proceeds. This genitive is called the subjective genitive, because it corresponds with the subject of the predicative combination; e.g.—bas Lidyt ber Sonne, the light of the sun (the sun shines); ber Shadow of the tree (the tree casts the shadow); ber Flug ber Bögel, the flight of birds (birds fly); bie Liebe ber Alltern, the love of parents (parents love their children).
- § 332. The genitive often denotes the object affected by the action implied in the governing substantive. This is called the objective genitive, because it stands in the same relation to its substantive in which the suffering object stands to a transitive verb; e.g.—bic Erzichung ber Kinber, the education of children (to educate children); bic Bedrüdung eines Bolfes, the oppression of a people (to oppress a people); ber Haß ber Lyrannet, the hatred of tyranny (to hate tyranny); bic Burcht Gottes, the fear of God (to fear God).

Notes

1. If the governing substantive be derived from a verb which governs a preposition, the same preposition is employed to express the relation of the objective genitive; as—ber Gebante an Gott, the thought of God (ico venke an Gott); die Furcht vor Gefahr, the fear of danger (ich fürchte mich vor Gefahr); die Kreude über sein Güäd, the joy at his good fortune (ich freue mich über sein Güäd); Mangel an Geld, want of money ses mangels an Geld). Sometimes a preposition is employed where the genitive would be equally admissible, but for the ambiguity it might possibly occasion; e.g.—bie Liebe zu Gott, the love towards God; die Liebe zum Baterlante, the love for one's country; der Haß gegen ten Krind, the hatred which people dear to the enemy.

2. The supine of verbs is often used in an attributive sense, generally with the force of an objective genitive; e. g.—bie French bidy zu sehen, the pleasure of seeing thee; the Function that zu versieren, the fear of losing something.

§ 333. The genitive, further, signifies the whole of which anything is a part. This is called the partitive genitive, and is governed by a pronoun, numeral, or an adjective in the superlative degree-Welcher meiner Freunde? which of my friends? Reiner feiner Gafte, none of his guests. Eine ber merkwürdigften Begebenheiten, one of the most remarkable events. Die jungste meiner Schwestern, the voungest of my sisters. However, the preposition bon (sometimes unter, among) is more frequently, and in certain cases solely, used to express this relation-Den mocht' ich wissen, ber ber treuste mir von Allen ift, die biefes Lager einschließt, Sch., him I should like to know who is the most faithful to me of all whom this camp encloses. Der ftärtste unter allen Tapfern, F. Schlegel, the strongest among all the brave. Von allen Wandrern aus bem beutschen Land . . . rühmt jeder euer gaftlich Saus, Sch., of all the travellers from Germany, every one praises your hospitable house. Einer von biefen Greifen naberte fich bem Bringen, Sch., one of these old men approached the prince. Wer von (or unter) und? which of us?

§ 334. After substantives denoting measure, weight, or number, the partitive relation is expressed neither by the genitive nor by the preposition von; e.g.—ein Scheffel Weizen, a bushel of wheat; eine Flasche Wein, a bottle of wine; brei Pfund Meiß, three pounds of rice; zwei Dugend Eiet, two dozen of eggs; eine Ferde Schafe, a flock of sheep; ein Regiment Solbaten, a regiment of soldiers; ein Dugend Papier, a quire of paper; ein Morgen Land, an acre of land. The words Art, kind; Stud, piece; Haufen, heap; Menge, quantity, number, are used in the same manner. However, the name of a thing measured, weighed, or numbered, is often put in the genitive, when accompanied by an attributive adjective; as—ein halbes Dugend guter Freunde, half a dozen of good friends; eine Menge reifer Uepfel, a great number of ripe apples.

- § 335. The preposition bon is used instead of the genitive, in addition to the cases already mentioned—
- 1. Whenever the genitive cannot be pointed out either by inflection in the substantive itself, or by the article. This is especially the case with cardinal numbers, with proper names of towns and countries, and with the plural of common names wanting the article; e.g.—cin Bater von sechs Kindern, a father of six children; eine Frau von vierzig Jahren, a woman of forty years of age; die Lage von Batis, the situation of Paris; der Koloß von Modus, the colossus of Rhodes. Man hat mid vor ein Gericht von Männern vorgefordert, Sch., I have been summoned before a court of men. With names of towns and countries, and also with numerals, the relation of the genitive is often expressed by von, even though they be capable of inflection; as—ber Kaiser von Destreid, the emperor of Austria; Gerzog Johann von Schwaben, duke John of Suadia. (See § 159, with the note,)
- 2. Attributes expressing a quality, or the material of which a thing is made, always take the preposition von: as—cin Mann von Stande, a man of rank; ein Mann von edem Sinne, a man of a noble mind; eine Familie von gutem Ruse, a family of good reputation; ein Geschäft von Wichtigsteit, a business of importance; ein Trinkgesäß von Golz, U., a drinking-cup of wood; ein Monument von Marmor, a monument of marble

THE ATTRIBUTE EXPRESSED BY A WHOLE CLAUSE.

§ 336. A substantive (or pronoun) is often qualified by a whole clause, which is called an adjective clause, because it supplies the place of an attributive adjective. It is generally introduced by a relative pronoun (melcher, ber), or by a relative adverb (we, wann or wenn, wie, also als or ba), and has the nature of a dependent clause. The relative pronoun agrees with the substantive, which is supplied in the relative clause. in gender, number, and case. For example :- Der Baum, welcher keine Frucht trägt, wird umgehauen, the tree which bears no fruit (that is, the unfruitful tree) is cut down. Und bald erkennt ber Gastfreund in Korinth die Zuge, die ihm theuer find, A. W. Schlegel, and soon the friend in Corinth recognises the features which are dear to him (or, the features dear to him). Rennst bu bas Land, wo die Zitronen bluhn? G., knowest thou the land where (or in which) the citrons bloom? Um die Zeit, wenn die Trauben reifen, about the time when (or at which) the grapes grow ripe. Die Art, wie der Krieg geführt werden foulte, Sch., the manner how (or in which) the war was to be carried on. .

Notes.

^{1.} The relative pronoun cannot be suppressed in German, as is often done in English—tas Buch, welches ich las, gehört ter Leihbiblichhet, the book I was reading belongs to the circulating library. Er war ber beste kreunt, ben ich je gehöbt habe, he was the best friend I ever had. Ich tene ben herrn, mit ben Sie gingen, I know the gentleman you walked with

- 2. When in English the demonstrative pronoun 'such' is followed by the relative adverb 'as,' the latter is generally translated by a relative pronoun in German; e.g.—such books as contribute to comfort our heart, folde Bidger, bie bagu beitragen, bas Levy zu beruhigen. Sometimes wie is employed, but in this case the antecedent is referred to by a personal pronoun in the relative clause; e.g.—er zeigte eine Rühung, wie jener tiene Dienft sie gar nicht werth war, Sch., he shewed an emotion, such as that little service did not at all deserve.
- § 337. An adjective clause may be abbreviated, the relative pronoun being omitted, and the predicate being expressed by an adjective or participle without any auxiliary verb. Such an abbreviation, however, commonly takes place only when the word, to which the adjective clause refers, stands in the nominative or accusative; c.g.—und biefen Ring noch beftimm' ich bir, geschmäckt mit bem föstlichsten Evelgestein, Sch., and I promise thee this ring besides, adorned with the most costly stones.

III. THE OBJECTIVE COMBINATION.

A. COMPLETING OBJECT.

XXXVIII.

THE OBJECT EXPRESSED BY CASES, OR PREPOSITIONS.

I. THE ACCUSATIVE.

§ 338. All transitive verbs have their direct object in the accusative case. Many of them have, besides the direct object, an indirect or remote object, which stands in the dative, and generally indicates the person in regard to whom an action is performed. The English express the remote object by the preposition to, which, however, after a number of verbs is commonly omitted, so that the one object is in no way distinguished from the other. Of this description are, for example—bitten, to bid; borgen, to borrow; bringen, to bring; geben, to give; genähren, to grant; geftatten, erlauben, to permit; leihen, to lend; leiften, to afford; rathen, to advise; veriprechen, to promise; geigen, to shew, and others.

Many verbs belong to this class in German, which have a different construction in English; e.g.— Semantem etwas netween, to take a thing from a person; ranten or entrichen, to rob, deprive a person of something; verbellen, to conceal something from a person; verweisen, to reprove one for something; vorruden or vorwersen, to reprove one with something, &c. These, however, must be learned from observation.

The direct object of every transitive verb can be made the subject (nominative) of a passive construction. (See § 296.)

§ 339. With reflective verbs the reflective pronoun always stands in the accusative—id, erinners mid, I remember; bu freuest bid, thou rejoicest.

Note.

The following have the reflective pronoun in the dative, but are not genuine reflective verbs, as they govern the accusative of the object:—

sich anmasen, to arrogate to one's self.

- " ausbitten, to request, crave.
- " benten, to fancy.
 " einbilten, to imagine.
- " herausnehmen, to dare, presume.
- " pernehmen, to intend, propose to one's self.
- u queignen, to appropriate to one's self.
- § 340. The impersonal phrases—
- es hurgert mich, I am hungry; es verlangt mich, I am anxious;
- " burstet mich, I am thirsty; " gelüstet mich, I desire;
- " friert mich, I feel cold; " jammert mich, I pity;
- " fröstelt mich, I feel chilly; " schaubert mich, I shudder—
- " schläfert mich, I feel sleepy;

govern an accusative of the person in whom these feelings exist (mid); or, in other words, the real subject is expressed in the form of an object. (See § 303.)

§ 341. A few verbs govern two accusatives, one of the person and one of the thing; namely—

Ichren, to teach.
nennen, heißen, to call, name.
fchelten, to call by a bad name.

For example:—Ich lehre ihn die deutsche Sprache, I teach him the German language. Man nennt die Ceder mit Recht den königlichen Baum, Kr., one justly calls the cedar the kingly tree. So war sein Tod! ich heiß' ihn einen schonen, Freiligrath, such was his death! I call it a noble one.

Note

This double accusative is in a passive construction changed into a double nominative; as—bit Cever with mit Necht der fonigliche Baum genannt, the cedar is justly called the kingly tree. But the passive of leften does not admit of a double nominative; 'he was taught the German language,' therefore, cannot be translated by er wurte die deutsche Sprache unterrichtet or unterwiefen. The verd heißen, when used in the signification 'to be called,' has also a double nominative.

§ 342. In English, as well as in the ancient languages, verbs of choosing, appointing, electing, declaring, considering, and the like, govern two accusatives; but the German language puts with verbs of a similar signification only the suffering object in the accusative, and expresses the office or dignity to which a person is appointed, or that which a person or thing is declared or considered to be, by the preposition zu with the dative (with mablen, erwählen, erfiesen, to choose, to elect; ernennen, to name; bestimmen, bestellen, to appoint; maden, to make; falben, to anoint, &c.); or by the preposition für with the accusative (with halten, to take for; erflären, to declare; achten, to esteem; ausgeben, to give out, &c.); or by the conjunction als with the accusative, which in a passive construction is changed into the nominative (with betrachten, to consider; ansehen, to look upon; barstellen, to represent, &c.) For example:—Der König hat mich zum Rangler bes Reiches ernannt, G., the king has appointed me chancellor of the kingdom. Der 3mang ber Beiten machte mich zu ihrem Gegner, Sch., the constraint of the time made me her adversary. Ich habe herrn Firmin immer für ben redlichsten Mann gehalten, Sch., I have always considered Mr Firmin as the most honest man. Ich muß es als eine Wohlthat anschen, I must consider it as a benefit.

§ 343. Many transitive verbs govern, besides the accusative. an adjective or participle expressing the result of the action in regard to the object. An adjective or participle so used is not inflected. For instance : - Einen glücklich machen, to make a person happy; Einem das Berg ich wer maden, to make a person's heart heavy; ein Stuck Tuch Schwarz farben, to dye a piece of cloth black; bie Sande warm reiben, to rub the hands warm; bas Glas voll giegen, to pour the glass full; ben Becher leer trinken, to empty the goblet; den Hasen tobt schiegen, to shoot the hare (dead). So also with the verbs beißen, nennen, schelten, schimpfen (§ 341), and with preisen, to praise: mähnen, to fancy; träumen, to dream; erklaren, to declare; bekennen, to confess. For example :- Dian preif't Ich will mich frei ihn gludlid, one esteems him happy. und glücklich träumen, Sch., I wish to dream myself free and happy. With the verbs balten, ausgeben, annehmen, betrachten, ansehen, erflären, &c., the adjective is preceded by für or als. For example:- Ich halte die Sache für abgemacht, I consider the matter as settled. Er hat es für richtig erklärt, he has declared it to be correct. Ich betrachte dies als überflüffig, I consider this as superfluous.

Note

Some intransitive verbs, as gehen, stehen, schlasen, &c., assuming a reflective form, are used in the same manner, the adjective expressing the effect of the action upon the subject; as, for instance—ich gehe mich nube, I walk myself tired, I become tired with walking; ich habe mich steif gestanten, I have become stiff with standing; er hat such bumm geschlasen, he has become stupid with sleeping.

§ 344. Although the nature of intransitive verbs is such as to preclude their governing an accusative, still there are some which admit of being connected with that case in a peculiar way. In the first place, a substantive idea implied in the verb itself may be joined to it in the form of an object; as-einen Rampf kampfen, to fight a fight; einen Schlaf schlafen, to sleep a sleep; einen Traum träumen, to dream a dream. Such an accusative, however, is generally qualified by an adjective, or in some other way; as-id, habe einen auten Rampf gefämpft, I have fought a good fight; fle schlief ben Zauberschlaf, she slept the magic sleep. In the second place, we may attach in our mind to the subjective signification of the intransitive verb the idea of a transitive action, of an effecting, producing, or shewing, on which the accusative is made to depend; as-Thranen weinen, to weep tears (that is, to produce or shed tears in weeping): Whith schnauben, to breathe rage (that is, to shew rage in breathing); Born blicken, to look anger: Liebe lächeln, to smile love: Freude athmen, to breathe joy.

Note.

Spreachen is sometimes used with the accusative of the person, if it means quite generally 'to speak with a person,' without mentioning any object; e.g.—Ihr hat mid frechen wollen, Sch., you wished to speak to me. Spraad or night Ginige insgeheim? Sch., did he not speak to some privately?

§ 345. The accusative expresses a measure, weight, age, or value, after wiegen, to weigh; gelten, to be worth; fosten, to cost; and with the adjectives somer, heavy; groß, tall; lang, long; breit, broad; ties, deep; hoch, high; weit, wide; alt, old. For example:—Das Backet wiegt zehn Pfund, the parcel weighs ten pounds. Die Mauer ist zwanzig Fuß hoch, the wall is twenty feet high. Das Mädchen ist zmolf Jahr alt, the girl is twelve years old.

II. THE GENITIVE.

§ 346. The following transitive verbs govern the accusative of the person and the genitive of the thing:—

anflagen, to accuse. belehren (eines Bessern), to set right, to correct.
berauben, to deprive.
beschuldigen, to charge with.
entheben, to exempt from.
entledigen, to free from.

überheben, to exempt or excuse from.
verweisen (bes Landes), to banish.
vürbigen, to deign.
zeihen, to accuse.

With the following, either the genitive or the preposition pon is used:—

entsinben, to release from. entslößen, to strip. entsaffen, to dismiss. entsleiben, to divest. entsegen, to depose.

entwöhnen, to disuse. Insfprechen, to acquit. überführen, to convict. überzeugen, to convince. versichern, to assure.

For example: — Man flagte ihn des Gochverraths an, they accused him of high treason. Galilei war bereits feines edelften Sinnes beraubt, Engel, Galileo was then already deprived of his noblest sense. Einer großen Furcht sind mir entledigt, Sch., we are freed from a great fear. Wir waren aller Mittel (or von allen Mitteln) entblößt, we were stripped of all means. Ich bin von seiner Unschuld überzeugt, Sch., I am convinced of his innocence.

```
Ach annehmen, to interest one's fich erfreuen, to enjoy (e. g.— self for.
                                       good health).
" bedienen, to make use of.
                                 " erinnern, to remember.
" befleißen, I to apply one's " erfühnen, to dare.
" befleißigen,
                 self to.
                                 " erwehren, to refrain from.
                                 " freuen, to rejoice.
" begeben, to give up.
" bemächtigen, to take pos" aetrösten, to console one's session of.
                                       self with.
" bemeistern, to seize.
                                 " rübmen, to boast,
                                 " schämen, to be ashamed.
" bescheiden, to acquiesce in.
" besinnen, to recollect.
                                 " unterfangen, ]
" entaugern, to abstain from,
                                 " unterwinden,
                                                  ≻ to dare.
      to renounce.
                                 " vermeffen, " versehen, to be aware of.
" enthalten, to abstain from.
" entschlagen, to get rid of,
                                       to expect.
                                 " wehren, to defend one's to banish (e.g.—cares).
" entstunen, to recollect.
                                       self.
" erbarmen, to take pity on.
                                 " meigern, to refuse.
" erfrechen, to presume.
                                 " wundern, to wonder.

Sich erbarmen, freuen, schämen, wundern, often take the preposition über with the accusative; sich bestunen sometimes takes auf with the accusative, also fid freuen, in the signification 'to anticipate a pleasure.' Examples :- Bohl bem, ber sich bes Dürftigen annimmt, B., blessed is he that considereth the poor. Ich erinnere mich noch aller Umstände, I still remember all circumstances. Die Lastträger warten, bis sich Jemand ihrer bedienen will, G., the porters wait, until some one wishes to make use of them. Sie werben fld des Streits begeben, Sch., they will give up the contest. Dieser Gebanken entschlag' ich mich leicht, G., I easily banish these thoughts. Du ruhmit bich beines fichern Blicks, Sch., thou boastest of thy sure eye. 3ch wundre mich. über seine Gebuld, I wonder at his patience. Erbarme bich unser, or über uns, have mercy upon us.

§ 348. A few impersonal expressions have their object in the genitive; namely—es gelüstet mich, I desire. es reuet w jammert mich, I pity. u sohn:

es reuet mich, I repent.

"Iohnt sich, it is worth.

With es gesuftet mich, the preposition nach is also used. For example:—Ihn janimerte bes Bolfes, B., he was moved with compassion on the multitudes. Es sohnt sich kaum ber Mühe, it is scarcely worth the trouble.

§ 349. The following intransitive verbs govern the genitive :-- adten, to attend to. Adt haben, to heed. bedirfen, to need. begehren, to desire. brauden, to want. entbehren, to dispense with. ermangeln, to be without. ermangeln, to mention. benten, to remember.

genießen, to enjoy.
barren, to wait for.
ladjen, to laugh at.
pflegen, to take care of.
fcbonen, to spare.
potten, to mock at.
verfeblen, to miss.
vergessen, to forget.
wahren,
to take care of.
mahrnehmen,
warten, to attend to.

In common speech, however, the accusative is more generally used with the verbs bedurfen, begehren, brauchen, entbehren, ermähnen, genießen, pflegen, schonen, verfehlen, vergeffen, wahrenehmen; the preposition auf with the accusative after achten, Ucht haben, and harren; fiber with the accusative after lachen and spotten; an with the accusative after benfen. Examples:—Denfet nicht bes Irrthums meiner Jugend, Sch., oh think not of the error of my youth. Genieße nun bes Werfs, das uns erfreut, G., enjoy now the work which delights us. Ihrer Dienste fann ich entrathen, Sch., I can dispense with their services. Das Wenige, bessen, bessen, giebt das Land saft überall im Uebersung, bessen bestullt which man necessarily requires, the country (Italy) yields almost everywhere in abundance. Er pflegt seiner Gesundheit, he takes care of his health.

Note.

The genitive occurs also in some peculiar expressions; as—ich lebe ber Hoffnung, I live in the hope; Sungers sterben, to die of hunger; eines genaltsamen Tobes sterben, to die a violent death; bes Tobes verbleichen, to expire, and others. When the verb sein is connected with the genitive, it signifies possession, 'to belong to;'e. g.—Wessen if that Haus?—Das Haus if meines Herrn bes Katsers, Sch., whose is that house?—The house belongs to my lord the emperor. Die Erre ist bes Herrn, B., the earth is the Lord's.

§ 350. The following adjectives govern the genitive:-

ansichtig (werden), getting sight of. bebürftig, in want of. benöthigt, in need of. bewußt, conscious. eingebenf, mindful. fähig, capable. froh, glad. gewahr, aware, sensible. gewärtig, in expectation of. gewiß, certain. gewohnt, accustomed. habhaft (werden), getting possession of. fundia, acquainted with a thing.

ledig, void. leer, empty. los, free, quit. machtig, master of. müde, tired. fatt, satiated, sick of. fchulbig, guilty. theilhaft, partaking in. theilhaftig, s überdrüffig, weary of. verbächtig, suspected. verluftig, losing, forfeiting. voll, full. werth, worth. würdig, worthy.

With gemahr, gewohnt, Io8, mübe, fatt, voll, and werth, the accusative is now more commonly employed; the accusative is also in use with anfiditig; the preposition von with gemiß, leer, and voll; zu with fähig; über with the accusative with froh. Examples:—Als er mein anfiditig ward, Sch., when he got sight of me. Des Gefühls nicht mächtig, stand ich da, Sch., no longer master of my feelings, I stood there. Ich bin des Wegs nicht fundig, Sch., I am not acquainted with the road. Es ift nicht der Rede werth, it is not worth mentioning. Das Buch ift feinen Thaler werth, the book is not worth a dollar. Die Stude ist voll Rauch, the room is full of smoke. Ich bin es nicht gewohnt, I am pot accustomed to it. Boll von Feinden ist die Welt, Sch., the world is full of enemies

Note

Bull is used with the accusative only when the object has no attribute; as—ein Becher well Bein, a cup full of wine. Bull Unwillen sprang ich auf, Lessing, full of anger I sprang up. In this case vell often takes the termination er; as—voller Freude, full of joy; mit Augen voller Jorn, with eyes full of anger. When the object has an attribute, the genitive must be used; as—des Hilgers Scele war voll füßer Hoffnung, Kr., the pilgrim's soul was full of sweet hope.

III. THE DATIVE.

§ 351. All transitive verbs which, besides the direct object of the thing acted upon, require or admit of an indirect or remote object of the person, have the latter in the dative case. (See § 338.)

§ 352. The dative is further governed by the following simple intransitive verbs:—

antworten (Jemanbem), to answer (a person). banken, to thank. dienen, to serve. broken, to threaten. fehlen, to be wanting. fluchen, to curse. folgen, to follow. fröhnen, to humour. gebühren, to be due. gefallen, to please. miffallen, to displease. achoren, to belong. gehorchen, to obey. gelingen, } to succeed. glücken, genügen, to suffice. gereichen, to tend, redound to.

gleichen, to resemble. grollen, to bear a grudge. helfen, to help. hulbigen, to do homage. lauschen, to listen to. mangeln, to be wanting. nahen, to come near. nügen, to be useful. schaden, to injure. Scheinen, to seem. fcmeicheln, to flatter. ftehen, to suit, become. steuern, to put a stop to (e. q.—an abuse). trauen, to trust. tropen, to defy. weichen, to yield. gienien,) to be proper, to geziemen, f become.

Examples :- Sind bas unfere Freunde, bie unfern gaftern bienen? Sch., are those our friends, who administer to our vices? Gefährtin meiner Stimme, komm, folge mir in's Schattenreich, A. W. Schlegel, companion of my voice, come, follow me into the realm of shades. Dem Muthigen hilft Gott, Sch., God helps the courageous. Keine Kraft vermag der Zeit zu trozen, Platen, no power can bid defiance to time.

§ 353. A great number of compound verbs govern the dative case, especially many compounded with the inseparable prefixes er, ent, wiber, and with the separable prefixes an, auf. bei, entaggen, nach, vor, voran, vorans, zu, zuvor. The following may serve as specimens:—erliegen, to succumb; entgeben, to escape; widerstehen, to resist; anliegen, to entreat; auflauern, to waylay; beisteben, to assist; entgegengeben, to go to meet; nachaeben, to yield: porsteben, to superintend, preside; porangeben, to precede; zuhören, to listen to; zuvorkommen, to prevent, &c. Also the following three with the prefix be:begegnen, to meet; behagen, to please (e. g.—es behagt mir); befommen, to agree with (e. q. -es befommt mir nicht). Examples :- Dem feelenlofen Riefel entspringt ber Funte, Platen, from the lifeless flint springs forth the spark. bem Mörder nach, Sch., pursue the murderer. Ich fühle ce, baf ich ber Lehre von ber Unsterblichkeit nicht wibersprechen fann, Mendelssohn, I feel that I cannot contradict the doctrine of immortality. Ich fdrieb es meiner Stimmung zu, G., I ascribed it to my frame of mind.

§ 354. The dative is further employed with many compound verbal expressions which have the force of simple verbs; as—leib thun, to cause sorrow; wehe thun, to give pain; wohl thun, to benefit; fund thun, to make known; Hohn sprechen, to scorn; zu Hülse fommen, to come to one's aid; bas Wort reben, to excuse; ben Hof machen, to pay court; zu Theil werben (or simply werben), to fall to one's share, and others. Examples:—Go thut mir leid um ihn, I feel sorry for him. Wer wird uns zu Hülse fommen? who will come to our aid? The ward ber Schönheit eitles Gut zu Theil, Sch., the vain possession of beauty has fallen to her share.

§ 255. The following impersonal phrases govern the dative of the person in whom the feeling exists which is implied in the verb:—

```
es ahnt mir, I forebode.

"bunft mir, } methinks.

"grauet mir, I am afraid.
"bangt mir, I feel anxious.

With es bunft and es baught the accusative is also used.
```

With es buntt and es baucht the accusative is also used. (See § 303.)

§ 356. A large number of adjectives govern the dative, as in English; especially the following:—

ähnlich, similar.
angemessen, appropriate.
angemessen, appropriate.
betannt, known.
betannt, known.
bemusst, conscious.
eigen, peculiar.
fremb, strange.
gemein, gemeinsan,
gemeinst, inclined.
gewogen, favourable.
gewochsen, equal to, a match
for.
gleich, like.

gnäbig, gracious.
heilfant, salutary.
hold, favourable.
abhold, unfavourable.
läftig, troublesome.
lieh, dear.
nahe, near.
fchulbig, owing.
treu, faithful.
überlegen, superior.
verhaßt, odious.
vermandt, related.
wibrig, adverse,
willfommen, welcome;

and many others derived from verbs which govern the dative; as—gehorsam, folgsam, obedient (from gehorshen, folgen); nüglich, useful (from nügen); schülsich, injurious (from schaben); behülslich, helpful (from helsen); bienlich, serviceable (from bienen), &c. Examples:—Er ist seinem Bruber ähnlich, he is like his brother. Die Sprache ist mir remb, the language is unknown to me. Das Glück ist ihm nicht hold, fortune is not favourable to him. Die Raupen sind ben Bäumen schäblich, caterpillars are injurious to the trees.

§ 357. An idiomatic peculiarity of the German language consists in the use of the dative of a substantive instead of the possessive genitive, or of the dative of a personal or reflective pronoun instead of a possessive pronoun. For example:—Dem Muhamedaner siesen endlich die Schuppen von den Augen, the scales fell at length from the Mohammedan's eyes. Sie schuitten dem Feinde den Rückzug ab, they cut off the enemy's retreat. Bei jedem Abschied zittert nir das Herz, Sch., at every parting my heart trembles. Der Kopf thut nir weh, my head aches. Sie sanken ihm zu Küßen, they sank down at his feet.

§ 358. The dative is frequently joined to verbs, the meaning of which does not require a completing object, merely to point out the personal relation in which the predicate is in a particular case to be considered : e. g. - Frei ift bem Wan= berex ber Weg, Sch., free is the road for the wanderer. Soll ber Freund mir, ber liebende, sterben? Sch., shall the friend, the loving one, die (to me)? In this way the dative of the personal pronoun of the first and second persons is sometimes used, to denote in a familiar manner an interest or participation of feeling on the part of the person speaking or spoken to. This kind of dative is sometimes called the ethical dative; in general, it cannot be translated in English. For example :- Ift's auch gewiß? Bift bu mir unverlett? Sch., is it really true? art thou unhurt (for me)? Ihr Sarf. ner, wer weiß mir bas schönste Lieb? U., you harpers, who knows the finest tune (for me)? Wir waren bir febr peranuat. we were very happy.

IV. PREPOSITIONS.

§ 359. The object of verbs as well as adjectives is often expressed by means of prepositions. We can give here only a general sketch of the most common objective relations in which prepositions occur, while the minor details must be acquired by the attentive reading of German authors.

1. Verbs.—Separation or privation is expressed by non with the dative.

Speaking, or hearing of something, by von with the dative.

Fear, by por with the dative.

Dominion or victory, by über with the accusative.

Vexation, sorrow, joy, and wonder, by über with the accusative.

Delight, by an with the dative.

Want, by an with the dative.

Doubt, by an with the dative.

Remembrance, by an with the accusative.

Loss, by um with the accusative.

Begging or entreating, by unt with the accusative.

Longing and inquiring after, by nady with the dative.

Confidence or hope, as well as suspicion or envy, by auf with the accusative.

2. Adjectives.—Bon with the dative is used with frei, free; rein, pure; fchön, beautiful; häßlich, ugly, &c.

an with the dative with arm, poor; reid, rich; groß, great; flein, small; franf, sick; leer, empty; flarf, strong; fchmach, weak; fruchtbar, fertile, and others.

in with the dative with geschickt, skilled; erfahren, experienced; bewandert, versed; einfady, simple, and others.

por with the dative with bange, afraid; ficher, secure, &c. auf with the accusative with eiferfüchtig, jealous; neibifch, envious; aranophnisch, suspicious; böse, angry; stolz, prouces

XXXIX.

THE OBJECT EXPRESSED BY A CLAUSE, OR BY THE SUPINE, OR THE INFINITIVE.

§ 360. The completing object of the predicate (verb or adjective) of a sentence is, like the subject, often expressed by a whole clause. As such a clause stands in the place of a noun, it is termed, like that which stands in the place of the subject, a substantive clause, and is of course of a dependent kind. Examples:—Sever Schrift bes Lebens zeigt, bag bie

Mugheit nothig set, G., every step in life shews that prudence is necessary. Entscheide du, ob Arieg set over Friede, Sch., decide thou, whether there shall be war or peace. Wer ste set, will ste allein dem König offendaren, Sch., who she is, she will disclose to the king alone. Sie sehren une, was wir thun sollten, Sch., they teach us, what we ought to do. Sie sagt mir stets, ich sei ihr Feind, Sch. (that is, daß ich ihr Feind sei, the conjunction daß being suppressed according to § 314, 1), she always tells me that I am her enemy.

§ 361. The supine, too, is often used as in English, to express the object of a sentence; e. g.—er hofft sie zu besitzen, he hopes to possess her. In erinnere mich, ihn vor einigen Wochen geschen zu haben, I remember to have seen him a sew weeks ago. Er warnte mich, auf meiner Hut zu sein, he warned me to be upon my guard. Ich bin bereit zu sterben, I am ready to die.

§ 362. If the verb or adjective, upon which the objective clause or the supine depends, be one which governs the accusative, the place of the object in the principal clause is frequently supplied by the neuter pronounce. For example: Die That bewährt es, daß sie Wahrheit spricht, Sch., the deed proves (it), that she speaks the truth. Wer magt es, Ritter mann ober Knapp, zu tauchen in diesen Schlund? Sch., who ventures, knight or squire, to dive into this gulf? 3th mar es mube, immer weise zu sein, I was tired of being always wise. Ich bin es mir bewußt, meine Pflicht gethan zu haben, I am conscious of having done my duty. But if the verb or adjective be followed by a preposition, the latter is joined to the demonstrative adverb ba or bar, as in bazu, bamit, barin, baran, barauf, &c., and is in this form made to precede the dependent clause, in the same way as the neuter pronoun es. For example :- Dieine Frau bestand barauf, daß fle Olivia genannt werden sollte, my wife insisted upon her being called Olivia. Ich begnügte mich bamit, die Gefahr nur eben angebeutet zu haben, I was satisfied with just having pointed out the Die Abberiten waren ftolz barauf, für bas thragische Uthen gehalten zu werben, Wieland, the inhabitants of Abdera were proud of being considered as the Athenians of Thrace. Participial constructions like those in the preceding English sentences are never used in German.

§ 363. The construction of the accusative with the infinitive, so frequently met with in Latin and Greek, and imitated by the English also, is quite foreign to the German language. It must be turned into a regular sentence introduced by daß; as—I wish him to go directly, ich wünsche, daß er sogleich gehe. Surely you do not wish me to break my word, ihr wollt doch nicht, daß ich wortbrüchig werden soll. I knew it to be my duty, ich wußte, daß es meine Bflicht war.

§ 364. The English often give to sentences containing an indirect question a contracted form; as-'He did not know what to say; or, 'he knew not what way to go;' or, 'I will shew thee how to proceed.' A similar mode of expression is very rarely met with in German. In translating the above examples, therefore, the contracted clauses, 'what to say,' 'what way to go,' 'how to proceed,' must be changed into regular dependent clauses, with a subject and a finite verb; namely-er wußte nicht, was er fagen follte; er mußte nicht, welchen Weg er nehmen follte; ich will dir zeigen, wie du zu verfahren baft. However, if the verb be 'to know,' and the dependent clause begin with 'how,' the latter may be drawn into the same clause with the verb 'to know,' the interrogative adverb wing omitted; as-Ihr wiffet eure Urt zu führen, Sch., you know how to wield your battle-axe. Diener, die einen stummen Auftrag zu deuten missen, Sch., servants who know how to understand a silent commission. Wiffe nur bas Glud zu fassen, wenn es lachelnd bir fich beut, Geibel, know only how to lay hold of fortune, when it smilingly offers itself to thee.

§ 365. The infinitive (without zu) occurs as the object after the following verbs only:—heißen, to bid; nennen, to call; helßen, to help; lehren, to teach; lernen, to learn; machen, to make. For example:—Geiß ihn gehen, bid him go away. Gilß mir arbeiten, help me to work. Ruhm und Tabel muß man ertragen lernen, G., one must learn to bear both praise and censure. Ich habe in England mich, an viel gewöhnen lernen, Sch., I have learned in England to accustom myself to many things. Ihr macht mich zittern, Sch., you make me tremble.

1. The infinitive is used also with the verbs horen, to hear; sehen, to see; fuhlen, to feel; sincen, to find; haben, to have. Here, however, it does not stand in the place of an object of the verb itself, but it indicates what the object is engaged in doing at the time to which the assertion refers. The infinitive therefore here has the force of the present participle. Examples:—Samonien hor id, flingen, Sch., I hear harmonies sound (or sounding). 3d fah ihn sterben, Sch., I saw him die. 3d fühle bein herz sch, acen, I feel thy heart beating. Autora sam mid sch seen, G., Aurora sound me sleeping. Er hat ein Amuset am Salse hangen, he has an amulet hanging about his neck.

2. The infinitive is further used with the intransitive verbs bleiben, to remain; gehen, to go; reiten, to ride; fahren, to drive; but with these it only indicates the manner in which the action is performed, and likewise stands for the present participle; e. g.—ich merte stehen bleiben, I shall remain standing; cr geht spazieren, he goes to walk, or he walks leisurely. In most phrases of this kind, however, both verbs must be conceived as expressing only one idea; as—ich ging sagen, I went to hunt, or I was hunting; cr geht bettein, he goes a-begging, or he begs; wir modlen spazieren sahren, we will take a drive. With the verb sommen, the past participle has the same force—Da sommt ein Mann in voller has gelausen, Sch., there comes a man running at full speed. Da sam bet Bogt mit seinen Reisigen geritten, Sch., there came the governor riding (or on horseback) with his troopers.

B. ADVERBIAL EXPRESSION.

XL.

RELATIONS OF PLACE AND TIME.

§ 366. The place or direction of an asserted action is expressed by adverbs, or prepositions, or adverbial clauses; e.g.—ich fitche hier, I stand here. Er eilt fort, he hurries away. Einen goldnen Becher werf ich hinab, Sch., I throw down a golden cup. Er hat zu Bonn fludirt, he studied at Bonn. Sie fam auß der Kirche, she came from church. Sch wohne, wo er gewohnt hat, I live where he has lived. It is the chief function of most prepositions to indicate relations of place; see chapter XXI.

Note.

The cases of declension by themselves are used only in some particular phrases to express locality; namely, the genitive in aller Orten, everywhere; sinker Hand, on the left; rechter Hand, on the right, &c.; and sometimes the accusative; e. g.—4wei Wanterer sieht er die Straße giehn, Sch., he sees two wanderers travel along the road.

§ 367. When a whole clause points out the place of an asserted action, it is introduced by the relative adverb mo, where, or by one of its compounds, moher, whence; mohin, whither. The relative adverb in the dependent clause refers to a corresponding demonstrative (ba, bort, hier, baher, bahin) in the principal, but the latter is frequently omitted. For example:—Die größten Schwierigkeiten liegen ba, mo mir ste nicht suchen, G., the greatest difficulties lie there where we do not seek them. We die Reben bort glühen, bort braust ber Mhein, Körner, yonder where the vines are glowing, yonder roars the Rhine. Sie mird gerichtet, mo ste frevelte, Sch., she will be judged where she did wrong. Gehen Sie, Gras, mohin die Pflicht Sie rust, Sch., go, count, whither duty calls you.

EXERCISE LXVII.

Wait here. There he stood. Run thither. Come down stairs.¹ She ran away. The ship is sailing eastward.² The amphibia³ live equally⁴ well in the air as in the water. He stopped⁵ before this house. I am sending a parcel to Bremen. The owner⁶ of the house sat upon a wooden⁷ bench in a thick⁸ arbour⁹ of vines.¹⁰ He led me into his granaries.¹¹ Where smoke¹² is, there is also fire. Not everywhere¹³ where water is, are frogs; ¹⁴ but where one hears frogs, there is water. Go whither you please. He goes [thither], from where we have come.

Down stairs, herunter.
 Eastward, oftwarts.
 Amphibia, Amphibien.
 Equally, chenso.
 To stop, anhalten.
 Owner, Eigenthümer.
 Wooden, hölgern.
 Thick, bicht.
 Arbour, Laube.
 Vine, Weinrebe.
 Granary, Speicher.
 Smoke, Rauch.
 Everywhere, überall.
 Frog, Frosch.

§ 368. The relation of time of an asserted action is expressed by adverbs, prepositions, the cases of the substantive, or adverbial sentences.

The following prepositions are used to express the point of time when an action is performed:—an with the dative, on—am ersten Mai, on the first of May.

um, at, about—um vier Uhr, at four o'clock; um bie Mittagestunde, about the hour of noon.

gegen, towards-gegen vier Uhr, towards four o'clock.

in with the dative, in, at-in biefem Angenblicke, at this moment.

binnen and innerhalb, within—binnen brei Tagen, within three days; innerhalb eines Sahrhunderts, within or in the course of a century.

bei, at-bei Sonnenuntergang, at sunset.

auf with the accusative, at—auf ben Glodenichiag, at the stroke of the bell; auf die Minute, at the minute.

zu, at-zu Oftern, at Easter.

vor with the dative, before, ago—vor Mitternacht, before midnight; vor vei Iahren, three years ago.

nach, after-nach bem Kriege, after the war.

über with the accusative—heute über acht Tage, this day eight days.

The following prepositions express a duration of time, or the period during which an action is performed:—

in with the dative, in-in einem gangen Iahre, during a whole year.

während, during-mährend bes Religionsfrieges, during the religious war.

unter with the dative, under, in—unter ver Regierung Karls des Fünften, under or in the reign of Charles the Fifth, seit, since—feit Menschenken, since the memory of man.

bis, till—bis morgen, till to-morrow; bis zum Abend, till the evening.

auf with the accusative, for—auf brei Woden, for three weeks (to come), for the space of three weeks.

§ 369. The point of time of the predicated action is further expressed by the accusative or genitive; by the latter more especially when the action is conceived as an habitual or often repeated one, or when the point of time is to be indicated in an indefinite way; e.g.—er flarb biefen Morgen, he died this morning; ben erften Juli, on the first of July. 3th lese died this morning; ben erften Juli, on the first of July. 3th lese died this morning; hen erften Juli, on the first of July. 3th lese died this Mirche, we go to church on Sundays; er fam eined Tages zu mir, he came to me one day; heutiges Tages, now-a-days.

Duration of time, on the other hand, is pointed out by the accusative only, not by the genitive; e.g.—Der Herzog ift schon einige Monate abwesend, G., the duke has been away for some months. Ich blieb eine ganze Woche hier, I remained here a whole week. The accusative in this signification is often followed by the adverb lang (as in the English 'all day long'), sometimes by über or hindurch; e.g.—Ich hade Iahre lang mich darauf vordereitet, Sch., I have been preparing mysloff for it for years. Durch die Zeitungen sind Sie diesen Wonat über genugsam an und erinnert worden, G., during the present month you have been pretty often reminded of us by the newspapers. Die ganze Nacht hindurch, all night long.

§ 370. Adverbial clauses of time are introduced by the following conjunctions:—als, ba, as, when; wenn, when; sobalb (als), as soon as (also so wie, or wie in the same sense); nachbem, after; the or bevor, before; wahrend, indess, indessen, indem (sometimes weil) whilst, while; seithem or seit, since; bis, sometimes bis das, till.

Notes

- 1. With regard to the first three of these conjunctions, it should be observed, that all is used when the time of an action is pointed out by a single definite past event; but that menn is employed when the time is pointed out by some indefinite or habitual occurrence, either in the past, or in the present, or in the future. Do generally denotes causality, but is often used as a synonym of als, especially if the occurrence which it introduces not only determines the time, but at the same time points out the cause of the action. For example :- 218 ich meinen Freund besuchte, fant ich ihn frant, when I called upon my friend, I found him ill. Wenn ber Frühling beginnt, febren bie Schwalben zurud, when spring begins, the swallows return. Sonft, menn ber Bater auszog, liebe Rinter, ba mar ein Freuen, wenn er wiebertam, Sch., formerly when your father went from home, dear children, there was rejoicing when he returned. Dem Raifer felbst versagten wir Gehorsam, ba er bas Recht zu Buuft ber Pfaffen bog, Sch., to the emperor himself we refused obedience, as he bent the law (that is, gave judgment) in favour of the clergy. In the last example, to denotes both time and cause.
- 2. The English 'no sooner ... than,' or 'scarcely ... than,' is expressed by faum (in the protasis) ... als (in the apodosis), the latter being a dependent clause. But more frequently the apodosis is made to begin with so, and put in the inverted order, because als can be used only in regard to a definite event in past time. For example:—Der Zag war faum angebrochen, als ich mich auf ten Beg begab, or so begab ich mich auf ben Beg, no sooner had the day dawned, than I set out on the way. Raum haben wir einen Bunsch erreicht, so machen wir Unschläge auf neue Bernügungen, no sooner have we attained a wish, than we make projects for new enjoyments.

§ 371. Adverbial clauses of time in English often take the form of participial constructions. As the Germans seldom adopt this mode of expression, such participial constructions must generally be changed into regular sentences, with a conjunction and a finite verb. For example:—After having given his troops a day of rest, he continued his march, nach= bem er feinen Truppen einen Rubetag gegeben hatte, fette er feinen Marich fort. While speaking with me, he turned as pale as death, mahrend er mit mir rebete, wurde er leichen= blag. I wrote an epitaph for my wife when still living, ich schrieb eine Grabschrift für meine Frau, als sie noch am Leben war. Before leaving town, I shall call upon you, ehe ich bie Stadt verlaffe, werde ich Sie befuchen. I believed to promote the best interests of all, by strengthening the power of the emperor, bas Befte Aller glaubt' ich zu befordern, ba ich bes Raifers Macht befestigte, Sch.

Of the same nature are such elliptical clauses as—'when at Rome, I met with several friends,' or 'while very young, he was taught reading'—in German, als ich in Rom war, (or simply in Rom) traf ich mehrere Breunde; als er noch sehr jung war, (or in früher Kindheit) lernte er lesen.

§ 372. The participle, however, is sometimes employed in German, when an action, which is represented as contemporaneous with the predicate, is joined to the latter, but without serving the purpose of a determination of time. Examples :- Dies alles bei mir bentenb, schlief ich ein, Sch., thinking over all this, I fell asleep (that is, I thought over all this and fell asleep). Baudernb ftehn bie Diener alle, Kerner, hesitating stand all the servants (that is, all the servants stand and hesitate). Wir Schwestern fagen, die Wolle spinnend, in ben langen Nächten, Sch., we sisters sat in the long evenings, spinning wool (that is, we were sitting and spinning wool). In common prose, this relation is generally expressed by the conjunction intem (sometimes by ba) and a finite verb; as-Indem er fich auf fle ftutte, fam er bie Treppe langiant herauf, G., leaning upon her, he slowly came up the stair. Du fprichft mein Urtheil aus, ba bu mich trofteft, thou pronouncest my sentence, while thou consolest me.

Note.

When the simultaneousness of two actions is to be denied, ohne bag is used with a finite verb, or ohne with a supine, the latter, however, only when the principal and dependent clauses have the same subject. For example:—3th reiste at, ohne daß Remand etwas davon wußte, I set out, without anybody knowing anything about it. Sth schief ein, ohne an etwas ju benfen, I fell asleep, without thinking of anything. Were the Gottheir um fulfe anruft, ohne tie eigene Krast anzumenden, slehet vergebens, Kr., whoever calls upon the Godhead for help, without using his own strength, calls in vain.

§ 373. A past participle is often joined to the predicate of a sentence, to denote the state or condition in which the subject is while performing, or the object while suffering, the action implied in the predicate; e. g .- wir ftanben erstaunt, we stood amazed. Ich fab bich gestern reich geputt zu Tische figen, I saw thee yesterday sitting at table richly attired. The past participle is sometimes connected with an accusative-Sie fingt hinaus in Die finftere Nacht, bas Auge von Weinen getrübet, Sch., she sings into the dark night, her eyes (being) dimmed with weeping. Da finft er an's Ufer, und weint und fleht, die Sande zum Beus erhoben, Sch., then he sinks down upon the bank (of the river) and weeps and prays, (with) his hands raised to Jupiter. Endlich bleibter . gebankenvoll fteben, bie Augen zur Erbe gefenkt, Sch., at last he stands still thoughtful, (with) his eyes fixed on the ground.

Note.

In elliptical clauses of this kind, the accusative, when accompanied by an adverbial expression of place, is sometimes governed by a present participle which is not expressed, but must be supplied, such as 'having' or 'holding'; e.g.—Die Sand am Schwerte, schauen sie sich trobend an, Sch., (having) the hand upon the sword, they look at each other threateningly. Ulle, Thank on in ten Augen, sichen um Barmhergigsteit, Herder, all. (with) tears in their eyes, ask for mercy.

XLI.

RELATIONS OF MANNER AND INTENSITY.

§ 374. The adverbial relation of manner is expressed by adverbs, by prepositions, by the genitive case, or by adverbial sentences. Adverbs of manner, for instance, are—$\infty$, so; wie, how; ander$, differently; laut, loudly; fthnell, quickly; reithlith, abundantly, &c., on which see the chapter on adverbs. The adverbs fehr, very, very much; faum, scarcely, ungemein, uncommonly; fast, almost, denote the intensity of an action.

The following prepositions are chiefly employed to express the manner of an action:—mit, with; ohne, without; auf, upon, with the accusative of Art, or Weise, or with the dative of Weg, way, manner, or with a superlative; an, on, at, with a superlative; nach, after, according to (also gemäß); and zu in a few phrases. For example:—Den Landmann stehst du mit Berachtung an, Sch., thou regardest the peasant with contempt. Er spricht mit lauter Stimme, he speaks with a loud voice. Er wurde ohne Schonung versolgt, he was unsparingly persecuted. Wir dienen ihm auf unfre Weise, wo serve him in our own way. Auf diesem Wege habe ich in Ersahrung gebracht, in this way I have learned. Ich habe es auf's genauste untersucht, I have examined it most minutely. Er schreibt am besten, he writes best. Last unstagen nach den alten Bräuchen des Landes, Sch., let us hold the diet according to the ancient customs of the land. Er reist zu Vuße, zu Pferde, zu Lande, &c., he travels on soot, on horseback, by land, &c.

The genitive case was formerly more commonly used to express the relation of manner than it now is; it is still retained, however, in some expressions of daily use, and is of frequent occurrence in the higher style of writing. For example:—Ich habe ihn alles Ernstes ermahnt, I have admonished him most earnestly. Nach Uri fabr' ich ftebenben Fußes, Sch., I shall go to Uri immediately; in Latin stante pede. Richt leichten Rampfes flegt ber Glaube, Körner. faith does not conquer by an easy fight. See also § 240, 2, c. § 375. The manner of an action is expressed by an adverbial clause, if it is described by a comparison with some other action, or by the effect which attends it, as in English 'he speaks as he thinks,' and 'he speaks so that everybody can understand him.' In the former case, the adverbial clause is introduced by the conjunction wie, as, if it involve a real fact, and by als ob or als wenn, as if, if it involve a merely assumed or a possible fact. The latter conjunctions are followed by the conditional or conjunctive mood (§ 315, 4). In both cases, the principal clause may have the adverb fo (or also), which, however, is very often suppressed. For example :- Er spricht so, wie er benft, he speaks as he thinks. Wie sich die Neigung anders wendet, also steigt und fällt des Urtheils wandelbare Woge, Sch., as inclination turns another way, so rises and falls the inconstant wave of popular opinion. Thut, als menn ihr zu Sause waret, G., do as if you were at home. Er sieht aus, als ob er in der Ueberzeugung lebe, er sei herr, G., he looks, as if he lived in the conviction that he was master. The second part of the conjunctions als menn, als ob, is sometimes dropped, and the clause put in the inverted form; e. q.—Es scheint, als mosse Seber bas große Fest mitgenießen, G., it appears, as if every one wished to join in the enjoyment of the great seast.

§ 376. The intensity as well as the manner of a state or action can be expressed by a comparison with another action mentioned in an adverbial clause. The equality of two compared activities is indicated in the dependent clause by als, which corresponds with so in the principal clause; or if the dependent clause precede the principal one, by so in both; in English 'as...as.' For example:—Er ift so reich, als er zu sein wünscht, he is as rich as he wishes to be. So hod; er stand, so tief und schmählich sei seth. Sall, Sch., as high as he stood, as deep and disgraceful be his fall.

An equal gradation of both activities is indicated by je in the dependent, and besto (sometimes je) in the principal clause; in English 'the...the,' with two comparatives. For example:—Is mehr ber Borrath schmolz, besto schrecklicher wuchs ber Hunger, the more the provisions diminished, the more fearfully did hunger increase. Is reiner die Seele (ift), desto himmlischer (ift) die Liche, Kr., the purer the soul is, the more heavenly is the love. Is mehr eine Wahrheit stickt, je besser wird sie gesühlt, J. Müller, the more cutting a truth is, the better is it selt.

The inequality of two compared states or actions is indicated by a comparative in the principal, and als in the dependent clause; e. g.—Ich hatte mehr zu leiden, als meine Kräfte ertragen zu können schienen, I had more to suffer, than my strength seemed able to bear. Sein Glück war größer, als man berechnet hatte, his luck was greater than people had calculated.

Note.

In the relation of manner as well as in that of intensity, the dependent clause often has an incomplete form, the verb being understood from the principal clause; e. g.—Ou reveft vic ein Kräumender (understand retet), thou speakest as one (speaks) who is dreaming. Gine schone Natur wirst auf uns vic eine schone Matur wirst auf uns vic eine schone Matur wirst less us eine schone Matur wirst less with the senery affects us as a beautiful tune (affects us), or like a beautiful tune. Er ist so etal als reich, he is as generous as (he is) rich. Nichts ist höher zu schohen, als der Werth des Kages, G., nothing is to be esteemed higher than the value of time (is to be esteemed). Similar contractions occur also in concessive and other sentences; e. g.—Sie gleichen sich, wiewohl in schr entsernen Sinus, they resemble each other, although in a very remote sense.

§ 377. When the manner of an action is determined by the effect it produces, the dependent clause has the conjunction bag, which corresponds with the adverb so in the principal clause; e. g.—er spricht fo, daß ihn Jeder verfteben fann, he speaks so, that everybody can understand him.

The same construction is employed in the relation of intensity, when the intensity is represented as in an equal relation with the effect really produced; in English 'so ... that,' or 'so . . . as to.' For example :- So verabscheut ift die Thrannet, daß fle kein Werkzeug findet, Sch., tyranny is so much abhorred, that it finds no tool. Ich war fo heifer, baß ich keinen einzigen Son hervorbringen konnte, I was so hoarse, as to be unable to utter a single sound.

But when the intensity is represented as in an unequal relation with the effect which is only assumed to be produced, the dependent clause is introduced by als bag, which corresponds to zu, too, placed before an adjective or adverb in the principal clause, the verb in the dependent clause being in the conditional; e.g. - Das Berg ber Königin war zu groß, als daß fie mit ihren Wohlthaten bei ihrem Lande fteben geblieben ware, Hauff, the heart of the queen was too large for her to confine her benefits to her own country. The dependent clause, however, can in this case be abridged into a construction with a supine, with or without um, the conjunction als being omitted; e. g.—Er ift zu ehrlich, um eine Umrahrheit zu sagen, he is too honest to say a falsehood. Er war zu febr Barbar, um eine fcone That zu ehren, Pfeffel, he was too much of a barbarian to honour a noble action.

XLII.

RELATIONS OF CAUSE AND PURPOSE.

- § 378. The adverbial determination indicating the cause or purpose of a predicated state or action, is expressed by prepositions, or by adverbial clauses.
- 1. A real cause is expressed by the following prepositions: - von, vor with the dative, vermone indicate the active cause of an effect suffered by the subject; burdy and permittelft indicate the means which produces an effect; auß and bon indicate the material of which anything is made, For example :- Die Fluffe schwellen von dem Regen, the rivers are swelling from the rain. Sie weinen por Schmerz und por Freude, Sch., they weep for pain and joy. Ein Stein fällt vermoge feiner Schwere zu Boben, a stone falls to the ground by reason of its weight. Durch falfches Zeugniß glaubt' er fich zu retten, Sch., through a false evidence he believes to save Vermittelft ber geheimen Verständnisse hoffte ber Bergog die Städte zu erschöpfen, Sch., by means of the secret uaderstandings the duke hoped to exhaust the towns. Er fertigt seine Bildsäulen aus Marmor, he makes his statues of marble. Von schönem Stammholz ift bas Saus gezimmert, Sch., the house is built of fine timber.
- 2. A moral ground or motive is indicated by the prepositions auß, wegen, halber or halben, um ... willen. For example:—Er hilft ben Urmen auß Barmherzigkeit, he helps the poor from charity. Er reis't seiner Gesundheit wegen nach Italien, he goes to Italy on account of his health. Er thut es der Ehre halber, he does it for the sake of honour. Um meiner Ruhe willen erklären Sie sich beutlicher, for the sake of my peace explain yourself.
- 3. A logical ground—that is, a cause by which a person derives some knowledge, or is enabled to form an opinion—is expressed by auß, an with the dative, nach, gemäß, zufolge, laut. For example:—Ich weiß es auß Erfahrung, auß ber Beitung, I know it from experience, from the newspaper. Un ihren Früchten sollt ihr ste erfennen, B., ye shall know them by their fruits. Mein Schwert, ich fenr's am guten

Mang, U., my sword, I know it by the good sound. Das ift nach seiner Haltung ein Solbat, that is a soldier by his bearing.

- 4. A possible ground—that is, a ground on the realisation of which the reality of the effect is made to depend—is expressed by the preposition bei. For example:—Bei großer Sommerhite werben bie Trauben füß, with great heat of summer (that is, if the heat of summer is great) the grapes become sweet.
- 5. The real as well as the moral ground is called an adversative ground, when it is contrary to the reality of the predicate. It is expressed by wider, sunder, ungeachtet, trots, sometimes bei. For example:—Er ift wider meinen Willen hergefommen, he has come here against my will. Ungeachtet ber Dunfelheit der Nacht fanden wir den Weg, notwithstanding the darkness of the night we found our way. Er machte sich trots der heftigen Kälte auf den Weg, he set out on his way in spite of the intense cold. Bei aller ihrer Sparsamseit wurden wir doch nicht reicher, we never grew richer with all her contrivances.
- 6. A purpose—that is, the intended effect of an action—is expressed by the preposition zu. For example:—Er [isf't zur Unterhaltung der Geschschaft ein Buch vor, he is reading a book for the entertainment of the company. Was founten wir zu seiner Nettung wagen? Sch., what could we venture to do for his deliverance?

But when the purpose of an activity is the advantage or disadvantage of a person, or of an object conceived as a person, the former is indicated by für, sometimes um... willen, the latter by wider or gegen. For example:—Er familielt Geld für die Armen, he collects money for the poor. Eltern arbeiten und sparen um ihrer Kinder willen, parents work and save for (the sake of) their children. Ich sterbe für die Freiheit, für die ich lebte und focht, G., I die for the liberty for which I lived and fought. Die Briefe haben wider dieh gezeugt, Sch., the letters have been evidence against thee. Brüder stritten gegen Brüder, brothers fought against brothers.

38 To bend, (baunen. (See § 365.)

§ 379. When an adverbial sentence is employed to indicate the relation of causality, various conjunctions may be used to connect it with the principal clause. Weil expresses both a real and moral cause, and answers to the English 'because,' For the sake of emphasis it is sometimes preceded in the principal clause by one of the adverbial compounds, barum, besivegen, beshalb, meaning 'on this account,' 'for this cause.' Da, on the other hand, indicates a logical cause from which an inference is drawn. It answers to 'as' or 'since.' but is very frequently expressed in English by a participial construction. When the dependent clause beginning with ba or weil precedes the principal one, the latter sometimes commences with fo, the order being inverted. Examples:-Sie weichen einander aus, weil fie keine Freunde find, they avoid each other, because they are no friends. Die Blume schließt ihren Reldy, weil es Abend wird, the flower closes its calyx, because evening draws on. Da er ein Spanier ift, jo muß er die spanische Sprache verstehn, as he is a Spaniard, he must understand the Spanish language. Sie fannte die Welt burchaus, da fie in ihrer Jugend in der Rabe bes Sofes gelebt hatte, she had a thorough knowledge of the world, having lived in her youth about the court. Da ber Raifer einsah, daß er stell auf seine Truppen nicht verlaffen konnte, fo zog er sich ploslich in die Quartiere zurud, the emperor, perceiving that he could not trust his troops, retired abruptly to his quarters. adverb nun is sometimes used instead of ba, but in reference to present time only; e.g. - Nun ich fle bir empfehle, fterb' ich rubig, G., now that I recommend her to you, I die tranquilly.

Some causal relations are expressed by sentences beginning with the conjunction baß, and preceded in the principal clause by one of the adverbial compounds, bavon or baßer, from this; bavand, through or by this; bavand, from this; bavan, by this. The English, in such cases, generally do not employ the conjunction 'that' with a finite verb, but draw both clauses into one, by joining to the preposition 'from' or 'by' the participle of the verb in the dependent clause. Examples:—Sie ist bavon frant geworden, daß sie zu viel Edit gegessen hat, she has become ill from eating too much fruit. Seine Krantheit rühtt daher, daß er zu viel arbeitet, his illness is owing to his studying too much. Er rettete sid dadurch, daß er zum Fenster hinaussprang, he saved himself by springing out of the window. Daß er frank ist, schließe ich daraus, daß er mir nicht geschrieben hat, that he is ill, I inser from his not having written me.

§ 380. Adverbial clauses expressing a purpose take the conjunctions bamit or bag, 'that, in order that,' the verb being put in the conjunctive or conditional (§ 314, 3). For the sake of emphasis, the adverbial compound barum, 'for this purpose,' is sometimes put before the dependent clause containing the purpose. For example :- Er eilt heim mit sorgender Seele, bamit er die Frist nicht verfchle, Sch., ho hastens home with an anxious mind, lest he should fail of the appointed time. Run gerbrecht mir bas Gebaube, baß fich Berg und Auge weibe, Sch., now break the fabric, that heart and eye may delight themselves. Darum bin ich eben porangeeilt, bamit ich euch in Fassung setzen und ermahnen mounte, Sch., for this purpose I have hastened hither, that I might prepare and admonish you. Auf daß is sometimes employed for bag, but this usage is rather obsolete; e.g.-Du follst beinen Bater und beine Mutter ehren, auf bag bu lange lebest im Lande, bas bir ber Berr, bein Gott, giebt, B., konour thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

§ 381. A purpose is frequently expressed by the supine, often preceded by the preposition um, 'for,' which is placed at the head of the clause stating the purpose, whilst the supine is placed at the end. This construction is chiefly made use of, when the subject is the same in the principal and dependent clauses. Examples:—Id formure, Ubschieb zu nehmen, I come to take leave. Wie oft hast bu mit ben Stunden des Schlaßgedarbt, um sie der Weisheit zu schen en? Engel, how often hast thou deprived thyself of the hours of sleep, in order to give them to wisdom? Warum fommt er nicht, um meinen legten Segen zu empfangen? Sch., why does he not come to receive my last blessing?

§ 382. Among the adverbial sentences which express causal relations, there are also comprised hypothetical sentences—that is, sentences expressing a condition—and the concessive sentences—that is, sentences implying a concession or granting anything. The former indicate the relation of the possible ground, the latter that of the adversative ground. (§ 378, 4 and 5.)

Hypothetical sentences are generally introduced by the conjunction wenn, 'if,' sometimes by so, falls, wo, wosern, 'in case.' When the hypothetical clause precedes the principal one, the latter is generally put in the inverted form, and often commences with the adverb so, which may be rendered in English by 'then.' For example:—Wenn ein Ming bricht, so reist die ganze Kette, if one link breaks, (then) the whole chain breaks. Falls er did, fragt, so sprinc die Wahrheit, in case he ask thee, say the truth. Hypothetical clauses also very frequently assume the inverted form, the conjunction being dropped; as—Sätt' ich Schwingen, hätt' ich Flügel, nach den Sügeln zög' ich hin, Sch., had I pinions, had I wings, I should fly to those hills.

Note.

A condition is sometimes expressed by an imperative clause, if its realisation involves the certainty of the inference. The inference, in such cases, is introduced by so or und. For example:—Salte meine Gebote, so with the leben, B., keep my commandments and live. Set im Beste, und bu woshist im Recht, be in possession, and thou art in the right. A concessive clause also is sometimes turned into an imperative one for a similar reason; e.g.—Sage was bu wills, bu faunth es both nicht anders, say what thou choosest, yet thou canst not help it.

§ 383. Concessive sentences are introduced by one of the conjunctions, obgleich, obschon, obwohs, ob auch, wenn gleich, wenn schon, wenn auch, wiewohs, all meaning 'although;' or ungeachtet, notwithstanding; wite ... auch, so ... auch, however. When the principal clause follows the dependent one containing the concession, the former commonly begins with so, and in prose generally assumes the inverted form, one of the adverbs both, bennoth, gleichwohs, yet, still, being inserted. For example:—Dbgleich das Wetter ungunstig war, so resister both at, although the weather was unfavourable, he still set out. Obschon er noch sehr jung ist, so hat er doch viel Ersahrung gehabt, although he is very young, yet he has had much experience.

Those concessive conjunctions which are compounded with ob or menn, often occur in such a form that the second member (gleich, schon, wohl, auch) is separated from the first and placed after the subject, or even after the object of the clause; e. g.—Ob das Wetter gleich ungünstig war, so reiste er doch ab, although the weather was unsavourable, yet he set out. Wenn es dir gleich unangenehm ist, so muß ich dich dennoch tadeln, though it de unpleasant to thee, yet I must blame thee.

Frequently the first part of the conjunction (vb, menn) is dropped, and the second part (gleich, schon, wohl, auch) is inserted as before, the clause assuming an inverted form; e.g.—Hat uns auch der Mai verlassen, Jugend ist im Winter Mai, Platen, although May has left us, youth is May even in winter.

In poetry, ob by itself is used in a concessive sense, the second member being entirely suppressed; e.g.—ob und ber Scre, ob und die Berge scheiden, Sch., though the lake, though the mountains separate us.

When the concession is a merely assumed one, involving the contrary, it is sometimes expressed by the mere inversion of the sentence, the verb being in the conditional mood; e.g.—Und fam' die Höller in die Schransen, mir soll der Muth nicht weichen und nicht wansen, Sch., and even though hell itself entered the lists, my courage shall not yield nor falter.

The two members of the conjunctions wie...auch and so...auch are always separated; e.g.—Wie weit er auch spähet und blicket, Sch., however far he spies and looks. Sometimes the first member alone occurs—So. allgewaltig Elizabeth war, so würde sie gleichwohl nicht gewagt haben, &c., Rotteck, powerful as Elizabeth was, yet she would not have dared, &c. Ihr mußtet euch, so schwer sie war, der Buße schweigend fügen, Sch., you ought to have submitted to the punishment, however heavy it was.

Note

Interrogative concessive sentences are constructed in the same manner as those beginning with with a court, or form auch. For example:—Berer auch sei, ich fürchte ihn nicht, whoever he is, I do not fear him. Backs auch sei, bein Leben sich ich tir, Sch., whatever it be, I guarantee your life.
